Garrett Leads Blanton As Count Nears Finish, Faces Run-Off Aug. 22

Judge Polls 23,864 to Opponent's 19,103 in 17th District.

Maverick Winning After Hard Battle

By Edward T. Folliard.

Representative Thomas Lindsay Blanton, of Texas, known as a "czar" where District of Columbia matters are concerned in Congress, yesterday emerged second in an election fight that may finish his political career. He cannot be counted out yet, however, as the battle has another round to go.

Running in the Saturday primary for re-election in the Seventeenth Texas District, the leather-lunged member from Abilene had two opponents—Judge Clyde L. Garrett and Fred C. Jaye.

With virtually all returns in from the district, the vote was:

Garrett, 23,864.
Blanton, 19,103.
Jaye, 6,792.

Under the Texas law, a candidate must have a majority of the total vote to win. Since the combined vote of Blanton and Jaye was more than that of Judge Garrett there now must be a "run-off" election. This will take place August 22, and will be between Garrett and Blanton.

Victory in this Democratic run-off will be tantamount to election in November, inasmuch as the Republican organization in the district is more or less a joke.

Interest High Here.

Next to the Presidential election and possibly the re-election fight of Representative Marion Zioncheck, no political contest this year holds such interest for the District of Columbia as that involving Blanton.

The "fiery Texan," as Blanton likes to be called, has wielded a tremendous influence on District of Columbia affairs since he first came to Congress in 1918. That he has been able to enforce his will to such an extent has been due to two things—his own deep interest in the city and the lack of interest on the part of most other members of Congress, who are charged by the Constitution to legislate for this stateless city.

Sometimes Blanton's interest has carried him into fields never trod before by a member of Congress.

Thus, just before the end of the last session, he sent out a questionnaire to all District school teachers, asking them their beliefs as to communism and religion.

Storm of Disapproval.

This questionnaire was in connection with Blanton's "Red rider," a proviso he tacked to the District appropriation bill to prohibit even so much as an explanation of communism. There was a difference of opinion among District residents as to the wisdom of this rider. But when Blanton sent out his questionnaire inquiring into the religious beliefs of teachers, a storm of disapproval broke around his head.

Blanton's record on Capitol Hill has been crowded with incongruities and contradictions.

He has the reputation of being a fighter, not only in debate but with his fists. How he got his pugilistic reputation is something of a mystery, for there is no record of his having actually used his fists. He has "talked fight" many times, but always has emerged from such situations without an actual physical clash.

When Blanton first ran for Congress, his opponent called him a name which, in Texas, must be accompanied by a smile. Tom had affidavits drawn up and used his opponent's profanity as a campaign issue. He won.

Blanton Faints.

A few years later Blanton inserted obscene language in the Congressional Record. It almost ended his political career right there. A resolution was offered to expel him, and it failed of adoption by only eight votes. Blanton fainted.

In the end, the House voted to censure him. The censure was administered by Speaker Gillette in a scalding speech from the dais.

Blanton was a pioneer advocate

Fear of Next War Blasts Hopes Of European Youth for Peace

Happiness Dispelled by Grim Realities of Impending Conflict; 'You're Lucky to Be American,' U. S. Writer Is Told.

(Editor's note: Is Europe drifting toward general war? In an effort to answer this question the United Press asked its correspondents in key points in Europe to prepare a series of dispatches, of which the following is the first. The second dispatch, from Paris, will appear tomorrow.)

By Wallace Carroll.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Geneva, July 26.—Fear of war broods over Europe these midsummer days like an ominous hush heralding a violent storm.

"You are lucky to be an American," a young Austrian said last night while strolling on the green shores of Lake Geneva. "In a few years I and all my friends will be killed in war."

His statement reflected the thoughts and fears of millions of young Britons, Frenchmen, Belgians, Poles, Slavs, Albanians, Russians, Italians and Germans.

The hopes of the younger generation, which so ardently desires peace, are being dimmed by the grim prospect of death on the battlefield. This represents a profound change in the psychology of Europe.

Only two years ago, when the Disarmament Conference was already in its death agony, mental peace still prevailed. Sixty nations were trying to reduce the world's armaments to insure peace. Now, hope of peace is almost abandoned. Every nation is arming feverishly in preparation for the coming struggle. A definite war consciousness prevails everywhere.

Two dictatorships, in Germany and Italy, whose leaders have openly glorified war, are playing the music to which Europe is dancing.

The prestige of the two great western democracies, great Britain and France, has fallen lower than at any time since 1918. Britain,

Wires Illinois G.O.P. Club; Rests Over Week-end Before Parleys.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., July 26.—Gov. Alf M. Landon said today the Nation's young men and women express "the spirit of America that is rallying in this campaign for preservation of the glorious heritage of America."

This message was telegraphed by the Presidential candidate to the Illinois convention of Young Republicans. It was addressed to Thomas J. Downs, president of the group rallying at Peoria.

The Governor said jobs are inherent in progress, and added:

"Our problems embrace the very purpose of America. To solve them calls for sturdy souls and keen intellect and above all for the initiative and courage of American youth."

Spends Week-End Quietly.

The week-end break between the busy hours climaxed by the notification ceremonies Thursday night and a schedule of conferences ahead on economic and political problems was spent quietly by Landon in the Kansas executive mansion. Ahead lay the task of drafting three campaign speeches for late-August delivery at West Middlesex, Pa., and Chautauqua and Buffalo, N. Y.

Vandenberg to Be Guest.

Senator Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan, will be Landon's luncheon guest Tuesday.

The text of Landon's telegram to the Illinois Young Republicans follows:

"The young men and women of the Nation express in their spirit, in their outlook on the future and in their inherent vitality the spirit of America that is rallying in this campaign for preservation of the glorious heritage of America.

"As I said in my speech of acceptance, 'American initiative is not a commodity to be delivered in

Repudiate Debt If Lemke Loses, Coughlin Urges

'Only Way Out,' Priest Tells Farmers in Talk in North Dakota.

By the Associated Press.

Hankinson, N. Dak., July 26.—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin called today for a repudiation of farm debts if Representative Lemke, North Dakota is not elected President on the Union Party ticket.

Terming that course as "the only way out," the Detroit radio priest told an audience at Lemke's homecoming celebration here that if the North Dakotan were not installed in the White House "there is only one thing to do—repudiate your debts and if anybody tries to enforce them, repudiate them also."

Father Coughlin, addressing a crowd estimated by sponsors of the homecoming picnic at several thousand, referred to Lemke as the next President-elect of the United States and declared the Representative's program was in accord with the 16 principles of the National Union for Social Justice.

"There are two propositions which need to be considered for the Northwest," he asserted. "One is to save it from the hands of the bankers and insurance companies, the other to save it from drought."

Assails Roosevelt, Landon.

The radio priest, here on behalf of Lemke's candidacy, made only passing reference to President Roosevelt, although directing numerous thrusts at the New Deal. He referred to the President as "a genial, a promising young man," and of Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, Republican Presidential nominee, said he was "a lovely gentleman."

The picnic gathering marked the opening of Lemke's campaign in this State. The candidate and his colleague, Usher L. Burdick, chairman of the Union Party National Committee, shared the platform with the priest.

The crowd, in a festival arranged to carry through most of the day, waited hours under a hot sun for Father Coughlin and Lemke to arrive from Fargo.

"Must Restore Rights."

Father Coughlin devoted much of his address to the subject of money, expounding his theory of currency issuance.

"Before this economic disaster can be rectified," he said, "we must re-

Guard Rescued From Lynching At Pickets' Hands in Milk War

By the Associated Press.

Brookhaven, Miss., July 26.—A milk truck guard was rescued from pickets who had a rope around his neck today when violence marked the efforts of farmers to keep milk from entering New Orleans.

Peter Rayburn, 30, of Kentwood, La., driver of a milk truck, suffered a fracture of the skull when he was struck on the head with a gun after shots were fired at him and he attempted to pass the blockade near here.

Felix Turnbow, of Brookhaven, former University of Missouri football player, a guard on the truck, was dragged to the road, where pickets tied a rope around his neck.

Officers and deputized citizens rescued Turnbow. Sheriff J. Walter Smith placed 17 pickets, most of them reported to be from Kentwood, La., under arrest. They were charged with assault and battery with intent to kill.

Milk farmers of Louisiana parishes above New Orleans and Mississippi counties near the State line ordered the strike last Friday night in an effort to force pasteurizers to pay them about 1 cent a quart more for milk.

Sheriff Smith said Rayburn was attempting to take milk from a creamery at Wesson into Louisiana. His truck was fired on as four cars blocked the road. Six hundred gallons of milk were dumped out. Milk cargoes were reported dumped elsewhere in Louisiana and Mississippi, and 3,000 gallons were turned into the gutter at Kentwood.

France Takes Precautions to Protect Monarch; 240 Acres Surrounding Edifice at Site of Battle Presented to Dominion.

By the Associated Press.

Vimy, France, July 26.—King Edward of England, standing bareheaded before a silent throng of pilgrims, unveiled a gleaming World War monument atop Vimy Ridge today as a symbol of British-Canadian-French friendship and peace.

Extreme precautions were taken to protect the King, who less than two weeks ago rode into range of the loaded pistol of a discontented Briton.

Troops were lined up around the station when his train arrived, and no photographs were permitted. But as soon as he reached the monument, the King escaped his bodyguard and mingled among the pilgrims.

The anxious escort almost broke into a run trying to keep up with the monarch as he spoke and shook hands among the crowds, gathered to honor 64,000 Canadian World War dead.

"In dedicating this monument to our comrades who fell during the World War" he said, "we invoke the splendor of their sacrifice and the conservation of our affection for them, rather than of the gunfire which battered this hill 20 years ago."

Miss Ellen Fitz Pendleton Was Head of College for 25 Years.

By the United Press.

Newton, Mass., July 27.—Miss Ellen Fitz Pendleton, for 25 years president of Wellesley College before her retirement in June, died at the home of a niece here today after a brief illness. She would have been 72 August 7.

Death was attributed to a paralytic stroke suffered ten days ago and believed induced by overwork while preparing the president's house at Wellesley for occupancy by her successor, Miss Mildred Helen McAfee, 36, dean of women at Oberlin College.

Dr. Pendleton was the sixth president of Wellesley. She leaves a brother, James Pendleton, of Westerly, R. I., and a sister, Mrs. B. D. Hahn, of South Carolina.

Funeral Tomorrow.

Funeral services will be held at the Wellesley College Chapel Tuesday afternoon, with Dr. Henry Knox Sherrill, Episcopal Bishop of Eastern Massachusetts, and Dr. Boyington Merrill, of West Newton Congregational Church, officiating. Both are trustees of the college. Burial will be in Westerly.

College officials announced a memorial service would be held shortly after the opening of the college term.

Miss Pendleton was born at Westerly, R. I., the daughter of Enoch Burrows and Mary Ette (Chapman) Pendleton. Her father was appointed postmaster of Westerly by President Abraham Lincoln.

Wellesley Graduate.

She prepared for college in Westerly's public schools. In 1886 she was graduated from Wellesley College and in 1889-90 studied at Newnham College, Cambridge, England. The next year she was awarded her master's degree at Wellesley.

Miss Pendleton joined the faculty at Wellesley as a mathematics

Crash Kills Two; Five Homes Razed

Ottawa, Kans., July 26.—A man and woman burned to death and five homes were destroyed when an oil truck crashed into a lighting pole in the residential section here today.

The truck burst into flames and blazing oil flowed several blocks down Ottowa's main street. Damage was estimated at from $50,000 to $60,000 by Fire Chief Wallace Rogers.

Joe G. Duree, 25, Topeka, Kans., driver of the truck, and an unidentified woman were the victims.

A strong wind carried the blazing oil and sparks to nearby houses. Two private garages a block from the scene of the crash were destroyed, paint on many homes was

Woman Killed By Truck; Toll In D. C. Now 48

Miss Jessica R. Smith, 60, of Navy Department, Dies in Traffic.

Washington traffic reaped its forty-eighth victim of the year yesterday when a florist's truck struck and fatally injured Miss Jessica Randolph Smith, an employe of the Navy Department and daughter of the designer of the Stars and Bars, flag of the Confederacy. A year ago the traffic death toll was 63.

Miss Smith, about 60 years old, was on her way home from morning services at St. John's Episcpoal Church when she stepped into the path of a truck at Sixteenth and I streets northwest. The driver of the truck, Sidney Jefferson, 36, colored, of 922 Barry place northwest, was ordered to appear at the coroner's inquest.

Ran Into Truck's Path.

Witnesses told Detective Sergt. William J. Livermore that the woman ran from in front of a car in the outside traffic lane into the path of the truck traveling in an inside lane. After striking her, the truck crashed into a tree.

Miss Smith, who lived at the Washington Club, 1701 K street northwest, was taken to Emergency Hospital, where she was pronounced dead upon arrival.

Miss Smith was a daughter of the late Orrin Randolph and Elizabeth Riddick Smith, of old Virginia and North Carolina stock, who lived in Henderson, N. C.

Miss Smith's father designed the Confederate flag and for many years she attended the reunions of the boys in gray as a color bearer. She also was a descendant of Willis Riddick, one of the original members of the Virginia Society of the Cincinnati, and she herself was a member of the Daughters of the Cincinnati.

Member of D. A. R.

Always interested in patriotic and historic societies' activities, Miss Smith was a member of the D. A. R., of the Hilary Herbert Chapter of Daughters of the Confederacy, and of the North Carolina Society of Colonial Dames of America.

She also was a member of the Washington Club and had lived at that organization's clubhouse for several years.

Guard Saves Life Of Janet Gaynor

Los Angeles, July 26 (AP).—Janet Gaynor, film actress, was rescued by a lifeguard from an ocean riptide off Playa Del Rey Beach today.

Richard Daubenspeck, who saved her, said she had been wading with an unidentified male companion when she stepped into a hole. A surging current carried her out. She was unharmed.

Daubenspeck said Miss Gaynor was a better than average swimmer but would have drowned had she not kept her head.

Leftists Send Reinforcements To Defend Passes Near Madrid

12,000 Government Troops Reported Marching to Burgos; Other Recruits Head for Other Rebel Points; 2,000 Reported Slain.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, July 26.—Leftist Spain poured thousands of Loyalist reinforcements into hard-won passes in the Guadarrama Mountains, sworn "tomb of fascism" today, and thrust resolutely forward to beat out civil war on scattered other battlefronts.

(Communications from Medrid were still poor and censorship rigid, but dispatches from the capital to Perpignan, France, said a column of 12,000 government troops was marching north along an open road to Burgos after smashing rebel opposition in the mountain pass of Somosierra.

(This was in direct conflict with rebel headquarters claims at Pampona, which said the Fascist insurgents had won a victory in the Guadarrama Range.)

Armed recruits, some of them women, not only moved into the mountains, where loyal artillery silenced big rebel guns yesterday, but also marched toward Zaragoza, in the north; Seville, in the south, and other rebel hotbeds.

Fighting was reported at a point 53 miles from Zaragoza, and Barcelona dispatches said rival generals were negotiating for the surrender of the rebel garrison in the city.

(The Madrid dispatches reaching Perpignan stated the villages of Cerezode, Abajo and La Cabrera, between Somosierra and Burgos, had been taken without resistance by the Loyalist troops, assault guards and Leftist militia under the Artillery Col. Cuervo y Puig.

(Two other columns were reported marching on Segovia and Avila, and the dispatches said two columns of rebels advancing toward Madrid from Navacerrada had surrendered.

New U. S. Court To Regulate 73 Agencies Urged

American Bar Association Asks Co-ordination of Judicial Functions.

Establishment of a Federal administrative court to take over the judicial functions of 73 Government administrative agencies was recommended yesterday by a committee of the American Bar Association. The recommendation will go before the convention of the association in Boston August 24.

The committee report was accompanied by a study of the delegation of legislative power by Congress, concluding that there are 1,300 instances of the delegation of such power. No recommendations are made in this connection, although it contains a number of conclusions as to what limitations should be observed by Congress.

Urge Life Terms.

The committee recommended that the proposed court should be appointed by the President, with its members serving for life. Its organization would include a trial division and an appellate division. Its decisions would be subject to review by the Supreme Court.

The court would have no executive, inquisitorial or legislative power.

The committee said that while the judicial function under the Constitution is lodged in the judiciary, there are in addition "legislative courts" and "executive courts." Legislative courts, it said, are "an anomalous classification which includes the Court of Claims, the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, the Customs Court, the territorial courts and (partially) the courts of the District of Columbia."

"Conglomeration" of Courts.

Executive courts were described as a "conglomerate" consisting of the 73 Federal administrative agencies.

Among the evils of these courts were listed:

"The combination of judicial with executive or legislative functions.

"The fact that the tenure of office of administrative judges is insecure.

"The lack of effective independent review or judicial control of administrative decisions."

With regard to the first factor, the report pointed out that almost invariably in recent years, when encroachments have been attempted by Congress into the rights of the States under the Constitution or de-

Fascists Claim Victory, Delay Madrid March

By the Associated Press.

With the Rebel Forces at Pamplona, Spain, July 26.—The rebel central war junta claimed a Fascist victory in the mountains of Guadarrama today.

The victory, insurgent officers said, was executed by the advance column of Gen. Emilio Mola's forces.

It also was announced that two Madrid infantry regiments had rebelled, joining Mola's fighters.

The junta, in a proclamation, declared there would be "no reprisals" when the Fascists seize power in Spain.

Await Franco's Advance.

Mola's slow progress toward Madrid was explained by rebel officers as dictated by the necessity of waiting for the southern armies of Gen. Francisco Franco to approach the capital. His main forces now were said to be 90 kilometers (56 miles) from Madrid.

Gen. Miguel Cabalellas, head of the provisional Fascist government in Burgos, reviewed rebel troops today on a flag-bedecked plaza here.

The white-beared old fighter moved up and down the closely drawn ranks of rebel soldiers, militiamen and Red Cross nurses, all at rigid attention, indicative of the iron discipline of Spain's Fascist provinces.

Fascists Confident.

Pamplona and Navarre were in holiday mood, with Fascist confidence apparent everywhere. The question was not "will we win?" but when will we be in Madrid?"

Some Fascist leaders answered "in three days." Others thought it might take a month.

Of the Loyalists, one Fascist leader said: "They call themselves Spaniards, those others. They will no longer have the right to that title when we are finished."

Some officers set the time at which Madrid might be expected to be "starved out" at a month.

"Our positions around the capital are strong," said one insurgent leader. 'We don't intend to rush in on Madrid, but to await its fall.

"A food shortage will soon be felt. When the famine comes, it will be easy to force Madrid to capitulate.

"The government has no regular troops at its disposal."

Queen Mary Sets Speed Mark; Greeters' Plane Crash Kills One

By the Associated Press.

New York (Monday), July 27.—The British liner Queen Mary anchored off Ambrose Light at 12:15 a. m. (Eastern standard time) today, completing a transatlantic passage that apparently broke all existing steamship speed records. The Queen Mary's owners, however, withheld making official claim to the blue ribbon pending hearing directly from her master.

Tragedy marred the record voyage earlier, however, when a seaplane, carrying 10 persons, mostly newspapermen, crashed into the ocean five miles east of Nantucket lightship. The plane had roared out of Boston to greet the liner. One of its passengers was killed.

Edwin T. Ramsdell, Boston Post photographer, died from the effect of injuries suffered in the crash several hours after the ten had been taken from the wreckage by a lifeboat from the Exermont, a steamship nearby. The plane was piloted by Capt. William Wincapaw, veteran New England flier.

The Queen Mary, after relaying the Exermont's report of the accident to the Salem Coast Guard Station, sent radio instructions for treatment of Ramsdell, but despite these efforts he died aboard the rescue ship.

The great liner had been reported off the light at 11:35 p. m., E. S. T. Regardless of whether her time was to be computed officially from the time she reached the light, or from the moment she anchored there, it appeared she had won the record.

In the first event, her time, computed unofficially, would be 4 days 9 hours and 49 minutes. Should the 12:15 a. m. time be used, the time would be 4 days 10 hours and 29 minutes.

The record had been held by the French Line's Normandie, with a crossing of 4 days 11 hours and 42 minutes.

The Spanish Revolt.

Officials of the American "summer embassy" at San Sebastian fled yesterday aboard the Coast Guard cutter Cayuga, taking embassy records with them. They reported a heavy battle outside the city. Most Americans, except 161 at Madrid, and a few at Malaga and Barcelona, have left Spain.

The Spanish government sent forces, including women, to the mountain passes outside the capital, where Leftists claim, 2,000 rebels have been slain.

At rebel headquarters at Pamplona leaders asserted they would starve out Madrid in a month, but would not assault the capital.

Fighting was reported in the Zaragoza region as two Loyalist columns marched there from Barcelona. Refugees at Gibraltar told of mass killings and a "rule of savagery" at Malaga, in the south, now held by the rebels. Insurgents' barracks near San Sebastain were shelled for three hours by government artillerymen.

U. S. Staff Flees.

By Felix Bruner.

With a heavy battle reported outside the city, officials of the United States Embassy at San Sebastian fled the city yesterday, taking embassy records with them.

A message from Claude G. Bowers, American Ambassador, said the embassy was being moved to Fuentarrabia, 5 miles down the coast "because of the impossible conditions obtaining in San Sebastian." The Bowers message refuted earlier reports that he and his family had fled to France.

Hallett Johnson, counselor of the American Embassy, cabled the State Department that he and the staff had left on the Coast Guard cutter Cayuga and that there were no Americans remaining in the city.

Removal Is Planned.

An attempt to remove 161 Americans stranded in Madrid is being planned, according to a message from Eric C. Wendelin, third secretary, in charge there. He said an attempt will be made to remove the Americans by train to Valencia, if the Spanish government will supply troops to guard the train.

Wendelin indicated the government is taking steps to protect Americans. He said the government had ordered that no person should be arrested if sufficiently identified by passport, and that police and not militia should patrol the streets.

He reported there was bitter fighting on the other side of the mountains and that he believed no progress had been made by the rebels.

Public Apology Made.

William W. Corcoran, the American consul at Vigo, reported to the State Department that as a result of a public insult offered him by uniformed armed Fascists, the military authorities at Vigo have, as a result of a vigorous protest, broadcast a public apology.

The Fascists and certain of the military, Corcoran added, regard representatives of republics as enemies in the same class as communist extremists. He added the situation at Vigo was tense, but that he believed military authorities were able to protect American citizens.

It is expected that virtually all Americans, except 161 stranded in the embassy at Madrid, will have left Spain within the next 24-hours. Meanwhile, an urgent appeal came from Barcelona that the cruiser Quincy be sent as soon as possible to take off Americans. It was reported that all communications were threatened. The Quincy arrived at Gibraltar yesterday and is expected to proceed immediately to Malaga and Barcelona.

Consul Ready to Leave.

A large number of Americans already have been evacuated from the latter city by the merchant steamer Exeter. It is believed Consul Lynn W. Franklin and his

Pope's Adviser Says Coughlin Uproar Is Joke

Pizzardo Quoted as Laying Antagonism to Priest to Political Aims.

By the United Press.

Vatican City, July 26.—Bishop Michael J. Gallagher, of Detroit, today discussed the political activities of Father Charles E. Coughlin, Michigan radio priest, with Mgr. Giuseppe Pizzardo, Pope Pius' closest political adviser.

Upon leaving the Vatican, Bishop Gallagher said:

"Mgr. Pizzardo told me he had never heard of Father Coughlin until the recent fuss which brought his name and fame across the Atlantic.

"Rome holds me responsible for Father Coughlin's activities.

Agree on Misunderstanding.

"I explained to Mgr. Pizzardo, and we agreed, that the misunderstanding arises from the fact that many are not acquainted with canon law.

"Actually, Mgr. Pizzardo thinks the uproar regarding Father Coughlin represents a good joke, sponsored solely for political purposes."

Cites "High Value."

Bishop Gallagher's visit to Mgr. Pizzardo, chief executor of the pontiff's policies through the "Catholic Action" Association, was described as a "courtesy call." He was accompanied by Bishop Schrembs, of Cleveland.

The bishop reiterated that he considers Father Coughlin's political speeches within the rights of a priest and the church and has announced that he would defend him before the Holy See if the matter comes up for discussion.

"Although sometimes there have been excesses or intemperances in Father Coughlin's speeches, they cannot diminish the high value of the Detroit priest's activities for the welfare of the people in accordance with the rules of the mother church," he said.

Bishop Gallagher arrived at Naples yesterday aboard the liner Rex from New York.

He indicated he is in sympathy with Father Coughlin's criticism of President Roosevelt's financial and industrial policies. He said the radio priest's speeches were in accordance with the famous labor encyclicals of Leo XIII and Pius XI.

store to the Congress its constitutional right which has been unconstitutional ever since a law was passed permitting private persons to create money and the right to issue money.

"You must demand that the Government restore to Congress the right to coin money and demand that it be taken away from the private hands of Wall Street.

"The right to coin money must be restored to Congress for the welfare of the people and not for the welfare of Rothschilds. Mr. Roosevelt, a genial man, a promising young man, by the way, promised that this would be restored to the American people. He has not done it. In March, 1933, he promised to drive money changers from the temple. Instead, he has handed it over to them and give them a new key for it, a key fashioned in the benign fashion of the double cross."

Lemke, following Coughlin, declared "I am a candidate because there is no other candidate for the common people."

"Reactionary Democrats and reactionary Republicans," he said, "belong to the same breed of cats, in fact, they are the same cat. I am going to bring the Presidency of the American people back to the American people where it belongs."

pound packages through a governmental bureau.'

"The history of mankind shows that progress is impossible except when men and women are free to give and to express the best that is within them. It is because America is free and the opportunity for American initiative is open to all that we have built here a civilization with the highest standards of living in the world.

"I also said in my speech of acceptance that the record shows that in 1933 the primary need was jobs for the unemployed and that the record shows also that the primary need today is jobs for the unemployed. Jobs are inherent in progress.

"Our problems embrace the very purpose of America. To solve them calls for sturdy souls and keen intellect and above all for the initiative and courage of American youth."

Thomas Queries Landon.

New York, July 26 (AP).—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, made public here today a letter he had written to Gov. Alf. M. Landon, Republican candidate, asking Landon to state explicitly his position regarding attempts to organize workers in the steel industry and Southern share-croppers.

The letter, dated July 24, said that Landon's views on the rights of labor, as stated in his acceptance speech, were "for the most part" explicit. It asked clarification of the statement that employes are to be "free from interference from any source."

Thomas said employers' organizations have used this phrase to mean a denial of the right of a labor union actively to promote the organization of an unorganized factory or industry.

"Is this," he asked, "the interpretation to be given to your words? Specifically, where do you stand on the present drive to organize the steel industry or on the effort of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union to organize the share-croppers and field workers?"

Thomas said these efforts had been denounced in some quarters as "outside interference" and asks "Is that your position?"

Akerson Aids Landon.

New York, July 26 (AP).—The Republican National Committee announced today Representative Joseph W. Martin, of Massachusetts, Eastern campaign director, had selected George Akerson, a White House secretary in the Hoover Administration, as his personal contact man.

Optimism Among Republicans at New High; Democrat Leaders Becoming Rattled.

By Franklyn Waltman

CHICAGO, July 26.—Optimism over the outcome of this year's Presidential contest is more general and has reached a higher level among the Republican leaders and strategists at the party's headquarters here than at any time since the advent of the New Deal on the American political scene.

WALTMAN.

There are some at Republican headquarters who are doubtful whether Gov. Alf M. Landon in the three months to election day can overcome the great obstacles in his path—a Republican machine demoralized for three years and an opponent raising a class appeal and backed by an Administration with billions of dollars to spend between now and November.

But the majority of those on duty at Republican headquarters have become convinced that they can win, despite these obstacles. Not more than half of them thought so two months ago. Then they were disheartened and lacked enthusiasm for the task before them. Now they are hopeful and zealously striving to make good on the chance that has come to them.

Perhaps the chief reason for this change of attitude is the revelation that the trend favors Gov. Landon. Since last January he has steadily gained ground. His rapid and amazing rise as the choice of his party was evidence that he had a drawing power within his party. Since his nomination he has forged steadily ahead.

It is notable that not a single Republican of any prominence has given any signs of bolting his party since the selection of the Kansan. Senator William E. Borah weekly develops more enthusiasm for his party's standard bearer. None of the Republican progressive bloc that had not boarded the Roosevelt bandwagon several years ago has expressed any dissatisfaction with Gov. Landon.

On the other hand, virtually a parade of prominent Democrats has started from their party to the Landon door. According to reports of Landon scouts to the Republican headquarters, many more Democrats than those already mentioned will be found supporting the Republican nominee when November arrives. Their exodus from their party may well assume the proportions of the Democratic revolt of 1896.

These things have cheered up the headquarters strategists. Moreover, some of the most difficult party organization impasses are lending themselves to solutions. These developments along with the early results of informal polls have shown the realists among the Republicans that they can win if the trend remains in their direction and moves sufficiently fast to reach full blossom by election day.

Perhaps the best evidence to these Republican leaders that they are making progress are indications that the New Deal camp is getting rattled. One of President Roosevelt's greatest assets has been his calmness, growing out of a sureness of touch and a confidence in prognostication and anticipating future developments. In political matters he has seemed to know exactly what he was doing and has done the right thing at the right time.

But the President seems to be losing this sureness of touch. Instead of leading the way and forcing his adversaries to wonder what he will do next, he apparently has commenced to worry over what Gov. Landon will do next. This was aptly illustrated by the President's executive order placing first, second and third class postmasters under the civil service.

Although commendable from the viewpoint of good government, this Presidential action as a political maneuver proved to be ludicrous. For three years the President apparently has been satisfied and contented with the "political spoils" system in the Postoffice Department. Democratic contentions that the House Republicans blocked legislation designed to end the spoils system is humorous. If Mr. Roosevelt really wanted such legislation he could have obtained it. He got everything else he wished without a great deal of trouble.

But even if it is assumed that the President was thwarted by Capitol Hill Republicans in this endeavor, he could have issued last week's executive order many months ago—several years ago. The reason he issued the order last week instead of two or three years ago—before most of the postmasters were appointed—was purely political. He realized Gov. Landon had a sound issue against him in the spoils issue. So he entered what the lawyers call a "plea of confession and avoidance"—that is, he pleaded guilty to the Landon "spoils system" charge and undertook to end the wrongdoing.

The fact that this executive order was issued on the eve of the Landon acceptance speech is a pretty good indication of how the Roosevelt mind is working—and it is evidence that panic is beginning to dominate that mind. Here was Mr. Roosevelt in the midst of a well-deserved vacation trip, in a schooner off the Atlantic Coast, laying aside his fishing rod to write out an executive order—not to meet an emergency—but to thwart his opponent in an anticipated attack.

Because Gov. Landon had made the Roosevelt "spoils" system a particular point of attack in his telegram to the Cleveland convention on the Republican platform, the President obviously assumed the Republican nominee would follow up that attack in his acceptance speech. Cleverly he wished to anticipate that attack and throw his rival into confusion and consternation at the last minute. He did not give the order out early in the week, but waited until the very eve of the acceptance speech—after advance copies of that document had had been printed—to release his executive order.

Instead of throwing Gov. Landon and the Republicans into consternation, he caused raucous laughter among them. Gov. Landon, having dealt with the question in his telegram to the convention and not wishing to duplicate what he had already said, did not have a single line in his acceptance speech about the civil service or "spoils system." Hence there was no need to make any embarrassing changes. Mr. Roosevelt had been too clever.

This incident more than anything else indicates that neither the President nor the Democratic strategists have yet correctly sized up Gov. Landon. They still lack the feel of the man. They don't see him in his true light. And, in the parlance of the baseball diamond, "if you can't see them, you can't hit them."

WPA Assailed By Candidates In Oklahoma

Marland, Lee Both Claim Misuse of Agencies; Inquiry Continues.

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, Okla., July 26.—Supporters of rival New Deal candidates for Senator exchanged charges of improper activity by WPA workers and State employes today as the campaign for Tuesday's Oklahoma Democratic run-off primary drew to a close.

Claims of misuse of Federal agencies were renewed in the camps of both Representative Josh Lee and Gov. E. W. Marland as WPA officials in Washington announced they would continue an investigation into WPA political activity that already has resulted in dismissal of seven employes.

Joseph R. Cannon resigned yesterday as WPA investigator for Oklahoma and Texas, criticizing W. S. Key, State WPA director, for not "stepping down" while the inquiry leading to the dismissals was under way. He said he was resigning because he could "no longer refrain from commenting on political activities of certain individuals in this State who have violated the obligation of their positions."

Supports Key.

Aubrey Williams, assistant national director who announced the dismissals, said he was confident Key had done his best to prevent political activities among the workers.

The seven dismissed were alleged to have been active for Lee.

Lee, who spoke in Tulsa last night, said he may have "something to say" after a conference with supporters here.

Speaking in Muskogee last week, Lee contended "this investigation has all the earmarks of a Governor-controlled inquiry, timed to break just before the second primary election," and Lee's secretary, George McElroy, said Lee would insist on an inquiry into methods used in the investigation.

"We are gathering all the evidence we can to show this was a one-sided investigation inspired by Gov. Marland," said McElroy.

"Ruthless Methods."

The Lee camp charged Marland forces had employed "ruthless methods in driving State employes to campaign for the Governor."

At Marland headquarters Howard B. Drake, manager, praised Williams' action in dismissing the seven and said he believed WPA headquarters was "sincere in wanting those on the WPA rolls to feel free to vote as they please."

Gomer Smith, defeated candidate for Senator and national vice president of the Townsend Old Age Pension Clubs, prepared to speak in a State-wide hookup for Marland's candidacy, indorsed after the first primary by the State Townsend organization.

Karpis Is Given Ultimatum by U. S.

St. Paul, Minn., July 26 (AP).—The Federal Government, fresh from another victory in the William Hamm, jr., kidnaping case, tonight gave Alvin Karpis, last "public enemy No. 1," the choice of pleading guilty or facing trial for the abduction of Edward G. Bremer. U. S. District Attorney George F. Sullivan issued the ultimatum.

The gangster already faced a possible life sentence in the Hamm kidnap conspiracy, which a jury wiped off the books last night by convicting John (Jack) Peifer, St. Paul night club operator.

Peifer was found guilty on charges of helping Karpis and five others plot the "snatching" of Hamm, wealthy St. Paul brewer, for $100,000 ransom.

T. E. Pearson, 56, Farmer, Kills Self

Thomas E. Pearson, 56, Fairfax County farmer, shot and killed himself yesterday morning in a shed on his farm near Dranesville, Va. He fired a shotgun charge into his heart.

Pearson rose before the rest of the household and went to the shed, some distance from the house. Members of his family, alarmed at his absence, began a search and discovered his body. They said he had been in poor health for some time.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Anna E. Pearson, and two daughters, Dorothy E and Mary Ellen Pearson. Funeral arrangements still are incomplete.

tutor following her graduation in 1886. Two years later she was appointed an instructor and served until 1897, when she became secretary of the college. In 1901 she was named dean and associate professor of mathematics.

On October 19, 1911, she was named president, succeeding Caroline Hazard, of Peace Dale, R. I.

During her administration, Miss Pendleton rebuilt Wellesly College after fire destroyed College Hall, the principal building, in 1914. Despite the demands of new construction and the depression, the permanent endowment fund was increased $7,000,000 during her incumbency.

She was a member of Wellesley Chapter Phi Beta Kappa, senator of the United Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, member of the college entrance board, the Naples Table Association, the Rhode Island Society for College Education of Women, and the American Academy of Political and Social Science, and a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Chile Earthquake Is Recorded Here

A strong earthquake, estimated off the coast of Chile, 4,400 miles away, was recorded early yesterday morning at Georgetown University.

The Rev. Frederick W. Sohon, head of the seismograph department, said the beginning of the quake was timed at 2:47:22 a .m., Eastern standard time. The maximum intensity was at 3:15 o'clock, and the end at 6 a. m., he said.

Festival Closes Tonight.

The annual festival of Holy Rosary parish, which opened last week in the rear garden of the church, Third and F streets northwest, will close tonight. A new feature of the entertainment will be the popular Bonanno Brothers quartet rendering typical Neapolitan serenades, while Kathleen Piazza, a professional dancer, will give an exhibition of Italian folk dances.

1 Hurt in German Riot.

Milwaukee, July 26 (AP).—A man was injured and two others were arrested in a riot at the German Day picnic in Washington Park here today. A score of policemen broke up the melee, which authorities said involved about 75 persons, but not until the Nazi Swastika had been torn from its mast.

56 Saved in Fire.

Balairmore, Alberta, July 26 (AP).—Trapped since late Thursday by a forest fire in Kootenay Pass, 56 men emerged safely from the fire zone today, it was reported tonight.

Roosevelt Ends Cruise Today At Campobello

Will Sail 20-Mile Leg to Island to Join Mother and First Lady.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard Schooner Liberty, Seal Cove at Grand Manan Island, N. B., July 26.—With 12 days of sailing in North Atlantic waters behind him, President Roosevelt made ready today for the last 20-mile leg of his vacation cruise from this wind lashed harbor to Campobello Island.

The departure for his mother's summer home on the little New Brunswick Isle off Eastport, Me., will be taken some time tomorrow. It is expected to require about five hours.

The President's mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, and the First Lady, are awaiting him at Campobello.

The President left his 56-foot schooner an hour after breakfast this morning and boarded the U. S. S. Potomac from a launch. Two Navy seaplanes from Bar Harbor, Me., had just arrived with Government mail. He chose the comfort of the larger vessel to dispatch the most urgent accumulated White House business.

Two of the Chief Executive's guests, Hall Roosevelt, of Detroit, his wife's brother, and Commodore A. B. Randall, of the United States Lines, left the vacation party on one of the planes.

Randall had made the entire trip, beginning at Pulpit Harbor, Me., July 14. Hall Roosevelt joined the President at Shelburne, eastern Nova Scotia, a week ago.

Jobs Given 13,000 In CCC During June

By the Associated Press.

A report that nearly 13,000 members of the Civilian Conservation Corps left to accept private jobs during June was made public yesterday by Robert Fechner, director, with the comment that this was largely attributable to "a general improvement in business conditions."

Fechner, who asserted the practical type of education given the enrollees also was responsible, said the 12,995 discharged last month was the largest group since the corps was reduced to a maximum of 350,000. Total discharges during the 12 months ended June 30 were 145,531, a monthly average of more than 12,000.

"I believe," he added, "that the increased emphasis which has been placed in recent months upon job training instruction in the CCC camps also has opened the way for many enrollees to find outside employment."

Black Legion Men To Face Accuser

Detroit, July 26 (AP).—Police in suburban Ecorse said tonight that Edward Armour, 33, colored, would view tomorrow two men accused by Dayton Dean of shooting Armour as a Black Legion "prank."

Dean, confessed Black Legion executioner of Charles A. Poole, told Ecorse police yesterday that Harvey Davis, Black Legion "colonel," shot Armour in February, 1935, after Davis, Charles Rouse and Dean had cruised the streets of Ecorse in a futile search for Clarence Oliver, colored political worker.

Ecorse police said a bullet taken from Armour's back was fired from a pistol seized when Davis was arrested for the Poole slaying.

Davis, Rouse and three fellow defendants will be given a court examintaion Tuesday on a murder charge in connection with the slaying of Silas Coleman, colored, near Pinckney, Mich., in May, 1935. Dean said Coleman was killed for the entertainment of a Black Legion drinking party.

Banishing Household Drudgery

with the aid of Instalment Buying

In no country in the world are women so free from household drudgery as in America; in no other country are there so many electric household appliances. And nowhere else is instalment financing so widely used.

Instalment buying grew up in America. First, it helped to build up the great automobile industry; later, it put modern household conveniences within the reach of modest incomes.

Exit "Blue Monday"

Not so many years ago the homemaker who wanted an electric washer had to pay about $175 cash. Today, "Blue Monday" is banished with a greatly improved machine for less than half that cost—whether it is bought for cash or by monthly instalments.

When inventive genius, mass production and instalment selling join forces, sales go up—prices come down. Products improve, payrolls swell and the lives of millions are made richer.

For more than 28 years, C. I. T. has served manufacturers and dealers as well as consumers. Today, just as the C. I. T. Budget Plan makes the washing machine an everyday laborsaving device in thousands of homes, so it is placing automobiles, refrigerators, modern heating equipment and other household conveniences at the disposal of responsible families in all walks of life.

Send for this Free Booklet today

"Buying out of Income" explains why it is to your advantage to ask for C. I. T. when purchasing on the instalment plan. It tells how thoughtful families are enjoying greater home comforts by using the C. I. T. Budget Plan. Write for your free copy to C. I. T. Corporation, 1 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y., Dept. N.

Blanton Runs Behind

of votes for women. He was a hero of the suffragettes. He never passed up a chance to laud the sex.

And yet in the campaign of 1930 he wrote things and said things that deepened the unhappiness of a widow. This was Mrs. R. Q. Lee.

In 1928 Blanton retired from the House to run for the Senate. His friend, R. Q. Lee, ran for the House seat and was elected. In the senatorial primary Blanton was beaten by Tom Connally. He was out of public office fkor the first time in ten years.

Lee died while in office, and Mrs. Lee decided to run for his place in the election of 1930. By this time, however, Blanton was anxious to get back to Washington, and he, too, filed for his old House seat.

The campaign that followed was a fantastic one.

The issue—or, at least, one of the issues—raised by Blanton was Congressional funerals. In interviews and speeches, Blanton assailed the high cost of burying deceased members of Congress. He cited figures to show that the taxpayers' money was being frittered away on caskets, flowers and funeral trains.

The widow Lee, who had just buried her husband, could only conclude that Blanton was aiming at her. Like every widow of a member of Congress, she had buried her husband at Federal expense, as provided by law. She felt pretty bad about it, and so did her friends. They thought that such a campaign might prove a boomerang against Blanton, but it didn't. He won.

Blanton has always loved the label of "Treasury watchdog." And yet there have been contradictions in his efforts at economy, too. He has fought consistently and vehemently to trim, and even abolish, the sum which the Federal Government pays as its share of the cost of running the City of Washington.

Representative Maury Maverick led LaMar Seeligson by 11,780 to 8,324.

Apparently assured of renomination were Martin Dies, Sam Rayburn, Luther Johnson, J. J. Mansfield, J. O. Buchanan, Fritz Lanham, Richard Kleberg, Milton West, Marvin Jones, George H. Mahon and Charles Y. South.

W. R. Poage, a former State Senator from Waco, also appeared nominated.

Others apparently in for runoffs were Hatton Summers, 10,059 and Claude Westerfeld, 4,434 District Five; Nat Patton, 18,467, and Bonner Frizzell, 8,938, or Emerson Stone, 7,851, Seventh District; Albert Thomas, 14,829, and Oscar Holcombe, Houston mayor, 12,946, District Eight; W. D. McFarlane, 17,651, and Grady Woodruff, 8,393, District Thirteen.

Allred Clinches Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, July 26.—Black-haired Jimmy Allred, whose advance to political prominence has embraced periods as a bottle washer, bootblack and sailor, today watched his majority in the Governor's race grow to proportions which virtually assured his re-election.

The Texas election bureau, in an overnight compilation of 777,424 votes cast in the Democratic primary yesterday, credited Allred with 403,006.

Clevenger Out, Co-ed's Murder Still a Mystery

Uncle of Victim Quits Jail as Authorities Reach Blank Wall.

By the United Press.

Asheville, N. C., July 26.—Prof. W. L. Clevenger tonight left the Buncombe County Jail, where he was locked up Friday for questioning about the mysterious murder of Helen Clevenger, his pretty young niece.

Guy Weaver, Clevenger's attorney, announced his client had gone into seclusion in Asheville but probably would meet newspapermen tomorrow.

Meanwhile, efforts to solve the baffling slaying of the 19-year-old New York University student, assaulted and shot to death by a midnight intruder into her hotel room ten days ago, apparently reached a blank wall.

Nothing New, He Says.

Sheriff Lawrence Brown, who had confidently predicted he would arrest the murderer by last Friday night, failed to appear at his office today. Reached at his home by telephone, he said there "was nothing that points to new developments" in the case.

Clevenger, middle-aged bachelor professor of animal husbandry at North Carolina State College in Raleigh, technically had not been in custody since yesterday, when his brother started habeas corpus proceedings. However, he remained in jail until late today of his own free will "to help in the case," according to Brown.

Clevenger discovered the body of his niece the morning of July 16. She had just come from her Staten Island (N. Y.) home for a vacation trip through the mountains with him. Clevenger was taken into custody on his return from the girl's funeral in Fletcher, Ohio.

Calls Suspicion Absurd.

"I don't believe the sheriff's office ever seriously considered making any charges against Prof. Clevenger in the case," Weaver said tonight. "The suspicion of his being guilty was so absurd he has never considered it necessary to make a denial."

Clevenger's brother, C. B. Clevenger, also a tecaher at North Carolina State College, was equally emphatic about his brother's innocence when he visited him in jail earlier in the day.

"Do you think there is any possibility that he may be charged with this crime?" the brother was asked.

"Not unless they use very flimsy evidence," he replied. "I'm certain that the matter will be cleared up soon."

"Do you believe your brother innocent?"

"I certainly do," he snapped back. "It was unfortunate, however, that he arrived at about the time the sheriff announced he would arrest the criminal. I think the sheriff was working on another clew that he thought would materialize at the time. I can't see that he meant my brother."

No efforts have been made to release Daniel Gaddy, hotel night watchman, or L. D. Roddy, colored elevator operator, held in jail for questioning since early last week.

Tells of Hearing Voice.

Boston, July 26 (U.P.).—A "man's cultured voice speaking in subdued and quiet tones," and coming from a darkened room in the Asheville (N. C.) Hotel where Helen Clevenger was slain mysteriously, was heard by Miss Lydia Everson, of Belmont, the police said she told them late tonight.

Miss Everson, who said she stopped at the Hotel July 16, the night the 19-year-old New York University co-ed was murdered, told the police she was awakened about 1 a. m., by a "woman's scream" from a nearby room.

According to authorities, Miss Everson said she heard the same "man's voice" say "just a minute and you'll be all right Molly (or Polly)."

In the presence of a police stenographer, Miss Everson told Sergts. Raymond A. L. Monahan and Joseph Fallon, of the Boston homicide squad, she would not be able to identify the voice.

creasing constitutional guaranties of individual liberties "they have been embodied in statutes clothing Federal administrative agencies with legislative or judicial powers over space of larger dimensions than that allotted to the Federal Government by the Constitution."

The committee pointed out that before administrative tribunals, just as before courts, the essential function of the executive is to act as a party to the controversy either as prosecutor or defender, and that the combination of prosecutor and judge, although it would not be permitted in the courts, is freely tolerated in administrative agencies.

With regard to the third factor, that of effective independent review, the committee dealt at length with difficulties created by decisions of the Supreme Court which it said seem to have upheld the right of Congress to confer judicial power on administrative agencies over questions of fact with no right to review in the courts.

The committee gave numerous examples of recent legislation in which almost complete legislative power has been given the President or various agencies. While expressing no opinion on the constitutionality of this type of delegated power the committee "does not hesitate to say that its dangers are obvious and that its use should be restricted to rare occasions. As extreme examples of the delegation of power, the committee cited the NRA and the AAA.

In a third section of its report the committee recommended that the criminal code be amended to forbid practice before administrative agencies by Senators, Representatives, governmental officials, officers of Government-owned corporations, and officers and committeemen of national and State political organizations, whether with or without compensation.

In an analysis of the Smith bill and the Black bill on lobbying, the committee concluded that none of the evils of lobbying is reached or substantially affected by either bill.

The report was drafted by O. R. McGuire, Clarenden, Va., chairman; Monte Appel, St. Paul, Minn.; Richard Bentley, Chicago; Louis G. Caldwell, Washington, and Julius C. Smith, Greensboro, N. C.

Norway Scout Troop Honored At D. C. Dinner

29 Boys From Oslo Feted at Legation After Tour of United States.

Twenty-nine Norwegian Boy Scouts, dressed in the scouting uniform of their nation, were honored last night at a dinner attended by notables of their native land in Washington.

The Scouts, from Oslo, have been touring the United States since June 2. Washington was one of the last principal cities to be visited before sailing for Norway on August 1.

Principals at the dinner last night were Jorgen Galbe, counselor of the Royal Norwegian legation; Carl Telefsen, chairman of the committee which gave the dinner; Mrs. Robert Goode, of the Norwegian Ladies' Aid Society, and the following members of the host committee: Jergen Galbe, Dr. W. N. Johannessen and Peter O. Moe.

The Scouts were entertained yesterday afternoon at the Norwegian Legation. Today they will visit the Capitol, the White House, Mount Vernon, the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, Lincoln Memorial, the National Geographic Society's headquarters, the Washington Monument and the National Observatory. They will begin the tour of the city at 9 a. m. They will leave for New York Tuesday morning.

The troop, most widely traveled in Norway, toured the United States under sponsorship of the International League of Norsemen. The Minneapolis, Minn., branch of the league is paying their expenses in this country.

"Believe every American evacuated from San Sebastian on the Cayuga.

"Mr. Biddle Garrison, clerk of the American Embassy at San Sebastian, took a dangerous trip to Zarauz and brought Mrs. Mary E. Larkin and son to San Sebastian, who with others mentioned below are now at St. Jean de Luz.

(Garrison is the 25-year-old personal secretary of Ambassador Bowers. His home is in Red Bank, N. J. He is a graduate of Princeton.)

"Also evacuated Norwegian and Dutch ministers and secretaries, British consul and wives of Finnish and Norwegian vice consuls, 14 Americans, 14 English and 33 others.

"Most of the Diplomatic Corps have left for Irun, on the frontier, Sarauz or France.

The State Department was informed by the United States consul at Marseilles, France, that a Spanish vessel had brought 11 destitute American athletes from Barcelona. The athletes had gone to Barcelona to participate in the "labor Olympic" which never was held.

Meanwhile, the Spanish embassy here issue a statement denying that the present government in Spain is red or Communist. The statement, signed by Senor Don Luis Calderon, the ambassador, said:

"Probably impressed by the fact that the Syndicalists and Communists are voluntarily co-operating with military and police forces, as well as with the Spanish people who are supporting the government, some newspapers have published telegrams by which the present Spanish government is described and qualified as a red or Communist government.

"It seems therefore necessary to State for those who have not followed Spanish politics closely in recent months that:

"The present Government is a constitutional government and has a parliamentary government.

"The members of the cabinet belong to parties and groups of the republican left and even to some of the republican center parties.

"There is no representative from the syndicalist or Communist groups of parliament within the cabinet."

train from Calais, to which he had crossed on the yacht Enchantress.

He was greeted by President Albert Lebrun of France and by nine cabinet members. With him were Alfred Duff Cooper, the British war minister, and Malcolm MacDonald, secretary for the Dominions.

President Lebrun, in welcoming the King, expressed hope the "fellowship which the British and French democracies are unceasingly working to develop will bring still closer together in beneficent peace our peoples, worried in the face of future uncertainties."

Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada, speaking by transatlantic telephone appealed to Europe for peace "as the only memorial worthy of the valor and sacrifice of those who gave their lives in the Great War."

An absolute silence prevailed over a throng of more than 100,000 persons, assembled in the fields about the ridge, as the sovereign unveiled the memorial on the site captured by the Canadian forces, April 12, 1917, in the battle of Arras.

As the King pulled the control cord, there emerged from the Canadian colors a madonna-like figure in white stone, with bowed head. Behind the feminine figure representing Canada, rose two pylons 138 feet high, dedicated to the Canadian and French armies.

11,500 Names.

At the top of the monument appeared statues of Peace, Justice, Truth and Knowledge and between the pylons a figure of Sacrifice. At the base of the memorial ran a massive wall of defense, 237 feet long, on which were graven the names of 11,500 missing Canadian soldiers.

After the unveiling, the King's voice rang out in a speech broadcast to the crowd and relayed throughout the world.

Over a radius of 5 miles, his majesty's voice was the only sound to be heard. Airplanes were forbidden to fly within the wide circle of silence.

Nearly 10,000 of the spectators who stood respectfully at attention during the dedication were Canadian veterans who returned to this Northeastern sector where their forces fought in the great war.

Presented to Canada.

About 6,000 of them crossed from Canada in a chartered liner, others came from Great Britain and the continent.

King Edward made his first trip out of Britain since becoming King to conduct the ceremony. Although he visited Canada and accompanied the Canadian forces in France for a time when he was Prince of Wales, the ceremony marked the first time he had set foot on Canadian soil as sovereign.

The Vimy battlefield—240 acres surrounding the monument—was presented to Canada by France.

President Lebrun, who greeted King Edward, also came for his first time to Canadian soil.

The dedication culminated ten years of labor and an expenditure of about $1,000,000 on erection of the memorial. The work was completed after earlier delays in construction because of difficulties in finding the 7,000 to 8,000 tons of special stone required.

The parchment-colored blocks, averaging from 4 to 25 tons, were brought from an old Roman quarry in Yugoslavia.

Walter S. Allward, Toronto architect and sculptor who designed the monument for the Canadian Battlefields Memorial Commission, supervised the preparations for the unveiling.

The French government created several special Vimy stamps, bearing photographs of the monument, which were placed on sale at the inaugural.

The government also invited the visiting Canadian veterans to be its guests on a six-day tour of the battlefields and other historic centers of France.

Guards Alarmed.

Vimy Ridge, France, July 26 (U.P.). French police, mindful of the recent attempt on the life of King Edward VIII in London, were alarmed today when an armless colored man broke through the British sovereign's guard during unveiling ceremonies at a monument erected in memory of Canadian soldiers killed in the World War.

The gendarmes, some with guns drawn and ready for instant action, rushed after the disfigured man and were about to collar him when he reached the side of the monarch.

The "suspect," Turly Christian, of Toronto, who lost both arms in the service of the Canadian army during the great war, wanted only to speak to the King, whom he had met twice in Toronto when His Majesty was Prince of Wales.

Later, Christian said:

"I met the King twice in Toronto when he was the Prince of Wales. On the strength of that I rushed through the guards to tell him I wanted to introduce 12 blind Canadian former service men.

"The King consented to speak to them and asked each where he came from and he also asked me what I did in the war."

Five Killed in Crash.

Oconomowoc, Wis., July 26 (A.P.).—Five persons were killed and one was injured critically tonight when a Milwaukee Railroad train struck an automobile at a crossing here.

Leftist Reinforcements

and Paris said government seaplanes had bombed Palma, Mallorca, and that a number of rebel chiefs, attempting to escape by boat, had been imprisoned. The British warship Repulse left Gibralta for Palma to evacuate Britons. One American villa was reported hit in the Mallorca bombardment.)

Leftists declared their mountain defense of Madrid had left 2,000 rebels dead or wounded in the Guadarrama.

Amid comparative order, the Madrid government mobilized a regiment of militant women to "fight the assassins of their fathers and brothers." Officials claimed there was no shortage of food, milk or gasoline.

In the Loyalist forces marching on Zaragoza, too, was the anarchist mother of five children, Libertad Rodenas.

Government technicians sought to restore communications with various southern cities, cut off virtually ever since Gen. Francisco Franco's widespread revolt flared out of Spanish Morocco July 17.

(Reports reaching Casablanca, French Morocco, from the Spanish zone said firing squads and the iron rule of Fascist rebels had spread terror throughout the populace. Even Franco, the advices said, went about heavily guarded, apparently fearing for his life. Some believed he might set up a permanent, independent regime in Morocco, should his mainland armies fail.)

More pedestrians appeared on the streets of Madrid, but 161 Americans remained sheltered in their embassy. Barcelona, like the capital, was reported free from disorder.

Fleet Reported Afire.

Lisbon, Portugal, July 26.—Rebel forces holding Spanish Morocco demoralized the Loyalist fleet today and sent it limping and disabled into Malaga Harbor, insurgent radio stations broadcast from Teutuan and Seville.

The cruiser Libertad was reported in flames after a furious bombing attack by rebel airplanes from Melilla. Yesterday the battleship Jaime Primero was put out of action by a shell from the rebel forts at Ceuta. Late today another loyalist warship was fleeing to Malaga after having been bombarded off Melilla.

All broadcast rebel claims were of triumph.

The provisional rebel government at Burgos broadcast that its committee of national defense has named Gen. Francisco Franco, leader of the rebels in Spanish Morocco, where the war broke out, as the commander in chief of all insurgent forces.

The Tetuan rebel radio announced that insurgent planes bombed and sank the Loyalist destroyer Sanchez Barcaiztegui off Tangier, Morocco.

Broadcasts by both sides indicated the rebels control 30 provinces and parts of three others while the government controls 16 provinces and part of one other. Spain has 50 provinces, including the Canary and Balearic islands.

Fight Near Zarazoga.

With the Loyalist Forces at Barcelona, Spain, July 26 (A.P.).—Barcelona's Loyalist government today reported a column of Leftist militia, marching from Barcelona, was fighting rebel troops at a point about 53 miles from Zarazoga.

Gen. Cabanellas, the rebel commander of Zarazoga and Maj. Perez Farras, leader of the Liberalist column, were said by Leftist correspondents to have exchanged communications on the surrender of the city. No agreement was reached, however.

A second Leftist column, marching from Tarragona, captured the cities of Gaspe and Cairnena from the rebels and was concentrating before the village of Ancaniz.

Col. Sandino, commander of the Barcelona air force, reported loyal airmen had established a base at Alerida to support the attack of the two columns on Zarazoga.

Ten bombing planes and 100 aviators already have arrived there, Sandino announced.

Colonials Fear Rebel Reprisal If Loyalists Win

Population in Terror After Firing Squads Shoot Down Leftists.

By the Associated Press.

Casablanca, French Morocco, July 26.—Fascist rebel and daily firing squads at dawn, reports from Spanish Morocco said tonight, have plunged the civil population into terror.

With the main fighting of the Spanish civil war centered on the mainland, the Spanish Moroccans were apprehensive also lest a rebel defeat at the gates of Madrid bring the war back to them.

It was in the Spanish African zone that the revolution first flared nine days ago.

Twenty-eight soldiers loyal to the government were reported to have been killed by firing squads which were going out daily between 3 a. m. and 5 a. m.

An undetermined number of civilians also were said to have been shot down.

Tetuan was full of newly recruited troops who seemed to be well supplied with ammunition, gasoline and foodstuffs.

Citizens were afraid to talk or walk freely in the streets or receive visitors lest they be arrested, imprisoned, or even killed.

Nine hundred civilians were reported incarcerated at Seluan, although confirmation was lacking.

Rebel Barracks Shelled.

Hendaye, France, July 26 (A.P.).—Spanish government forces shelled rebel barracks near San Sebastian for three hours today, but opposing leaders in Spain's northern zone of civil war devoted much of their time to drafting secret battle plans.

The loyal troops bombarded Loyola barracks, where rebel regiments were concentrated, during the morning, but the gunfire ceased this noon.

A new field gun from Fort Guadalupe was set up on a hill commanding the road to Irun, indicating a new engagement was under preparation.

A Warning To Planners.

Next to Great Britain the United States is at present the second largest importer of wheat, and judging from present indications, we shall retain our high rank in the coming year. According to estimates, every important wheat producing area of the world has failed to produce a normal crop, with the result that the current output, plus the world carryover, will probably fall slightly below estimated consumption requirements. Allowing for a normal carryover of about 550,000,000 bushels, the estimated world shortage would amount to more than half a billion bushels.

Although drought conditions are primarily responsible for this huge deficiency in wheat supplies both here and abroad, it is salutary to remember that our wheat acreage has been reduced as a result of the AAA's program of production control. It is futile to speculate as to how much more wheat might have been harvested this year if there had never been an AAA. We have learned, however, that it is extremely hazardous to curtail crop production in the hope of raising farm prices when nature is capable of turning abundance into scarcity in a surprisingly short space of time.

Our unenviable position as a major wheat importer in a year of universal scarcity constitutes a significant warning which can scarcely be misunderstood even by ardent advocates of a planned economy.

A Doubtful Blessing.

In announcing plans for extra payment for overtime work, the United States Steel Corporation has incidentally disclosed its intention to re-establish the 48-hour week as the basis from which to compute overtime. As the steel industry is now working on an average about 40 hours per week, this promise of extra remuneration does not offer much in the way of immediate gain for its employes.

Although the move is designed, it is explained, to prevent a future shortage of certain kinds of labor, if output should continue to increase, the reason for the action remains open to question. The fact that will impress the public most is that the United States Steel Corporation, and other concerns expected to follow its leadership, have decided to revert to the longer working week in preference to spreading employment in periods of high operating activity. To organized labor, overtime pay secured under such conditions will seem a doubtful blessing. Certainly it will not weaken the arguments advanced for the campaign mapped out by the C. I. O.

The steel industry owes its employes and the public a more complete and candid explanation of the reasons for the present move. If those reasons are good, it is poor strategy to remain silent as to what they are. If they are not easy to defend, it is worse strategy to conceal them at a time when labor unrest is rife and a policy of co-operative industrial action highly desirable.

Aftermath Of Negligence.

The prosecution of the six men who are held responsible for the recent collapse of an apartment house under construction in New York will be watched with interest in many cities. The Bronx crash, which cost the lives of 18 persons, appears to have been the result of unusual negligence. But lax building regulations, inadequate inspection and criminal disregard of minimum safety standards are a common source of danger to workmen in many parts of the country.

New York is quite properly treating this sort of disregard for human safety as a criminal offense. A grand jury has indicted the masonry contractor and architect of the ill-fated building, as well as four employes of the Bronx Bureau of Buildings, on charges of second degree manslaughter. A careful investigation has convinced District Attorney Foley that the design of the structure was extremely defective, that some specifications were disregarded and that the mortar used was too inferior to serve its purpose.

When negligence may result in such disastrous consequences criminal prosecutions seem to be the community's best means of defense. The hope is, of course, that vigorous action in this case will prevent similar needless disasters. To supplement this precaution, New York's building code is being scrutinized to see if changes are desirable, and it may be assumed that the question of adequate inspectors will be raised.

Washington and many other cities where building inspection has been frequently inadequate in the past may well profit by New York's experience. No disaster should be essential to emphasize the constant need for vigilance in matters of this kind.

Only In Germany's Interest.

No surprise is occasioned by announcement of Germany's decision to replace its legation at Addis Ababa with a consulate, thereby tacitly extending diplomatic recognition to the Italian conquest of Ethiopia. This concession to Italy was undoubtedly part of the bargain made by Hitler and Mussolini prior to the recent Austro-German agreement. It helps to secure Rome's rather unhappy blessing on the arrangement which is extending Nazi influence southward to the Brenner Pass.

But absence of the element of surprise does not lessen the importance of this latest move in Hitler's subtle program of expansion. To speak of it as a "concession" to Italy is really misleading, for the move is altogether in Germany's interest. Prompt recognition of gains won by ruthless aggression, in violation of treaty obligations, is a precedent which the Berlin government is most anxious to see established. It may not be long now before the Reich will be expecting Italy to extend the same courtesies to her.

So it will be surprising if the German lead is followed by other important capitals in the near future. Establishment of legality for Italy's illegal conquest is a very different matter to the lifting of sanctions against the aggressor. Diplomatic recognition implies approval of the whole procedure of conquest and would mean final collapse of the effort to outlaw war as an instrument of national policy. German military preparations attest that country's desire to see such an outcome. But the interest of those countries which are not now potential aggressors is diametrically opposite.

The United States in particular is in a position where recognition of the Italian conquest is logically impossible. On January 7, 1932, with special reference to Japan's occupation of Manchuria, this Government laid down as a principle that "it does not intend to recognize any situation, treaty or agreement which may be brought about by means contrary to the covenants and obligations of the Pact of Paris." We are further bound to this nonrecognition policy as a signatory of the Argentine anti-war treaty.

It has been pointed out that there is not an exact parallel between the subjugation of Manchuria and Ethiopia, inasmuch as Japan made the former into a nominally independent puppet state while Italy has annexed the African kingdom outright. But the case for recognition of the conquest of Ethiopia cannot be sustained from this distinction. Such an argument would be tantamount to saying that if Japan had incorporated Manchuria into her empire, we would have approved that action. The wording of the Stimson Doctrine, as quoted above, utterly refutes this argument.

Rome, therefore, need not expect either the loyal members of the League of Nations, or the United States, to follow a German action so clearly calculated further to undermine the validity of existing international agreements. Contrary to Italian comment on the subject, the action taken is decidedly not an example for other governments to follow. Its significance is of an entirely different character: as a further indication of the tremendous assistance to German expansionist policy provided by Mussolini's barren conquest in East Africa.

Industrial Recuperation.

From a comprehensive survey of current economic trends the United States Chamber of Commerce concludes that 1936 may prove to be the best year in physical volume of business since 1929. This optimistic opinion is strongly supported by official and nonofficial statistics showing a rapid expansion of industry and trade, and a decisive increase in employment.

The Federal Reserve Board's adjusted index of industrial production, for instance, rose to 103 per cent of the 1923-25 level in June as compared with 86 per cent in the same month last year. A sustained high rate of activity in the steel industry, moreover, has continued into July, contrary to the usual seasonal trend. The gains in factory employment reported by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics have likewise been striking, with the index for June reaching the highest level attained since October, 1930. In this case, too, the gains run counter to seasonal tendencies.

The Chamber of Commerce rightly attaches importance to the fact that employment increases have not been confined to manufacturing, but have been conspicuous in other lines of activity, such as transportation, retail trade and construction. A rise of 76 per cent in the value of building permits during the first six months of the year is especially gratifying. As the construction industries are drawn into the recovery movement, new outlets are provided for the products of the heavy industries and more jobs are available in lines where unemployment has been most severe.

Another significant indication of the upward trend of business activity is the exceptionally high rate of electric power production. According to the Edison Electric Institute, the output for the week ended July 18 reached an all-time high mark. Although the figures cover nonindustrial as well as industrial uses, the rapid contra-seasonal upward tendency is plainly attributable to industrial demands.

Confidence that the current improvement will continue, barring unforeseen obstacles, is based upon the comprehensive scope of the upturn, embracing the heavy industries as well as those selling consumers' goods, and extending to foreign as well as domestic trade. The present recovery picture, in fact, offers a sharp contrast to the "spotty" and uncertain evidence of improvement characteristic of the earlier stages of the upturn.

The sustained and better balanced progress indicated by current surveys justifies the belief that further gains will follow naturally from the impetus already given to business. The recuperative powers of this country have been demonstrated again and again after severe depressions. There is no reason why those forces should not now continue to operate, unless recovery should be blocked by those "extraneous influences outside the normal operations of business processes," to which the Chamber of Commerce refers rather fearfully.

The most serious obstacle to continuous business expansion at the present time is the budgetary deficit. It makes investors reluctant to risk funds in new industrial enterprises for fear of currency depreciation, and, for similar reasons, causes industrialists to delay plans for business expansion. With a reduction of governmental expenditures sufficient to assure fiscal stability, such fears would soon disappear and doubts as to the permanence of the recovery trend would be banished.

True Buncombe.

Appropriately enough, the sheriff in the Clevenger murder case receives his authority from Buncombe County. This is the same Buncombe County which gave the word "bunkum" (as it is generally spelled today) to American slang.

During the debate on the famous "Missouri Question" in the Sixteenth Congress, a Representative from the hill country of North Carolina arose to speak. Disregarding all cries for a vote, he embarked on a "speech for Buncombe," explaining naively that the people of the county expected it and he was bound to speak for his constituents. Since then, "buncombe" has been used to describe any action, not necessarily a speech, designed merely for show or to gain political popularity. As has been noted, the county's present sheriff is doing his best to perpetuate the colloquialism.

With each new edition of the papers, Sheriff Brown rivets the word more securely in the national vocabulary. Every day he summons the press to his office and passes out grandiose statements as to how soon he expects to "break" the Clevenger case. Suspects are arrested and freed in such rapid succession that the latest, the murdered girl's uncle, now refuses to leave the jail—apparently preferring to keep out of the confusion reigning on Asheville's streets, where elevator operators and violin players are being picked up almost indiscriminately, in accord with the local Hawkshaw's latest clew.

It is farcical performances of this sort on the part of the lesser police agencies that stir the periodic suggestion to disband all county and State officers of the law and hand over their duties to a single Federal police department. While such departure from traditional law enforcement methods is not to be countenanced, there is a very real obligation upon counties to prevent the degeneration of law enforcement into cheap publicity seeking. Fortunately, the Federal Bureau of Investigation has already begun a training school in which local officers can learn the modern technique of preventing and detecting crime.

Literary Styles.

Much has been said about literary style. Only recently nouns took on new cadence with Miss Stein's monotonous repetition; verbs fell over and played dead at Hemingway's command; imitators of Wolfe soon unearthed his trick of stringing out adjectives in thesaurus fashion. But the phrase "literary style" is now taking on a new meaning—in future it may refer to those fashions which have their origins in popular fiction.

Michael Arlen's "Green Hat" started a run not only on bookstores but in millinery shops as well. "Butterfield 8" enlarged on the beauties and new uses to which a mink coat may be put. Who knows but that H. G. Wells, through his fantasies, may have inspired Miss Fanny Hurst's glass hat? And in announcements for fall of postilion and other coachmen hats of stiff crowns and rolled brims, we clearly see the lengthy shadow of "Anthony Adverse."

With such an abundance of precedent, it is only logical to assume that by spring every well-dressed girl will be in crinolines and pantalettes. For that novel of Civil War days, "Gone With the Wind," has gone in just that fashion into 201,000 copies. Doubly unfortunate is the young lady who cannot now afford a complete new ensemble every season. She is liable to find her clothing at home only in such a "Brave New World" as that created by Huxley.

A Seven-Mile Rocket.

From Science News Letter.

Engineering formulae and designs for a rocket calculated to reach a height of seven miles have won for an American engineer, Alfred Africano, the 5,000-franc international Rep-Hirsch Prize. Official announcement of the award was made in Paris by the Astronomical Society of France.

The award was made jointly to Mr. Africano and the American Rocket Society of which he is vice president. The work of the society is not aimed at romantic "trips to the moon," but at the more sober scientific objectives of devising rockets useful in the investigation of the earth's upper atmosphere.

The International Rep-Hirsch Prize was founded by two Frenchmen, Robert Esnault-Pelterie, airplane engineer and manufacturer, and Andre Hirsch, banker.

The Influence Of Sports.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those who saw the final tryouts for Olympic berths on the United States team witnessed some splendid sportsmanship. Time and again, fighters in the midst of flurries extended the beau geste of good sportsmanship when a fighter slipped, or unintentionally landed a foul blow. Despite the fact that four of the eight United States Olympic boxers are Negroes, the fighters and the spectators proved superior to low prejudices.

In professional wrestling, on the other hand, when Bothner, Gotch, Jenkins, Hackenschmidt and our local boys, Joe Grant or Joe Turner were grappling, one went to the bouts to see real wrestling. Today, the game has developed into pachyderm tussling controlled by a wrestling trust that makes exhibitions and not contests the rule. Mayhem is frequently the rule. Many of the men, and even some of the women who attend, become sadistically frantic when human tonnage is suffering agonizingly or being hurled to the flagging or choked by the ropes.

First-nighters find it difficult to realize the average enjoyment some women spectators get out of the torture in their desire to see the Dusek "villains" thrown. It seems to indicate that the inherited "Nero" in us is not far down even after centuries of civilization. Cock fighting, live pigeon shoots, dog fights and the Roman holiday lynchings in some places still show the need for character and Christian education and the appreciation of amateur sport as socializing influences.

Crackpots And Dungeons.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Aristotle" is entirely too modest. This hiding behind illustrious Greeks is becoming a habit, and with our present vogue for saturating the city with temples, will have a bad effect on the populace. We will soon be forced into togas, and if the "crackpots" of the opposition muster enough votes we can expect a mongrel brand of American fascism, so mongrel, in fact, that it is doubtful whether the trains will even run on time; a fact that would indeed be tragic, since exponents of European fascism insist this is the redeeming feature of a political system founded on the chopping block and the dungeon.

Granted that America must at some future date reach at least the border line of fascism, under the "crackpots" now shouting their slogans of racial hatred, old-age pensions, a Hitler-in-every-pot, clerical demagogues and patent medicine vendors, would it not be an effective and logical move for "Aristotle" to come out of his toga and stop playing around with the Greeks? This flirting with the past might be inspiring, but it fails to convince the American people that "Aristotle" has a solution to offer, unless it is the hemlock cup.

Remember the stirring words of that loyal American, Al Capone: "Bolshevism is knocking at our gates. We can't afford to let it in. We have to organize ourselves against it and put our shoulders together and hold fast. We must keep America whole and safe and unspoiled."

I realize that "Aristotle" lives in a town where an idea is as alien as a bed without the imprint of Gen. Washington's body, but I am sure that if he joins with such patriotic citizens as Gen. Amos Fries to keep America pure, the good people will let him sign his name and live in peace . . . maybe.

Reaction To Mr. Tugwell's Views.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an article entitled "Down to Earth," published recently in "Current History," Dr. Tugwell, of the Resettlement Administration, in his first sentence, very much in the air, says, "It is hard to get people to think of the land problem as one of adjustment rather than of simple retirement." He says to the farmers, those who live nearest the soil, that they are not to be satisfied by simple ownership or use of land as a place for retirement, livelihood and enjoyment, but that they must adapt themselves to some other way of living and discard the old blessings of retirement and contentment, and become a part of some collectivist or agrarian state as a whole.

A vital question is, who is to determine as to the people to be affected by resettlement, or the sections or the territory to be involved, or the underlying plans of "adjustment rather than of simple retirement?" Is it the farmer, be he landowner or tenant, who is to decide as to whether he wants to sell or to move, or to seek another location? Or is this to be determined by some self-constituted adjuster of home life, someone who may know little or nothing about the essentials of contented home living.

Homes are habitations of tenants, even sharecroppers, as well as of landowners, and the tenant may have as much satisfaction in retirement in his tenant home as though he were the owner of the land. And in the usual case the tenant has a desire to remain in a given habitation and enjoy the contentment of home life, even though his wants are simple and his means limited. He does not ordinarily hope for a large income, or a great surplus, and he is not casting about for some way of obtaining a living aside from results of honest toil. He is usually blest by offspring, and these and the obligations of family life, and the natural adjustments growing out of family ties, usually compensate for the supposed lack of material substance.

The administrator says that agriculture "needs to be adapted to the kind of social accounting ultimately we shall have to make—that is, no one ought to be allowed to farm in such ways that he costs the community more than he contributes." This must mean some form of control over the individual homeowner, or occupier, with right on the part of some governmental overlord to say to the people where they shall live, what they shall raise, how they shall raise it and so on.

He says, "The Resettlement Administration is offering as many farmers as its funds will permit, escape from these hopeless enterprises and new opportunity elsewhere." Under this it seems that there are to be a selective few—as no possible funds could cover all—who will receive the bounties of government in removing from lands deemed by the administrator as not fit for use to "good land on which resettlement is possible," though it is not explained as to how the Government would acquire this good land, or who would select it for individual ownership or use.

In this publication, given circulation by Dr. Tugwell at the time the New Deal campaign is getting under way, there are signs that he proposes, even at times vaguely, to put the public on notice as to what his branch of the New Deal will do in the matter of readjusting farm life and living. Thus the New Deal, if continued in power, may be able to say that the public was advised of and approved these various schemes. And it now remains for the public, the voting public, the thinking public, to say at the polls as to whether this altogether foreign program shall be engrafted upon and supplant the orderly normal processes of American life.

No Time For Philosophy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Aristotle of Alexandria is correct in assuming Capitalism breeds contempt of justice. Might makes right but at the same time the only philosophy that seems to stick in this everyday workaday age is fight.

We may dream of better things to come, but to the man, woman or child who is hungry or naked their thoughts dwell on their present day needs. We had an example of this during the Hoover Administration when hordes of hungry men and women and children moved onto the Capital to state their immediate wants. They came ready to "fight" for those needs. They could not eat the philosophy of Aristotle, many of them never having heard of the Greek philosopher and other philosophers who have come and gone.

What President Franklin D. Roosevelt undertook to do when his administration was inaugurated March 4, 1933, was to provide for the immediate needs of the hungry and naked. He could not wait to educate the masses in the philosophy of Aristotle and apply it to our present day needs.

The masses had been told that a protective tariff meant prosperity. Yes, after the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill was passed the highest tariff wall encircled our border, yet we had the most far-reaching depression in the history of the United States.

In the immediate campaign there is just one issue: Shall Franklin D. Roosevelt be elected President of the United States? It is not a question—shall the Democratic Party succeed. We have candidates promising everything under the sun to defeat Franklin D. Roosevelt. One group promises me when I reach the age of 65 years I will receive $200 per month for the balance of my life if I spend it each month. All the old men will be surrounded by a crowd of young women and all the old women will have young gentlemen of a kind waiting on them gallantly and there you are.

Coughlin On Mexico.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of July 15 Mr. Westbrook Pegler stated that the Rev. Father Coughlin, speaking at the Townsend convention in Cleveland, "demanded, in effect, a holy war of invasion against Mexico as the first article of the foreign policy of the new regime."

This is not true. Father Coughlin does not ask for intervention in Mexico. Quite the contrary, he seeks an end to intervention by this Administration in that country. But for support given by Roosevelt, Hull, Daniels & Co. to the Cardenas outfit, which represents possibly 10 per cent of the inhabitants of Mexico, that outfit would not last long. The 90 per cent of the people there would then not see their churches stolen and looted, their priests killed, their schools and hospitals closed, their children taught atheism and socialism in the government schools, their children degraded and corrupted with immoral sex education in those schools, their homes taken away from them by the government if they are even suspected of holding religious exercises in the privacy of their own dwellings, etc.

If this Administration would not intervene in Mexico by supporting the present officials in power and would recall Josephus Daniels, peace would soon come to that distracted country.

Turnabout.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why all this tirade against Mr. Farley? The critics of the New Deal very carefully avoid mention of the fact that Will Hays, Hubert Work and other Republicans held Cabinet positions while acting as chairman of the Republican National Committee.

It's the same old story—it is all right for the Republicans, but if the Democrats do the same thing it is terrible.

The Post Impressionist

The Decline Of Language

Post Office, Monday.

WE listened with great attention, a few weeks ago, to the present President's speech accepting a Presidential nomination. Having listened, we had certain criticisms to make of it.

However, we refrained, just then, from making them, because all of our Democratic friends suspect us of being a Republican. If there is one thing we want to do for this Column more than another (except sign it), it is to keep the sweet thing free from any vocalized suspicion of partisan bias.

But now we have listened to a certain other speech accepting a certain other Presidential nomination, and we have certain criticisms to make of that speech, too, and we're not going to withhold our criticisms any longer. Although all our Republican friends have suspected us of being a Democrat, we don't see how they can suspect us of being a Democrat any longer, or how all our Democratic friends can any longer suspect us of being a Republican, when the criticism that we have to make of the two speeches is the same criticism.

Of course, this opens the road for fusion. Our Republican friends and our Democratic friends may unite in accusing us of being a Union Party man. But if they do, the Union Party will accuse us of being a Socialist or a Communist, and then the Socialists and the Communists will jointly prove that we are a hireling of both the capitalistic parties . . .

Besides, we shall merely state our case and leave its arbitrament to posterity.

The thing we want to complain about is the decline of Presidential English. By Presidential English we mean the written or prepared language of any American who is (or has been) a tenant of the White House or is bidding for such tenancy, in the open market.

Up to a period immediately, or very shortly, preceding the Civil War, the public English of all such people (with one notable exception) was the English, not of a person, but of a personage. Whether they pointed with pride, viewed with alarm, or ordered beefsteak and onions in a place of public refreshment, 90 per cent of their vocabulary was derived from Latin roots, and 95 per cent of their phrases was modeled on either Cicero or Gibbon.

Then Lincoln was elected. Not since—save for a brief period of the Wilson regime—has that fine old tradition lifted its bloody head.

For instance:

About 90 years ago, right down here on the Potomac, a shocking accident killed a Secretary of the Navy and a Secretary of War. If that sort of thing happened tomorrow (which God forbid), how would President Roosevelt announce it? He would announce it by saying he regretted to inform—and then he would state the facts. If it happened on whatever river there is in Kansas, how would our fellow-Pennsylvanian, Gov. Landon, announce it? He would announce it by stating the facts and saying that he was mighty sorry they were facts.

But listen to how Mr. Tyler, the tenth President of the United States, simply had to treat of such a case, which had occurred during his Administration, even a long while after it happened:

"That day was full of promise of a day of gladness and triumph . . . There floated the ship whereon had been concentrated so many hopes and anticipated joys . . . The decks were soon crowded with happy visitors . . .

"The anchor is weighed, and the ship moves with majestic grace over the dimpled waters. At length her large experimental guns are fired, and the immense range of the ponderous balls seem to realize all that valorous Stockton had foretold of their power . . .

"The ship is returning to her anchorage, and the feast is nearly ended. . . . The song still prevails and patriotic sentiments abound.

"The gallant commander and Upshur and Gilmer . . . have ascended to the deck, accompanied by a few friends. The Secretary of the Navy desires once more to witness the effect of a discharge from one of the guns, and the captain proceeds to comply with his wishes. The crowd below is in utter ignorance of what is passing above. A loud report is . . . heard, and does not at the moment arrest the song and merry jest. A mysterious whisper . . . reaches the crowd; anxiety, to be soon succeeded by dismay, prevails. The upper deck is reached, and there lies, sealed in death and already wrapped in the folds of that flag which was never looked upon by them while in life without imparting to their patriotic hearts a quickened pulsation, the two eminent Secretaries."

That is the way President Tyler told, in 1856, the story of that 1844 tragedy. Eleven years separated him from the White House, but the Presidential style—the old Presidential style—still moved his quill.

Why—oh, why—is it no longer to be found in the Executive Mansion? Why is it absent even from the desks of aspirants to what President Tyler and his predecessors would probably have called that historic administrative domicile?

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

'Eleanor Is All Right.'

Rockland, Me.

What sort of Sunday school outing is this Olympic expedition of the Free Americans that a lot of male Aunt Hatties are permitted to put their heads together, smacking their lips over a bit of scandal and dirty up the name of a decent young married woman with a public order of dismissal for drinking?

Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett, who has been drummed out of camp by the old ladies of both sexes in charge of the American team, is a champion swimmer and about the most human being in all respects that ever wore the American shield in Olympic competition. Her husband is a band leader, and band leaders work in night clubs. She probably met him in a night club, in the first place, and since their marriage she has gone trouping with him and spent some time around night clubs herself.

If she wants to drink cocktails and wine, that is strictly her business. Her only responsibility to the Olympic team was to shew up for the races sober and to do her best, both of which she was sure to do when the time came and both of which she did within the last few weeks, to win her place on the team for the third time in succession.

Eleanor is no child, and the Olympic team is no boarding school. She is an old campaigner as athletes go, and when a player has been competing up in the championship brackets for eight years the individual develops some personal ideas on training. The ordeal of training is not so hard the first few years, but after that it becomes not only a terrific bore to a person of any spirit but physical drudgery as well. I was talking the other evening with the father of a young woman who swam with our 1932 Olympic team in Los Angeles but passed up this year's competition even though she still makes Olympic time against the watch. He said he talked her out of this year's trials because she is at an age when she ought to have fun and the previous experience had shown that Olympic competition is a great strain over a period of a year or more and not worth the sacrifice.

Eleanor Jarrett is not the first great athlete to break training with a loud crash, and she bespeaks a line of thought on athletic training which has been justified by spectacular successes of athletes who will be remembered long after Avery Brundage's own performances in competitive sport have been forgotten. In fact, Mr. Brundage's performances as an exemplar of the milk-and-spinach system of training were forgotten a long time ago. It probably will surprise you to know that he was once an all-around track and field star himself.

Jim Corbett broke training on champagne whenever he found himself too fine drawn and, from all accounts, got cockeyed, just to relax. Then he would tighten up again as ringtime approached, timing his condition by his own knowledge of himself. Babe Ruth once went on the wagon for ten days at the height of his career and didn't hit as much as a pop foul until he stayed out all night, reported for work with a hangover that almost filled the park and hit three home runs in one game. Harry Greb, the greatest fighter of his time and one of the three or four best that ever lived, was a bottle-fed champion, and Mickey Walker, who was almost as good, went on year after year flouting the rules which Brundage arbitrarily laid down for Mrs. Jarrett just because they suited his own rather Babbittarian temperament more than 20 years ago.

* * * *

Back in the early days of American Olympic competition our teams included some full-grown men who drank when, as and if they pleased and ate corned beef and cabbage and won their events without benefit of curfew, calorie tables or chaperonage. Adult men and women are entitled to the same rights today, and the babying and tut-tutting imposed on people who are old enough to vote and bear arms or children in the A. A. Stagg and Fielding H. Yost school of athletics is an arrogant form of snoopery.

If there are children on the Olympic team and if Mr. Brundage must act the part of a male governess he can work out on them. And if he thinks it a new experience for an American child to see a grown woman feeling a little bit high, that just shows he doesn't get around much. The American child who has seen his or her own mother with a snootful is known by the name of legion.

Eleanor is all right, and, judging by her marks in the trials, it would be a swell idea to find out what kind of wine she was drinking and throw a party for the whole team.

Fear of War Blasts Hopes Of Europe's Youth for Peace

successfully defied by Italy, has been wooing Germany. France, haunted by Hitler, has been courting Italy.

But the two dictatorships, spurning their democratic suits, have chosen to make a "marriage of convenience" and now are honeymooning in Austria.

Weakness on the part of Great Britain and France has brought a decline to the League of Nations; for the League worked well only when these two were able to give her strong support. Some observers are convinced the League is passing away with other vestiges of the postwar peace machinery.

They point to the fact that after all wars the victors have formed blocs and alliances to safeguard their gains. These combinations have worked only so long as there was harmony among the victors. The League was a new kind of alliance to guard the gains reaped from the Versailles settlement. Now that so much discord prevails among the Versailles powers, however, the League may be passing into oblivion along with reparations and demilitarized zones.

Badly Shaken.

Whether or not this view is correct, the League has been so badly shaken by the conquest of Ethiopia, it can hardly be expected to deal with another problem of such magnitude for years to come.

Britain and France will probably make every effort to keep pressing political problems away from Geneva in order to give the League a breathing spell.

Meanwhile, the League will keep alive by increasing its activity in economic, social and financial fields. This life-saving device was successfully tried after the League's failure in Manchuria.

Despite its weakness, however, the League still remains the best mirror of European politics, for, sooner or later, all political currents swing toward Geneva. Looking into the League's mirror, this is how Europe appears:

1. Great Britain has not yet made up her mind whether Chancellor Hitler or Premier Mussolini constitutes the greatest menace. A majority of the British cabinet seems to feel that Mussolini is public enemy No. 1 because he threatened the empire, but a strong minority feels that Germany represents the greatest potential danger. Geneva believes Britain will continue to rearm feverishly, strengthen her communications in the Mediterranean against a possible thrust and try to keep on friendly terms with Germany. If Hitler strikes in eastern Europe, Britain will try to remain aloof. Only in case of an attack on Belgium and France will the British tommies march.

Germany Is Enemy.

2. France, unlike Great Britain, is certain that Germany is her enemy. The left wing government, which is fighting Facism at home, will continue former Premier Pierre Laval's policy of seeking Italy's aid against Germany at all costs. At the same time, France will cling to her alliance with powerful Soviet Russia and maintain her relations with Poland and the Little Entente. These alliances gave France her post-war hegemony on the continent, but this hegemony is fast declining. The reasons for this decline include: Firstly, remilitarization of the Rhineland reduces the effectiveness of French support to countries like Poland and Czechoslovakia, as a small German force behind the Rhineland fortifications might stave off the French while the German army swept eastern Europe; secondly, the French bid for Italian support repels countries like Jugoslavia who aligned themselves with France as protection against Italy; and thirdly, German's growing military strength is inspiring fear and respect throughout central and eastern Europe.

Geneva believes the most likely disturber of European peace is Germany. Few believe, however, that Hitler will strike against France or Belgium. Germans have no desire to batter their heads against the famous French Maginot chain of forts and they know that Britain probably will move against them if they strike in the west.

The recent Austro-German agreement opens up two other avenues for possible expansion. Germany may now move to the southwest along the prewar line or to the northeast to Danzig and the Baltic States to make a thrust at Russia, which some Nazis openly advocate.

Contrary to first impressions, the Austro-German agreement now seems a greater victory for Hitler than Mussolini. As one observer said, "Hitler became tired of shaking the Austrian apple tree. He can now wait until the ripe fruit falls into his lap."

While thus waiting, Germany's influence will continue to grow in southeast Europe. Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Reich minister of national economy, already has brought countries like Jugoslavia and Bulgaria into the Reich economic orbit. Other countries yearn for German armaments.

Might Revive Friction.

Any German expansion to the southeast, however, might revive German-Italian friction, which the Austro-German armistice temporarily banished. Expansion to the northeast risks trouble first of all with Poland. Danzig may fall to Germany if Polish claims in the free city can be satisfied. Similarly, it may be relatively safe to absorb Memel if Poland's qualms can be removed.

Then, however, the big gamble in the Baltic States would only begin.

Italy is in the strongest bargaining position she has enjoyed since the war as result of her victory over Ethiopia, her military strength in Europe and her reconciliation with Germany. So long as the Italo-German agreement lasts, Mussolini will be able to relax his watch over the Brenner pass. Thus he will obtain greater freedom in the Mediterranean and regain a mobile position in the European diplomatic game which Italian diplomacy has always sought.

The only clouds over Mussolini's plans are British enmity and Italy's weak economic position. The little entente consituted a check on Italy or German expansion in central and southeastern Europe, but even it has been badly shaken and Geneva is asking how long it can last.

Yugoslavia no longer feels she can expect French aid against Italy, which she fears will now seek to grab the Dalmatian coast. This may prompt Yugoslavia to jump to the German camp as protection against Italy.

It is well known that Berlin offered Belgrade many inducements, such as armaments, in return for farm products, and the Slavs say, "German armaments are worth having."

German influence also is strong in Roumania, where King Carol reputedly is pro-German. There also is a strong Nazi movement which is gaining ground daily. Thus far Roumania's energetic foreign minister, Nicholas Titulescue, has kept his country in the French camp, but nobody knows how long he can hold out.

Relieved by Accord.

Czechoslovakia, like Yugoslavia, is relieved by the Austro-German accord, which banishes the threat of immediate restoration of the Hapsburgs, but is worried about whether the long-heralded Anschluss is coming next.

An Austro-German union would put Czechoslovakia in a nutcracker between Austria and Germany with unfriendly Poland as another neighbor. Then it would become problematical whether Czechoslovakia could hold that part of her territory inhabited by 4,000,000 Germans.

The Balkan Entente would be shaken by similar conditions. Turkey will now be reinforced by fortification of the Dardanelles, but Greece continues to fear Italian bombers and warships. In fact, Greece, hitherto under British influence, is beginning to move closer to Italy.

In northeastern Europe, Poland is trying to keep the middle position between nations with which she might clash. She still retains her military agreement with France, but also is building up friendly relations with Germany, started two years ago with the signing of a friendship treaty.

Behind all these powers lies the unknown strength of Soviet Russia. The Soviets have now entered the League and see themselves as the foremost champions of peace. Russia has virtual alliances with France, Turkey and Czechoslovakia. It is reported that a Soviet air base has been established in Czechoslovakia and that the Russian air force is divided between Moscow and Bucharest.

Rumania is still hostile toward an alliance with Russia, and therefore the conecting link between Moscow and Bucharest is lacking.

Table Talk

By William Lyon Phelps

Book By Selden.

A small book that is filled with wit and wisdom, but is not nearly so well known to the general public as it should be, is the "Table Talk of John Selden;" any good bookshop, I think, will tell the inquirer where a copy may be bought.

Selden was a lawyer of the seventeeth century, who was born in 1584 and died in 1664, and is buried in the Temple Church in London. He was one of the most learned lawyers who ever lived; he was also an antiquarian, was possessed by an insatiable intellectual curiosity, and wrote books that are mausoleums of learning. His huge work, "Titles of Honour," published in 1614, is still the best authority on this subject. In 1618 he published a book on the "History of Tithes," for which he was brought before the privy council and was requested to change his mind on the subject. A little later, for his share in promoting individual liberty, he was placed in confinement in the Tower. He made good use of his leisure there by preparing an historical work. Not long after, he became a member of the House of Commons, and for some of his activities there, he was once more entertained at the Tower.

* * * *

This is what Selden thought about epitaphs. "An Epitaph must be made fit for the person for whom it is made. For a man to say all the excellent things that can be said upon one, and call that his epitaph, is as if a painter should make the handsomest piece he can possibly make, and say 'twas my picture. It holds in a funeral sermon."

Selden had an immense library; on the flyleaf of every one of his books he wrote in Greek, "Above all, Liberty."

Etiquette in Re Whales.

("The Berengaria went off her course to avoid a school of whales. 'We hit one once and it made a frightful mess. Always give way to whales and call it square,' said Capt. Peel."—News item.)

Always give way to a whale—
Its head or its torso or tail;
You can't get right of way
O'er a big one, they say—

II

It is best to be nice to these fish
And respect a cetacean's wish;
If you feel but one jar,
You have sunk it in par,
But the blow makes a terrible swish.

III

It is never good judgment to ram
Any whale with a "pow!" and a "wham!"
When a whale is at bath
Right ahead in your path

IV

When one smacks a large whale with a thud
While it's placidly chewing its cud,
It's not only the crash
That makes such conduct brash—
It's the excess of oil and of blood.

V

Whales will travel, you know, in a school,
And the ocean to them is a pool;
To hit one is an act
Somewhat lacking in tact—
If you hit more than one you're a fool!

VI

Oh, they love to disport in your course—
(After luncheon they like to play horse);
If you wish them to cease
It is best to say "Please"—
It's advisable not to use force!

VII

When at play they will stand on their tails,
Both the big lady whales and the males;
It's a wonderful sight
Though it doesn't seem bright
To the passengers lining the rails.

VIII

To bear off from a whale is astute,
Without stopping to shout or to toot:
For there's this simple truth—
If you hit one, forsooth,
It hurts you as much as the brute!

IX

So we hope when you're out on the main
And you see any whales in your lane
You'll give room and to spare
To those creatures out there—
And not make us remind you again!

Corn Farmers In Rush to Buy Canned Goods

By the Associated Press.

Omaha, Nebr., July 26.—Farmers in the heart of the corn belt turned from the plow to the can opener today as drought cut off more of their normal food supply.

Stocks of canned vegetables were bought up with such speed in Nebraska and Iowa stores that brokers and wholesalers in Omaha described it as an "hysterical buying wave * * * like a run on a bank."

Farmers were stocking up on canned goods in anticipation of saving money, the merchants asserted. The situation was aggravated by purchases of small-town housewives, whose home canning work the drought ruined.

Market in Chaos.

The sudden buying rush produced chaos in the market, and retail prices rose. Corn and peas in Omaha stores went up from 3 cans for 25 cents to 10 cents a can. Tomatoes rose from 3 for 25 to 9 cents straight. The price of string beans increased from 9 to 11 cents.

Into this gloomy situation was injected fear of still greater losses to agriculture in Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma, where temperatures have sizzled between 100 and 117 degrees for weeks while showers cooled other parts of the grain belt.

W. H. Brokaw, member of the special drought committee in Nebraska, said many farmers might have to kill young pigs because of a lack of cheap feed.

Corn Belt to Get Rain.

Of some cheer to Nebraska corn growers, who had despaired of saving any of their normal crop of 226,000,000 bushels, was the Chicago weatherman's forecast of local showers in some sections tonight and tomorrow.

The forecast said these rains also would scatter over Minnesota, Iowa, eastern and southern Kansas, northwestern Missouri, Wisconsin, Michigan, extreme northern Illinois and northern Indiana—much of the corn belt.

Cooler weather was promised the hard-bitten Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas and Minnesota.

The Weather Bureau advanced the opinion that the drought was "pretty well done away with" in the Ohio Valley.

Elsewhere in the Nation's farm center, however, the hot weather held its grip despite rains here and there for the last ten days. In the Chicago grain pits, corn prices rose again on the assumption that no rain could save the crop.

In Montana, the drought spread slowly westward, but showers reduced forest fire hazards. The WPA employed 2,000 on water conservation projects.

Wyoming Crops Total Loss.

Wyoming crops were reported a total loss in the Northeast. Stockmen said heavy cattle shipments had ceased. North Dakota's WPA lists jumped to 23,421 men as drought burned on. Most of South Dakota had been without moisture since July 4, and 10,000 farmers were working for the WPA. A 2-to-3-cent-a-quart increase in milk prices was indicated.

Minnesota needed more rain for its corn crop. Milk went up a cent a quart. There was a similar rise in Nebraska, where the State drought committee predicted the whole State would be in the emergency aid area in a few days.

In Iowa, Harrison County farmers asked to be placed in the emergency area. They estimated their corn crop was 70 per cent gone.

Oklahoma expected to join the emergency list unless rain fell in a week. Stock water was almost gone, crops almost completely ruined. The WPA asked 20,000 more jobs to aid farmers. Milk dealers proposed a 2-cent-a-quart price increase.

Wisconsin farmers, described as "much better off" than those in other States, got seed from the Government for new forage planting.

Army Couple Wed in Rites In Honolulu

Bishop Officiates at the Ceremony; Reception at Fort Shafter.

A marriage of interest in Washington took place July 22 in St. Andrew's Cathedral, Honolulu, Hawaii, when Miss Margaret Magruder became the bride of Lieut. Harold Webb Browning 2d, Bishop H. Littell officiating.

The bride is a daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Marshall Magruder, who are former Washingtonians, and the bridegroom is a son of Col. and Mrs. W. S. Browning, now stationed here.

Palms and Easter lilies decorated the church, and on the altar were white calla lilies and white candles, in large seven-branch candelabra. The ceremony was at 8:30 Wednesday evening.

The bride, who was attended by her sister, Miss Anne Marshall Magruder, as maid of honor, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of ivory chiffon over ivory satin, with shirred bodice, long flared sleeves, corded around the cuffs, and a fitted skirt, cut on princess lines and widening into a long, flowing train of satin and chiffon, finished at the bottom with rows of cording like that on the sleeves.

Her veil, of ivory Brussels lace, was formed into a closely fitted cap with high ruching at the back of the head, held in place with two strands of pikaki flowers.

Her sister wore orchid organza over orchid taffeta, made as a redingote, with front opening and a light train, the waitline caught with tiny covered buttons. The bodice had puffed sleeves trimmed in flat knife pleating of the same material, which also formed the short upstanding collar. Her Juliet cap was of strands of pikaki flowers.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Jean Peyton Sullivan, Jean Taylor, Ruth Ellen Patton, Mrs. Dale Means, Mrs. Earl Truesdell and Mrs. William Train. Their gowns were of orchid-flowered net over orchid taffeta fashioned alike on princess lines, with shirred bodice dresses ending in a slight train and capes of the net, waist length in back and shorter in front, with a double ruching forming the collars and edging the capes. Their Juliet caps were like that of the maid of honor.

Little Miss Carlotta Prichard, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Vernon Prichard, was flower girl. She wore a frock of white net made in Kate Greenway style, with orchid ribbon at the waist and forming a long sash. In her hair was a coronet of pikaki flowers, and she carried a garden hat filled with sweetheart roses.

Lieut. Paul Turner was best man. The ushers, Lieut. William Train, Lieut. Alvin Welling, Lieut. Craig, Lieut. Christian Clarke, Lieut. James Worthington and Lieut William Northam, formed the traditional arch with their sabers, beneath which the bridal couple walked after the ceremony.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents in Fort Shafter Honolulu, followed the wedding. Her mother wore apple-green chiffon, with brown accessories, and a corsage of gardenias.

Lieut. Browning and his bride will reside at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, where he is on duty with the Twenty-seventh Infantry.

His parents, Col. and Mrs. Browning, who have been in West Point several weeks, are expected to return to Washington this week.

Alice Hunter Here For Sylvan Fete

Returns From Visit to Dance Farm in N. H.

Miss Alice Louise Hunter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Albert Hunter, who has been spending several weeks at the Lisa Gardiner summer dance farm, in Acworth, N. H., has returned to begin rehearsals for the Summer Festival concert at the Sylvan Theater August 4, in which she will direct the dance group.

Miss Hunter was accompanied by Miss Marjorie Beall and Miss Fillis Speich, who have also been at Acworth. She will be assisted in the forthcoming concert by Mr. Ray Williams, of Baltimore, who will arrive tomorrow from Gardiner's Hill to rehearse with the dancers.

Last season Miss Lisa Gardiner bought an old farm in the New Hampshire hills where she is conducting a summer dance camp for artist students. Several of them, including Miss Frances Rand, formerly of the Gardiner Dancers of this city and now on the professional stage in New York, are spending the summer there. An old barn has been fitted up as a studio and informal programs are presented under the direction of Miss Gardiner and Michael Nicholoff.

Miss Graeme to Leave For New England Tour

Miss Alice Graeme will leave today for a tour of art exhibits in New England, on which she will write a series of magazine articles. Later, she will go to Bar Harbor, Me., to visit her mother until fall, when she will return to the Capital.

During her absence, the home she has recently leased on Bolta place, in Georgetown, will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Ross, who are building a new residence in Alexandria.

Mrs. Francis S. Whitten has returned from Hot Springs, where she has been on a visit, and will leave shortly for Virginia Beach with her daughter, Frances.

Mrs. Charles R. Shepard, of Washington, is at the Meadow Brook Club in Southampton following a visit with Mrs. J. Frederick Schenck at Valley Head, Lenox.

Mrs. Skirvin Adams has as her guest at her Newport home Mrs. Chester L. Dane, of Bedford Hills, N. Y.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Resident

The Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther, who has been at his summer home in Bluemont with his daughters and a group of friends who arrived with them from Germany a short time ago, will go to Schroon Lake, N. Y., in August to visit Mr. Lawrence Townsend, former Ambassador to Belgium, and Mrs. Townsend. Mr. and Mrs. Townsend are at Beach Hill Farm, their estate overlooking Schroon Lake.

The retiring Minister of Bolivia, Senor Don Enrique Finot, who, with Senora de Finot and their niece, Senorita Gloria de Finot, has been in New York City, will return to Washington tomorrow to make final preparations for sailing for South America on August 1.

The minister, who is returning there to assume his duties as Secretary of state, a post to which he has recently been appointed, will go first to Buenos Aires, while his wife and niece will go directly to Bolivia.

Mr. and Mrs. Marc Peter, jr., have returned to Milton, Mass., from New York. They intend to remain the rest of the summer at their Milton home. Mrs. Peter, whose wedding took place last month at Gardner, Me., is the former Miss Frances Gardner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hallowell Gardner, of Brookline. Mr. Peter is the son of the Minister of Switzerland.

Spanish Attache Visiting New York.

Senor Don Jose G. de Gregorio, second secretary of the Spanish Embassy, has been spending a few days in New York City, at the Ambassador Hotel.

Commander and Mrs. David I. Hedrick, their daughter, Miss Peggy Hedrick, and son, Mr. William Hedrick, are expected to arrive this week in Washington. Commander Hedrick, who has been on the Pacific Coast, will be stationed here three years.

They came East from Long Beach, Calif., and have been visiting Mrs. Hedrick's mother, Mrs. G. H. Bull, in Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y.

Miss Margaret Wentworth is the guest of Mrs. Clinton B. Patrick, of Hastings, N. Y., for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, who have been at their Upper St. Regis camp, left this week-end for Roslyn. The 20 juniors, children of friends, who have been Mrs. Davies' guests at the camp also have returned to their homes.

Commander and Mrs. T. A. Kinkaid, of Washington, stopped at the Brown Swan Club, Schroon Lake, N. Y., for a short stay en route to Murray Bay.

Mrs. Tucker, Son Visit in Florida.

Mrs. McKeldin Tucker and her son, Howard, are in Miami Beach, Fla., the guests of her mother, Mrs. Leigh Palmer.

Commander Marion Y. Cohen, U. S. N., has arrived with his family in Washington for duty and they plan to spend several weeks at the Martinique.

Miss Marcella Kathryn Cordua, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sabina Cordua, of Galveston, Tex., whose marriage to Mr. Anthos Daniel Grazzini, son of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Grazzini, of New York, will take place August 1, was guest of honor at a luncheon and bridge given last week at Olney Inn by Miss Vivian Hayes.

Mr. Girard Swope, jr., leaves Friday for a cruise along the New England coast with Mr. Michael Strauss, of this city, and other friends.

George Conklin Aid at Wedding

Best Man at Marriage of Miss Elizabeth Blair to His Brother.

Mr. George Conklin, of Washington, was best man for his brother, Dr. William Schmidiapp Conklin, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Conklin, of Santa Barbara, Calif., on Saturday, in his marriage to Miss Elizabeth Blair, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Sutton Blair, of Indiana, Pa., which took place there. Another Washingtonian in the wedding party was Mr. Brooke Fleck, who was among the ushers.

The bridegroom is well known here, as he is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Cabot Stevens, and has frequently visited in the Capital. Mr. and Mrs. Stevens, Dr. and Mrs. Custis Lee Hall, and Miss Mary Wing were others from here who were present at the wedding.

The ceremony was performed at the First Presbyterian Church in Indiana Saturday evening by the Rev. Robert Clarke. The bride wore a gown of white satin, with a long court train, and a tulle veil, simply arranged. Her colonial bouquet was of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Her matron of honor was Mrs. David Hall Blair, of Indiana; her maid of honor, Miss Margaret Conklin, of Santa Barbara, and her bridesmaid, Mrs. Robert E. Lewis, of Indiana. They were gowned alike in white organza, made with full skirts and the necklines of the bodices trimmed in deep ruffles bound in green taffeta. Their bouquets were of gladioli and maidenhair fern.

Ushers, in addition to Mr. Fleck, were Mr. Charles Conklin, of Atlanta, Ga., a brother of the bridegroom; Mr. David Hall Blair, a brother of the bride, and Mr. Custis Haynsworth, of Greenville, S. C.

Dr. Conklin and his bride will reside in Monrovia, Calif.

Former Gov. Pollard Back From Vacation

Spends Ten Days at Wharton Grove, Near Weems.

Former Gov. John Garland Pollard of Virginia has just returned to Washington, after spending a ten-day vacation at Wharton Grove, near Weems, Lancaster County, Va., on the Rappahannock River. Before leaving, he turned over his "Remarkable Remarks" to Mr. J. E. Currell, editor of the Rappahannock Record, a weekly paper, published in Kilmarnock, in which they are to be published.

Some years ago Dr. Pollard published a little volume of amusing sayings under the name of "A Connotary." He started the search for these sayings as a pleasant relaxation from the duties of public office. Among those collected were many that did not fit into the requirements of the "Connotary." These, which Dr. Pollard placed under a separate head and named "Remarkable Remarks," will now appear in the Rappahannock paper.

Mrs. Williams Is Entertained

Is Honored at Tea Given by Mrs. Maffitt at Hot Springs.

Mrs. John R. Williams was the guest in whose honor Mrs. William Maffitt, of St. Louis, entertained at tea at the Patch, her home in Hot Springs, Va., on Thursday.

Among her guests were Mrs. Ormsby McCammon, who is spending July at the Homestead with Mrs. Williams; Mrs. Henry Ravenel, Mrs. William R. Castle, Mrs. Lee P. Warren, Mrs. Ingalls Sard, Mrs. William McKee Dunn, Mme. Felipe A. Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador; Mrs. Charles Hayes, Mrs. James B. Weir, Mrs. Richmond A. Ware, Mrs. Graham Cootes, Mrs. Faris R. Russell, Mrs. Allan M. Hirsh, Mrs. Philip Hirsh, Mrs. Daniel H. Holmes, Mrs. William Clark, Mrs. F. S. Munsell, Mrs. Frank Lawrence and Mrs. John W. Geary, of New York.

Mrs. Lee Benotis, Mrs. Ira Wight, Mrs. Walter West, Mrs. Charles McLure Clark, Mrs. Denman Clark, Mrs. Stanley Stoner, Mrs. Stoner Carling, Miss Ellen Bates, Mrs. Thomas Pierce and Miss Roberta Pierce, of St. Louis; Mrs. George Warrington, of Cincinnati; Mrs. Thomas W. Vardell, Mrs. Lela Johnson, Mrs. H. L. Edwards and Miss Betty Edwards.

Mrs. Williams gave a dinner in the colonial room that evening for Mr. John White Geary, Mrs. Ormsby McCammon, Mrs. William Maffitt and Miss Ellen Bates.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Thilman Hendricks gave a luncheon at the Cascade Club Friday for Mrs. E. H. Droop and Mrs. James B. Weir. Mr. and Mrs. John W. Geary, jr., were among Mr. and Mrs. William R. Castle's guests at the club, and Mr. and Mrs. Lee P. Warren also had luncheon there.

Frank Steeles Return After 6,800-Mile Trip

Visit to Main for S. A. R. Congress Included in Itinerary.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Steele, although they are "staying home" this summer, have traveled 6,800 miles in their car since April.

Mr. Steele, who is secretary general of the Sons of the American Revolution and editor of the quarterly S. A. R. magazine, drove to Maine in May to attend the national congress of the organization in Portland. He and Mrs. Steele plan to drive to Plymouth the first of September for the annual Labor Day ceremonies, celebrating the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers.

He is governor of the Mayflower Society here and will represent the District chapter at the celebration which will mark the triennial of the Mayflower's voyage. The actual landing of the Pilgrims was in December, Mr. Steele admits, with a conscience for historical accuracy, but the event is always celebrated in September, possibly because the Mayflower descendants are less hardy than their ancestors and have an aversion to winter weather, he thinks.

In June Mr. and Mrs. Steele made a trip to Buffalo, where he acted as toastmaster at a banquet honoring a former schoolmate, Miss Gertrude Bacon, who was retiring after 40 years as a member of the faculty of the State Teachers College there.

Mr. Steele's grandfather, the late Oliver G. Steele, established the institution, then the Buffalo State Normal School, and was first chairman of its board of trustees. He also was first superintendent of schools in Buffalo and probably in the United States, as Buffalo was the first city to have a school system with a superintendent at its head.

Mr. and Mrs. Steele had as their guest for three days last week Mr. Messmore Kendall, president general of the Sons of the American Revolution, who owns in Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., the house there which was once Washington's headquarters. Mr. Kendall is owner of the Capitol Theater in New York City.

Roadside Group Sets Premiere

'Windmills of Manhattan' to Be Given Tonight at Theater.

Members of Washington society who are remaining in the Capital for the summer have been patronizing the productions at the Roadside Theater, where large audiences have attended the nightly performances of melodramas such as were popular in the gay 90's.

Tonight, in keeping with the policy of the Roadside Players to produce one new play each season, "Windmills of Manhattan" will be presented, with the playwrights, Judith and David Bublick, of New York, in the audience. The premiere production is expected to draw those who are interested not only as regular patrons of the Roadside Theater, but also as followers of new plays possibly destined for Broadway.

Among the "first-nighters" will be Dr. John A. Fleming, Lieut. Carlo Tucci, of the Italian Embassy; Mr. Prentiss Taylor, Mr. Joseph Hayden, Mr. Edward Larkin, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick V. Rand, Mr. Sherwood Hall 3d, Miss Emma P. Hahn, Dr. N. D. Campbell, Mr. Paul C. Daniels, Miss Elizabeth O. Cullen, Mr. and Mrs. Geoffrey Creyk, Capt. and Mrs. Walter H. Allen, Mrs. Roy Dove, Miss Shirley Dove, Miss Nellie Breuninger, Mr. and Nagel Haskin, and Mr. Frederick J. Haskin, jr.

Among those who have made reservations for later in the week are Mr. P. M. Hoffheins, Mr. Frederick Tilp, Mr. E. G. Lunn, Miss Virginia Hattey, Mr. H. R. Addison, Miss Florence E. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. George D. Mitchell, Dr. B. L. Jarmon, Miss Elsa M. Peterson, Mr. James E. Lamb, Mrs. C. S. Scott, and Mr. and Mrs. Lee D. Butler.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Adelaide Zipperstein, of this city, formerly of Cleveland, to Mr. Benjamin W. Bernstein, of Chicago. The wedding will take place at the home of his parents there on August 30.

Dr. Owen S. Parrett, medical director of the Washington Sanitarium, and Mrs. Parrett, with their son and daughter, Mr. Vernon Parrett and Miss Marjory Jean Parrett, have returned to Takoma Park after two months spent in California.

On their return they were accompanied by their son and daughter-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Virgil Parrett and their small daughter, Cora Darlene.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frank are spending some time in Bangor, Me.

Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

Pretty Marie Louise McIlhenny, daughter of Mrs. Edgar Allen Poe, of Baltimore, was here a few days ago to bid good-by to friends and relatives before sailing with her mother for England to be a bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Anna Vavasseur Fisher and Mr. Tom Clark.

Miss Fisher, daughter of Lord and Lady Fisher, of Kilverstone Hall, Thetford, Norfolk, last season was the guest of Mrs. Randall Morgan, of Philadelphia, by whom she was presented to American society. It was there she met Mr. Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Clark, of Willoughby, Cynwyd, Pa., and their romance was begun.

Miss McIlhenny made her debut in Baltimore last season and was entertained here and also in Philadelphia, where she was among the group of debutantes who became close friends of the young English visitor. Miss Fisher has chosen her sister, Miss Katherine Vasseur Fisher, as maid of honor for her wedding, which will take place in the parish church at Norfolk August 12. Many Americans now in London will attend the reception to follow at Kilverstone Hall.

It is interesting to recall that Miss Fisher's mother was Miss Jane Morgan, of Philadelphia, and went to England to live after her marriage to a titled Engishman. Now her daughter is marrying an American and will live in this country after the honeymoon.

Lieut. Comdr. Felix Johnson, United States Navy, and Mrs. Johnson and their two young daughters will sail August 16 for Rio de Janiero, where Commander Johnson has been assigned. Mrs. Johnson was Miss Fay Doyen, who lived in Washington during the World War. Her father, Brig. Gen. Charles Doyen, was commandant at the Marine Barracks in the first days of the war, and afterward was with Marine forces overseas.

Commander and Mrs. Johnson have been stationed in Annapolis and recently were the guests of Mrs. Johnson's aunt, Mrs. Joseph Valiant, at Wardour, Md.

Lieut. and Mrs. Ganahl Will Entertain Marine and Artillery Players.

Lieut. and Mrs. Joseph Ganahl will entertain at tea at their quarters in Fort Myer Wednesday afternoon for the members of the Quantico Marine polo team and the Sixteenth Field Artillery team, of which Lieut. Ganahl is captain. The tea will follow a consolation match between the teams at Potomac Park Wednesday afternoon as the final game of the Intra-Circuit Tournament, won yesterday by the Third Cavalry Yellow team, playing Fort Hoyle.

Lieut. Ganahl, who is on temporary duty at Fort Hoyle, will play with the Artillery team Wednesday. The referees will be Lieut. Henry Leubbermann and Capt. Harry Stadler, who will also be guests at the tea. Maj. LeRoy Martin and Maj. Robert McClure refereed yesterday's match. A tea was to have been given for the teams after the game, but plans for it were abandoned when it was found the Fort Hoyle players were obliged to return home directly after the end of the tournament.

Capt. Charles Hancock Reed, who has been in charge of the tournament, and Mrs. Reed entertained at their quarters after the match between the West Shore Club, of Harrisburg, and Fort Hoyle on Friday.

Miss Stokes Will Return To U. S. Soon

Has Been in Ireland and England on Business and Pleasure.

Will Go to Connecticut, to Be With Her Mother and Brother.

Miss Olivia Stokes, daughter of Canon Anson Phelps Stokes of Washington Cathedral, and Mrs. Stokes, is sailing from England in a few days on her return to the United States.

She has been on a fishing trip in Ireland and also attended the London conference of the Red Cross. She has been active here in Red Cross work and early in the spring attended a conference in Chicago with Miss Mabel Boardman.

Miss Stokes will go to Greenwich, Conn., on her arrival in New York to join her mother, who expects to leave tomorrow for their summer home there, accompanied by her son, the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, jr., of Shreveport, La. The Rev. Mr. Stokes has been visiting his parents here for the last week and he and his mother will motor to New York, visiting friends there and then going to Connecticut.

Canon Stokes and his younger son, Mr. Isaac Newton Phelps Stokes 2d, like Miss Stokes, enjoy fishing. They will leave Friday for Canada for a two-week canoe and fishing trip and will be joined there by the Rev. Mr. Anson Stokes, who will spend a few days with them before returning to Louisiana.

Miss Stokes and her mother will remain in Greenwich until fall, Mr. Isaac Stokes, who has been with the Securities and Exchange Commission here, will go to New York in the fall, where he will be with a private law firm.

Ex-Gov. Winant Back From Geneva Visit

Former Gov. John Winant, of New Hampshire, now chairman of the Social Securities Board, has returned from Geneva, where he spent several weeks.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Turn to "The Great Teacher" for Guidance in Solving Others' Problems, Correspondent Advises Columnist.

MY DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Before I left Washington for a summer outing I had been thinking, and still am thinking, of the serious responsibility you assume in answering the questions put to you—particularly those questions regarding the breaking up of homes of others. I feel that if you desire to build character, to have your work stand for good and not for evil, you can find no better foundation upon which to base your answers than the words of the Great Teacher:

* * * *

"And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish and not thy whole body should be cast into hell. And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish and not that the whole body should be cast into hell."

* * * *

In this changing world the principles of truth and righteousness remain unchanged. Some time ago, in such a column as you conduct, I remember reading the following advice based upon the above. The advice was in regard to the attention an attractive young woman in an office was receiving from her employer, a married man. First the columnist dwelt on the fact that when a man leaves his home early in the morning his wife, with her family cares and responsibilities (which she has undertaken for him) may be less attractive in attire and less bright in manner than the young girl or older one, in her fresh pretty clothes, to which she gives time and thought not possible to many married women.

But there was no compromise with evil in the advice proffered, which was to the effect that no matter at what sacrifice to herself, if the young woman saw that her employer's affections were becoming involved, it was her duty to give up her position and seek employment elsewhere, thus taking the road leading to lasting happiness. Sincerely, MRS. F. S. C.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. F. S. C.: While I appreciate the sincerity of your intention in fashioning the foregoing communication and am complimented by your interest in my work, I beg to advise that I have been, from the first, completely aware of the grave responsibility resting on the shoulders of one who conducts a column such as this. I agree with you that the person builds on sand who lets compromise with evil creep into his philosophy of life, and that there is no more mistaken person on earth than the girl who conspires with a married man to undermine the foundations of his married life.

M. H.

Country Girl's Problem.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a country girl 20 years of age and I am deeply in love with a man of 30. I have been going with him for several years. He likes drinking, card playing and dancing, but I don't care for that kind of diversion. At first he seemed to care a lot for me, but now he has almost forsaken me.

* * * *

There is another boy not far from my home who seems to be very much in love with me, but I don't care a great deal for him. I have been trying hard to make up my mind whether to keep on pinning my hopes on the man I love, or to try to close my heart against him and make an effort to care for the other boy. Please tell me what you think I should do. I would appreciate it if you could publish your reply this week, as I am anxious to know the right thing to do.

BROKEN HEARTED.

* * * *

DEAR BROKEN HEARTED: There is no question here of what you should do, but only of what you must do—and that is to forget the older man. He already has lost interest in you, which is reason enough why you should not continue "pinning your hopes" on him, and since your likes and dislikes are so dissimilar, it was inevitable that one or the other of you would cease eventually to care for the other. Since you are so young, I don't see the necessity of your trying to force yourself to love the other man, simply because he is the only current suitor for your affections. Accept his attentions, if you like, without giving him any false encouragement, but try to get the idea firmly fixed in your mind that you have a lifetime ahead in which to meet other men who may be at once more congenial and more lovable than either of these two.

Bold Child Often Lacks Imagination

Juvenile Fears Once Told to Sympathetic Parent Are Half Overcome.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

ONE of the famous characters of medieval days was "the fool who knows no fear."

It was not, be it noted, "the fearless man," but the "fearless fool."

The disitnction means something. The man who does not know fear may not be a fool, but he is probably lacking in imagination. The brave man is often afraid, but has learned to control himself and do his duty in spite of his fear.

This is the ideal toward which children can and should be trained. If a child is imaginative or fanciful, he is bound to be afraid. His fears may be unreal, but are none the less powerful. As long as his brain is active, he will conjure up images of terror. It is useless and unwise to call him a coward or to laugh at him.

Half the shell-shock cases of war and peace are the result of shame and repression of a natural fear. The child has been forced by pressure from without to be ashamed of his nervousness and hide it.

Shame lies, not in acknowledging fear, but in giving in to it. Accept the child's confession that he is afraid to go into a dark room with friendly indifference. Most grown people are secretly afraid of the dark, too, or have been at some time in their lives. This is the moment to confess to it, giving the child help that he may remember always.

"Yes, I am afraid of the dark, too. But if I yielded to that fear, I should be hampered in all my activities. I could not even go in to you when you called at night. So I just accept it as a fact and do what must be done without thinking about it."

Fear once confessed to a sympathetic listener is half overcome. If, after all, one is not different from others, there is nothing to worry about.

Writing Thank-You Letter

WRITING a "thank-you" letter can be a real sticker sometimes.

Polly's fretting away over thanking Jack for sending her roses. If it only were Dan, whom she knows so well! But she's just known Jack a few weeks. That letter must be perfect.

Well, Polly, here's an easy rule for thank-you letters. First tell the sender the gift has arrived, and name it. "Your exquisite roses arrived this morning, a mass of lovely pale gold."

Then thank the sender. "It was delightful of you to send them, and very clever of you to remember my favorite shade."

Then say what you are doing with your gift. "They are here on the table, in the best-looking vase in the house, and their perfume is everywhere."

One, two, three, and you're through. A thank-you letter need not be long but it shouldn't sound hurried.

Of course you will not write your "thank-you" on business-like stationery. That is suited only to business letters and letters of intimate friends. Write social notes, such as a thank-you letter, invitation, and so on, on note-paper, and put address and date at end, on lower left side.

Clear up these doubtful points with our 40-page booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Helpful sample letters on congratulations, sympathy, invitations, business matters. A sure, specific guide through your letters problems.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Suntan Seekers Urged to Avoid Long Exposure

"Take it easy, in small doses," is the advice most physicians give regarding suntan. But Dr. Charles L. Bossert, veteran physician of the beach patrol at Atlantic City goes further than that and adds nine more rules for those in search of vacation sunburns.

He advises, for example, "Don't sleep on the beach in the direct rays of the sun," and "Don't sit in the sun when the body is wet after bathing."

Among the other "don'ts" in his list of recommendations are these:

"Don't go bareheaded in strong sunlight.

"Don't read books or play cards in the direct rays of the sun.

"Don't forget that blondes and brunettes react differently to the sun's rays; blondes burn more easily.

New Modes Help "Stylish Stouts" Achieve Dash

The mid-season jacket-frocks shown above were designed to give the stout woman slenderizing lines. Both jackets are cut along full lines and swing loosely from the shoulders; the below-elbow sleeves are also important features. The white crepe frock has a slot pleat down the front, gores in the skirt and the correct type of neckline. The leaf-green and white printed chiffon afternoon ensemble has flattering touches of embroidered organdy. Its accompanying hat, although small, is given added height and width by clever manipulation of stiffened veiling.

Theories of Somber Dress for Matronly Figures Antiquated.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

ARE YOU ADDING unecessary years to your age by dressing matronly just because you are not as slim as a reed. Weight, not age, is the modern guidepost to smart and becoming groming; but the old ideas, including very stringent rules about what you should and should not wear, have been modified so as to be hardly recognizable.

Line is more important to watch than color, if you have an excess of avoirdupois. Costumes, so styled to conceal bulges and paddings of flesh, and silhouettes well thought out to give an illusion of slenderness—are a boon to the stout woman. While there is still a lot of talk about dieting and exercising to get slim, parodoxically as it may seem, designers have taken a new interest in creating clothes for the woman with too solid flesh, who seemingly wants to stay that way.

Incoming styles are kind to the not-so-slender woman.

The popular tunic can be worn by her in the long—but not short—versions. Capes offset hip breadth and make the figure appear taller. The same is true of jackets, about fingertip in length, of the loose, boxy type. Short capes, jackets and tunics emphasize stoutness and detract from the general feeling of streamlined contours.

Prints and subtle checks, contrary to the old rules, may be worn by the matronly woman. However, they should be conservative in pattern as well as color. Small, all-over designs in subtle rather than brilliant color combinations are the best choice; used alone, or relieved by toucnes of white. It is all wrong for the stout woman to go completely tailored, because unless softly and intelligently modified so as to take away from the severity of the tailor, it calls attention to, rather than camouflages, her avoirdupois.

High necklines are no longer taboo, although V treatments and revere effects are not so unkind, particularly to a short necked person, as choker and rounded collars. Normal waistlines and narrow belts of self-material should be a must when selecting street or afternoon frocks; an exception to this rule may be a dark belt on a light-colored costume, when the frock itself is equipped with parallel tucks or pleats which produce a slenderizing appearance. Large forearms should be completely covered-capped or flowing effects for evening and below-elbow lengths for daytime.

Skirts should have an easy fullness, a slight flare and a bit longer length than the current styles; which are much too short for stouts, cutting height and giving a dumpy appearance. The new wide shoulders, if not too exaggerated, are grand details, as they counterbalance wide hips. Extra fullness for both bodice and skirt is an important note to remember—such garments are not only more attractive than those which span the figure, but are figure flatterers and disguise plumpness.

High heels are not sensible for the large woman, although she need not confine herself to low heels entirely, as those of medium build are not only smarter but just as comfortable if well made. The hat question is a matter of judgment—any hat, large or small, which sufficiently balances the face and figure will be correct. Wide-brimmed hats, however, should be shallow and smaller hats are usually best when trimming is added to give the illusion of extra height and width.

Black is obviously the best color choice, but any of the dark colors or soft pastels are right if fashioned to promote slender lines; even white can be worn by the modern stout if the styling is well-planned for her figure. This is equally true of evening and daytime clothes.

Even Checks and Stripes May Be Utilized Effectively.

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

HE LEFT THE ROOM, and then came back with, "I say, Iris, I am a fool, and no mistake! I thought you had packed the keys of the castle by mistake, but now I find they are in my luggage!"

"In your luggage?" She looked surprised, as well she might.

He was holding the bunch of keys out with a deprecating expression. "I suppose I'd better do them up and send them off to the marchioness registered."

"I know she intended Troutbeck to go all over the castle today, to see if we'd done any damage," and Iris began to laugh in her old way.

Then again her face became grave. "I do think, darling, we ought to get through to Lilyford. The garage man must know if anything has happened to one of his cars."

"We'll do that if there's no news this morning."

Addresses Box of Keys.

"Very well. Then I'll go out, now, for I've got a lot of things to buy before this house will be habitable," she said wearily.

"Would you like me to run you up to Selfridge's?"

She shook her head. "It isn't far, and a walk will do me good. I can't help feeling anxious about poor little Ruth. What can have happened to her?"

He said nothing to that, but he was engaged in packing up the bunch of keys in a small box, and addressing the box to his aunt.

"Perhaps you could post this parcel?"

"Of course I will," and she hurried off, to meet, at a yard from the front door, George Dwight.

A look at his face was enough. He brought no good news, indeed he exclaimed: "I thought I'd come and see if Ruth had arrived."

"But my husband told you she hadn't come, when he telephoned ten minutes ago. You must have had a very quick taxi," and she felt unreasonably annoyed.

"Capt. Trefahe hasn't telephoned to me this morning."

For a moment or two Iris said nothing. She was trying to remember exactly what Philip had said. Then she exclaimed: "He got through to the hotel, I know. Probably he asked the reception clerk, if he could get no answer from your room."

"We're going to get through to the man in Lilyford where Ruth got the motorcar which was to bring her to London."

"You don't mean to say that she may never have started?" he exclaimed.

"Of course I don't mean that. The castle is entirely empty. There isn't even a caretaker there. As a matter of fact the keys were packed by mistake, and I'm just going to send them off, registered, to Lady Cicester. Perranuth castle belongs to her, and she lives close by," and she showed him the little box.

"Why, Mrs. Trefane, let me do that job for you, and let me get through to the man at Lilyford. I've nothing to do, and it will be a charity to make me busy."

She looked at him, and asked herself why, after all, he shouldn't do both those rather tiresome jobs. It would save her a weary wait in a public postoffice, and Philip quite a number of shillings for a long distance call. Also she felt very tired, and knew that she had before her an hour to spend walking from department to department of a great store.

"Very well, but you must let me pay for the registered parcel," and she began fumbling in her bag.

"Nonsense!" he said, smiling. And she told herself that he was certainly good to look upon—this American beau of dear little Ruth.

So she smiled back: "The place is Crosland's garage. Will you go along and tell my husband anything you may have heard, after you've telephoned to Lilyford? He feels very worried and anxious—and I need hardly tell you how anxious I am. You see I have become really fond of Ruth Starling."

She spoke with feeling, and the young man felt touched. He had not liked her, while well aware of her rare and exquisite beauty, when they had first met.

"D'you think it possible that there may have been an accident?"

It was that thought which had been tormenting him.

Relieved at News.

"We thought of that last night, and my husband telephoned to Scotland Yard, late. We were given a bad fright, for we heard of a couple who had been killed. But this morning Scotland Yard rang up and said that they were a couple coming back from their honeymoon. If there has been an accident it must be a slight one. All serious accidents are tabulated at once."

He looked intensely relieved.

So she hurried on, while he found his way to the nearest postoffice. There he waited patiently till at last he got through to the proprietor of the Lilyford garage to hear: "Well, yes, sir, we did get an order for a car from the young lady staying at Perranuth castle. One of my lads took the message, yesterday morning, early. But when our car got there the chauffeur found the place shut up. He rang, and banged on the front door, but he couldn't make anybody hear."

"Does that mean that Miss Starling never started for London at all?"

"She may have started for London, sir, for she may have gone by train, but she didn't have the car she ordered from me."

And then suddenly the speaker exclaimed: "I'll tell you what I expect happened, sir! Ladies and gentlemen have altered a lot since I was a young chap. In the old days a lady would have taken any trouble to let us know the car she'd ordered wasn't wanted. But I could tell you some funny things about the young ladies and gentlemen of today. I expect someone offered Miss Starling a lift to London. Maybe someone from the manor house. If I was you, sir, I'd get on to the manor house."

"What is the manor house?"

"Old Lady Cicester lives there with her son, Lord John." The voice dropped into a confidential murmur: "It is said that Lord John and this young American lady were great friends, sir. Lord John has a big car of his own, and Lady Cicester has one. I should think one of them two may have lent Miss Starling a car. Why, Lord John may have driven her up himself, for the matter of that."

"D'you know the telephone number of those people?" asked the young man in a hard tone.

"The manor house itself isn't on the telephone, but they've lately had it put into their garage, quite a long way from the house. There's generally somebody hanging about the garage. People do send messages, too, through the village postoffice. I'll give you both numbers, and then you can telephone to whichever you think best."

The two numbers were given to him, and after some hesitation he decided he would get through to the garage.

The result was unsatisfactory. The man who answered him said that yes, he knew Miss Starling, and that she had gone up to London with Mrs. Trefane yesterday. No, none of the cars belonging to the manor house had had anything to do with the young lady, not as far as he knew, that is, for he seemed nervously afraid of being caught out in saying something he ought not to say.

At last George Dwight asked the straight question, "You don't think Miss Starling went to London with Lord John?"

"Why no, sir, that's impossible. Lord John has been away on a visit the other side of the country and is coming back by train this afternoon. I'm meeting his lordship myself at Lilyford. If I was you, sir, I'd get on to the postoffice. Miss Starling is sure to have left her address there."

Miss Helen Boswell, Platform Veteran, Boasts 20 Minute Limit on Speeches

Women are not only having a chance to prove their ability as speakers today, but also to show whether they agree with Phillips Brooks' theory that "no soul was ever saved after 20 minutes."

Miss Helen Varick Boswell, veteran of many campaigns, is one woman orator who believes Mr. Brooks was right. Recently taking her place as head of the women speakers' bureau for the Republican National Committee, she boasted that of all the speeches she has ever made, not one ever exceeded 20 minutes. She has appeared on the platform in every State, and has attended each Rpublican convention since 1896.

The GENTLER SEX . . .

By Malvina Lindsay.

At the Office.

The Desk Opposite.

"It certainly makes me sick."

"What?"

"The way we have to slave around here. Just look at the other departments . . . the way they loaf——"

"Yeh, look at the girls in the front office . . . one of 'em's always stretched out in the rest room."

"Look at the third floor. Just look at the way they sit around . . . honestly they don't do anything! I just ask you what do they do?"

"Don't ask me. Look at the second floor. I ask you what do they do? Did you ever see so many people sitting around? What could they all be doing?"

"Say, every department in this building but ours is overstaffed . . . honestly, there's not another department that knows what a real day's work is . . ."

"Well, for that matter, theres plenty that don't hurt themselves in this department——"

"I'll say there are: Outside of me . . . and you . . . but then I'm just that way. I've always been the goat where work was concerned——"

"Me too, I've always been a goat. You know what I bet? I bet there's not another person in this whole department that does one-fourth the work I do'."

The Ingenues.

"Don't you think Mr. Gink is sweet?"

"Perfectly darling. He's been so grand to me——"

"Me, too. I think he's simply wonderful. I tell you another one's that nice—Mr. Smirk."

"Oh, I simply adore him. He's loads of fun . . . honestly I nearly laugh myself to death at the things he says."

"I don't think he as funny as Mr. Twitt, though. He's a scream. Honestly, I really die——"

"I tell you another one that's awfully sweet when you really get to know him—Mr. Biff. He was telling me such perfectly fascinating things about Hawaii. He's been everywhere."

"Mr. Speel's simply been everywhere, too . . . honestly there's not a place you can mention that he hasn't been . . . He's had the most marvelous experiences——"

"You know I think even old Mr. Crabb is sweet in his way. They say he's a lot different outside the office . . . a regular scream . . . and terribly brilliant!"

"Mr. Mugg is terribly brilliant, too . . . he's always been so grand to me——

"All the men have been perfectly darling to me. You know I just can't understand Miss Snapp . . ."

"Why?"

"She said she thought the men in our office were a bunch of old women."

"That's easy to understand. You know I don't think any of them are very nice to her."

Reporter.

"Hello, Mr. Beetle."

"Hello, Miss Cheesit."

"How are you today?"

"I'm just fine. How're you?"

"Just fine. What do you know?"

"Nothing worth knowing? What do you know?"

"Nothing . . . Now I wish you'd look at that; another run in my stocking. Honestly, I'm the craziest thing!"

"I don't think you're crazy."

"You don't"

"No. Do you know what I really think about you?"

"What?"

"You'd think I was fresh if I told you."

"You wouldn't kid me, would you?"

"I wouldn't kid anybody."

"You wouldn't? Well, what do you know."

"Nothing. What do you know?"

"Nothing."

New Girl.

"Have you seen the new file girl?

"Yes, she seems awfully sweet . . . but, well, I don't just know what it is——"

"I know what you mean . . . Say, I wonder how old she is?"

"She says she's 18."

"Eighteen; she's 25 if she's a day."

"Say, she'll never see 27 again . . . I know she's lots older than me."

"You know I really oughtn't to say this . . . you know I really like her . . . but there's just something about her . . ."

"I know . . . I believe it's the way she wears her clothes. Did you ever see such a funny haircut?"

"Well I've got nothing against the girl. I really like her . . . I wouldn't say this to another soul, but she made three mistakes this morning."

"She did!"

"Yes, I'm afraid she's going to have an awfully hard time on the job."

"That's what I'm afraid of . . . You know I hate to say this . . . I think she's really a wonderful girl . . . but you know I just don't believe she's the type for the job."

"That's just what I was thinking . . . but I hated to say it. You know I wouldn't knock the girl for anything."

"Me either."

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Watch Your Weight.

It's perfectly allowable to lose some weight during the summer months. In fact, we will all be much more comfortable if less food than usual is consumed. The Ichabod Crane type of figure withstands heat far better than the Falstaffian.

The simplest rule of health, and one of the easiest to observe, is to watch your weight. Tables are readily available setting forth the standard avoirdupois of the various heights and ages. It has been said that about one-fifth of our population is too heavy. This means that millions of individuals are carrying around a tremendous amount of extra fat baggage, far more than strength will permit. Is it any wonder that some of these persons wear out early, while others develop shortness of breath (heart weakness)?

Each of us is made up of certain proportions of blood, bone, muscles, nerves, and special tissues. Whenever we gain or lose we change all our tissues, hence reducing is, after all, a serious matter. Unless it is carefully carried out it is likely to be followed by illness or prolonged ill health.

Weight Significant.

Is weight significant? Decidedly so, if it changes without obvious reason. Life insurance companies place great dependence upon body poundage as a factor in longevity. Another important consideration is the steadiness of weight even though it may appear higher than normal. If one is apparently well and loses flesh within a short period the situation calls for investigation without delay. We know that in fevers, infections, degenerative diseases, cancer, etc., fat will melt away quickly; and, of course, going without food entirely will compel the body to burn its own tissues.

When we speak of reducing as desirable we refer to the man or woman who is 25 or more pounds above the average. How was the excess acquired? The only source of flesh is food—and the extra fat was eaten. We gain whenever we eat more than we use; likewise, we maintain a definite standard whenever the balance is equal. There is no form of necromancy that will permit an individual to eat two pounds, burn up one, and weigh the same.

Radical Plan Hit.

But there is much more to a gaining or reducing program than merely food. We all differ in our powers of assimilaton and some will store away fat when living on—as they put it—"nothing but fresh air, sunshine and water." In such cases there is usually an out of balance state of the endocrines (glands of internal secretion), which inhibits or stops the burning of food, at the same time storing away every atom of that which is eaten. Only careful metabolic studies can solve such a problem.

Radical reduction is never desirable and a plan is safe only when it does not exceed 1 pound or slightly less each week. Furthermore, there is no sound basis for the doctrine that everyone should be of average weight. The person who weighs 40, to 50 pounds more, however, can add years to his life by reducing 25 to 35 pounds.

Reducing should never be undertaken through the use of thryoid extract (which increases metabolism); by sideshow methods, such as cathartics, which merely relieve the system temporarily of water; or by means of any drug because the effect upon the heart, the kidneys and the nervous system is all too often disastrous. The popular shortcuts to loss of flesh are either fakes or dangerous. We must remember also that in dieting the balance of proteins, carbohydrates, vitamins and minerals must be continued.

Requires Grit.

Before entering upon any dietary regimen ask your physician to make a careful physical examination to determine that your overweight is not merely water that has become lodged in the tissues. This is essential as exercise may be advised and it is well to know beforehand that the heart can stand the added amount of work.

The summer season is the ideal reducing period. Little food is needed to supply body heat and hence appetite is more easily satisfied. It may require grit and stick-to-it-iveness, but the feeling of well being that follows is worth the price.

Europe Fights For Industrial Independence

Nations Are Manufacturing Synthetic Materials, U. S. Is Advised.

By the Associated Press.

Intensive efforts among European nations to attain industrial self-sufficiency were disclosed yesterday in reports to the Department of Commerce.

With Italy, Germany and Russia among the leaders, these countries were reported pushing ahead with potentially far-reaching scientific experiments designed to point the way to methods of supplying their own industrial needs.

In Italy, development work is going forward for the manufacture of numerous synthetic products. Among other things, reports to the department show, agricultural and textile interests have reached an agreement calling for the use of milk casein in making a synthetic wool.

Cotton Substitutes.

The agreement was described as laying "a foundation for the development of a domestic synthetic wool industry" and reducing the country's dependence upon foreign sources for textile fibers.

Cotton substitutes are being evolved from hemp and other fibers and exhaustive research is underway looking toward the production of gasoline from lignite, bituminous rock and other Italian materials. The glycerin industry has been nationalized under supervision of the commissariat for war supplies and castor beans are being cultivated on a large scale with a view to utilizing the oil as a lubricant in lieu of imported petroleum.

Germany was reported emphasizing "research for developing synthetic products of domestice origin for the replacement of imported raw materials." Activities include studies of motor fuels made from brown coal, wood gas and illuminating gas- synthetic rubber manufacture and the use of dry ice as a source of energy for propelling torpedoes.

Synthetic Fertilizer.

Scientists there also have been looking into the manufacture of fertilizer from sewage and a rust preventive from sea ooze.

Another move toward meeting the country's own wants was reported in efforts of the government to encourage wool production within the Reich.

Striving to utilize agricultural wastes, Russian scienticts have mapped elaborate plans for factories to obtain paper, alcohol, sugars and other products from straw, cornstalks and similar materials. Synthetic rubber has been made there for several years and production for 1936 was estimated at 40,000 tons.

Among other countries, Denmark has developed a formula for a new explosive made from tobacco, Belgium is working on a synthetic nitrogenous fertilizer and Great Britain is producing gasoline from coal.

Blood Borrower Is Hopeful of Cure

St. Louis, July 26 (AP).—Braced by the hope he may be cured after three years of living on borrowed blood, James Hedley looked around today for someone to donate his fifty-second transfusion.

Physicians at Barnes Hospital are experimenting with his case in an attempt to cure aplastic anemia. They will continue as long as Hedley can find enough blood donors to keep himself alive.

A new treatment devised at the hospital a month ago has given him new hope of relieving a complicating neuritis in one leg.

Hedley already has borrowed blood from 35 persons, 25 of them fellow employes at a dairy where he has been working regularly since recovering from an acute attack several months ago. Some have given blood two and three times.

Not wishing to impose upon them for more transfusions, Hedley is making up a long waiting list of new, qualified volunteers to accompany him on the periodic trips to the hospital for new blood.

Arabs Attack British; 12 Are Reported Slain

Jerusalem, July 26 (AP).—Twelve Arabs were reported killed today in a fight with British troops in the Hills of Judea after an attempted ambush of a bus with a convoy en route to Telaviv.

A British soldier was slightly injured, but bus passengers were not hurt. Airplanes came to the aid of the convoy and bombed a forest into which the Arabs fled.

Popular Price Flivver Plane Nearing Reality

6 Types in Actual Use by Officials of U. S. Or Under Test.

By the Associated Press.

Two years of development work were declared yesterday by the Bureau of Air Commerce to have sent the air flivver soaring well along toward the popular price goal.

Six types of experimental planes, including an autogyro, were reported to be in actual use by bureau officials or under test prior to delivery in the near future. Companion projects which included development of de-icers for wings and propellors, nonfreezing carburetors, and adaption of automobile engines for light aircraft were completed or proceeding satisfactorily, the bureau said.

To date the buresu has accepted three planes, all of which have pusher-type propellors and three-wheel landing gear, and an all-metal, low-wing conventional type monoplane.

Auto-Engined Type.

Delivery was expected in the near future on an open cockpit, low-wing monoplane powered with a standard automobile engine, and a "roadable" wingless autogyro with folding rotors which can be driven on the highway.

Part of the delay in delivery of the autogyro was attributed by bureau officials to difficulty in securing automobile license plates, Pennsylvania authorities being undecided on whether to classify it as an aeroplane or an automobile.

General specifications laid down for the manufacturers of light planes called for simplicity and safety of operation, low maintenance and operating costs, greater visibility than is available in the standard plane of today, ability to land and takeoff in small areas, and ruggedness making the craft suitable for continuous flying.

Declined to Name One.

These qualifications have been well met in the planes delivered, bureau officials said but declined to name any one as the most favored up to now. The plane which may ultimately be recommended for large-scale manufacture probably will combine features from all, they said.

The official report praised one plane because its large shock absorbers enable it to land "at practically any altitude, and at practically any speed at which it can fly." Another, characterized by its lack of tail, was delared to have the advantages of simplicity of construction, which would make it less costly, and reduction of hangar space. The all-metal construction of another was commended.

One shop was described as the "guinea pig" of the program, being still under exhaustive tests of the control devices which include a combination slot and aileron in the middle of the wing to give more efficient lateral control and make handling of the plane more simple.

Typhoid-Hit Area In Alaska Closed

Juneau, Alaska, July 26 (AP).—The typhoid-stricken area in the Bristol Bay region lay under strict quarantine today with all persons prohibited from leaving until danger of spreading the epidemic had passed.

With the fishing season ended, the quarantine dammed the annual hurried migration of fishermen from the cannery settlements, bound for celebrations in Alaskan towns, or farther south to Seattle, Portland, and San Francisco for the winter.

A wireless from Kanakanak said 15 cases had been placed in a hospital there. Fourteen previously were reported from Dillingham, and the little hospital at Nushagak, largest village, was crowded. Only the more serious cases went to the hospitals. No deaths have been reported.

The territorial office was without word from Joseph Sheldon, who took off Friday on a 750-mile flight with a doctor, laboratory technician, a nurse and vaccine.

Miss Perkins Plans To Speak in Paris

Paris, July 26 (AP).—Women who are helping govern the United States and France will meet here this week to hear leaders discuss their progress under democracy, communism and fascism.

Miss Frances Perkins, American Secretary of Labor, is due Tuesday to speak before 400 delegates of 24 countries at the second quinquennial congress of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women. Most of the delegates were here for the opening reception today.

Miss Perkins will meet Mme. Cecile Brunschvicg, French undersecretary for education and leading feminist, who likewise will address the congress.

At Boston's Parker House they know good food and good tobacco
Back in the ample kitchen, the chef beams over a Planked Sirloin Steak à la Parker, named, like the famous rolls, after the historic Parker House in Boston. Camels are first choice here. Martin J. Lavin, banquet manager of the Parker House, is impressed with the outstanding popularity of Camels. "Camels are the favorite cigarette of those who love good food," he points out. "Camels are first choice at the Parker House at banquets, dinners, and luncheons."
SMALL BUT SPEEDY. Many a more powerful rival has fallen before the whirlwind speed and stamina of petite Mrs. Ethel Arnold. She smokes a lot—Camels, of course. "I smoke Camels with my meals," says this tennis ace. "I find I enjoy my food more and digest it better too. And smoking Camels doesn't upset my nerves. Camels are so delightfully mild."
GREATEST FINISH UNDER FIRE in golfing history brought Tony Manero the National Open Golf Championship! "I had healthy nerves and good digestion as my allies," says Tony. "Naturally I would—I'm a hearty Camel smoker. Camels stimulate my digestion—give me a feeling of ease after eating. They set me right."
Those who enjoy the goodness of Camel's mild, ripe, costlier tobaccos with meals and after say:
"—for Digestion's sake... smoke Camels"
"I EAT HEARTY," says Gus Kramer, master carpenter. "And that's one reason why I smoke Camels. They help my digestion. I always enjoy my meals more and feel better after eating when I've smoked a few Camels. Camels set me right!"

U. S.-England Closer, Says Guest Cleric

Rev. A. Julian Elwes Sees More Amity on Visit Here.

Hails Absence of Debt Talk as Favorable Indication.

The Rev. A. Julian Elwes, English cleric who began yesterday a month's exchange pastorate at National City Christian Church, believes his countrymen and those of the United States are closer spiritually today than they have been for many years.

"I sense more friendliness on this trip. It wasn't like this when I was in your country in 1928, I tell you," the visiting churchman commented. He had just finished greeting several score parishioners who had come forward after the morning church service to wish him well.

"Everyone I met eight years ago asked, 'what about the war debt the British owe us?' and they wanted to argue about it. I haven't heard 'war debt' mentioned on this visit."

True, Americans are asking him, he said, about Britain's, and the League of Nations', failure to stop the Italian invasion of Ethiopia—but that is not an issue between Englishmen and the people of the United States.

Believed Course Right.

"We took the course that seemed right to us at the time, and pursued it as far as we could," Mr. Elwes said, giving his answer to the critics of Great Britain's action in the Italo-Ethiopian crisis.

"We still think we were in the right in asking for those sanctions against Italy—and we did get some results. We would have had complete success, if some of the other nations had backed us up more."

England, at the present time, doesn't fear internal disorders, such as have upset civil affairs in Spain. He said the people there may disagree with the government from time to time, but in the end will follow it.

"As you know the English are a practical people. They move slowly and more stolidly than most people. We get ahead, but seldom do we act suddenly on anything."

The Americans, he believed, are practical, too—but will respond quickly to a situation, the recent economic crisis, for example. The English, he said, experienced a similar crisis four or five years before the United States did, and worked out of it slowly and gradually.

Surprised at Progress.

"We are surprised at the progress you have made here, and our people stand in great admiration of your President, Mr. Roosevelt. We can not imagine a personality that can develop so much leadership. I don't think we could possibly lift an Englishman to such a position of influence."

England and America, Mr. Elwes said, seem to be traveling in the same direction, socially speaking. Many of the features of America's social program already have been developed in England.

Unemployment, a critical problem in England five years ago, has been reduced materially. Approximately 1,500,000 Englishmen now need jobs, the clergyman said.

Mr. Elwes' pulpit in the Church of Christ, South Wigston, Leicester, England, is being filled this month by the pastor of National City Christian Church, Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller. The exchange is for a four-week period which started yesterday.

Assembly Is Opened By Christian Church

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 26.—Hundreds of members of the Christian Church from a dozen counties attended the all-day services of the thirty-ninth annual session of the Piedmont District Assembly, held today at Assembly Park, near Gordonsville.

The principal address this afternoon was delivered by Dr. F. W. Burnham, pastor of Seventh Street Christian Church, Richmond, and the sermon tonight was by Dr. W. H. Book, of Orlando, Fla., widely known evangelist who formerly held leading pulpits of the denomination in the Midwest. The assembly will continue throughout the week.

Tomahawk Is Dug Up By Workers for WPA

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Tappahannock, Va., July 26.—Tomahawks, skulls and bones are becoming quite common with WPA workers on the construction of the County Administration Building at Tappahannock.

Fred Singer, a member of the crew, dug up a tomahawk while digging a place for the sewer pipes. This is the second incident of the kind that has occurred, according to A. S. Owens, foreman of the crew.

A few weeks ago another member of the crew dug up a skull and some bones not far from where the tomahawk was found.

Man, Held Mad, Speeding South In Stolen Auto

Police Broadcast Warning on Arlington Countian Fleeing Hospital.

A 29-year-old colored man whose relatives say is "a madman in an automobile" streaked down the highway toward Richmond last night in a stolen car, never stopping for red lights and totally disregarding traffic laws.

George E. Marshall, the driver, who lives in Arlington County, Va., didn't want to go to a mental hospital at Petersburg, Va., his relatives, who were preparing to send him there, said. Instead, he wanted to go to St. Petersburg, Fla.

Yesterday, just as his kin were preparing to take him to a sanitarium, he ran out the front door of his home, emitted a wild yell and climbed into an automobile.

He drove away furiously.

A Washington brother said he came immediately to his home at 1784 T street northwest and asked if anyone was at home. The brother answered "No."

Without saying a word, Marshall jumped back into the stolen machine and drove away. The brother told police he got into his own car and followed Marshall for a few blocks.

"I couldn't catch him though," he said. "He ran through red lights, careened through traffic. He's a wild man in an automobile. He'll surely kill himself, or someone else.

Lipscomb Elected By Loudoun Hunt

Alexander, former president of the club, was made M. F. H. Officers re-elected are Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley and David N. Rust, jr., vice presidents; Mrs. Clara Frye, secretary, and W. F. Peach, treasurer.

The following were appointed to serve with the officers as the board of governors: Miss Anna Hedrick, Mrs. Albert S. White, Howard E. Cole, P. A. Wilmer, W. A. Metzger, Charles Lee, F. H. Malone, L. C. Hoge, S. H. Hall and R. T. Corbell.

Mother Dies, New Yorker Changes Ships at Sea

Aboard S. S. Monarch of Bermuda, July 26 (AP).—Two big liners hove-to in a rough sea today to permit transfer of a New York business man and his wife called back from a trip to Bermuda by the death of his mother.

Mr. and Mrs. K. H. Rockey were the couple taken off the Monarch of Bermuda and placed aboard the Queen of Bermuda. The Monarch sailed from New York Saturday afternoon bound for Bermuda. The Queen, en route from Bermuda, is scheduled to arrive at New York Monday morning.

45-Mile Catalina Swim Finished by Frenchman

Los Angeles, July 26 (U.P.).—Paul Chotteau, French aquatic star, completed a 45-mile swim from Santa Catalina Island to the mainland at 2:50 p. m., Pacific standard time, today. It was his fifth attempt.

The veteran distance swimmer landed at a point near Topango Canyon after crossing the channel in 33 hours and 28 minutes. He was timed by Bob Weaver and C. P. O. Nichols, A. A. U. officials.

Two yachts and a dory accompanied Chotteau on the trip. He was reported in good condition.

Car Leaves Road on Turn; Autoist Killed

Nine Persons Are Hurt in Series of Mishaps Near Capital.

Hurled to the ground when the car in which he was riding ran off the road and into an embankment, Frank Grimsley, 57, an employe of the Mount Vernon estate for many years, was killed early yesterday on the road between Woodlawn and Potters Hill, Va. Witnesses said death apparently was instantaneous.

The car, which police say was driven by Wiley Todd, of Woodlawn, left the road on a curve. Todd was uninjured. Grimsley lived near Mount Vernon.

In a series of other traffic accidents throughout the day several persons were injured, one critically.

Early yesterday morning three Washingtonians were taken to the Alexandria Hospital for treatment after their automobile had struck a center parkway on the Mount Vernon highway and had overturned five times.

Driver Freed From Jail.

The driver, Richard Harris, 29, of 2349 Ashmead place northwest, was arrested by National Capital Parks police on .. charge of reckless driving. He was released from the Alexandria Jail yesterday on $50 bond and ordered to appear today for a hearing in the commissioner's office in Alexandria.

Harris' companions, Winifred Endsley, 27, of 1812 K street northwest, and John Murphy, 32, of the Ashmead place address, suffered cuts and bruises. Murphy was taken to Gallinger Hospital. The Endsley woman was released yesterday from the Alexandria Hospital.

Two elderly men suffered leg injuries when they were struck by automobiles.

Patrick J. Mulgannon, 73, of 1203 Kennedy street northwest, was treated at Walter Reed Hospital for shock, compound fracture of the left ankle and undetermined chest injuries. Yesterday afternoon he was transferred to Gallinger, where his condition was pronounced satisfactory.

George E. Hill, 22, colored, 202 Warren street northeast, was driver of the car which struck Mulgannon in the 5500 block of Georgia avenue. Hill was not held.

Is Treated at Hospital

William Whitemore, 63, of 201 D street northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for possible leg fracture after he had been struck at Thirteenth and F streets northwest by a car operated by William Cabell, 37, colored, 1802 Eighth street northwest. Whitemore was later released from the hospital. Cabell was charged at No. 1 Precinct with driving on an expired permit.

William Miles, 26, colored, 208 L street southwest, suffered amputation of an arm after the car in which he was a passenger crashed into a bridge abutment on Atlantic street southeast. Miles was taken to Casualty Hospital, where his condition was said to be critical. The driver of the car according to police, was William Collins, 21, colored, 1017 South Carolina avenue southeast.

James Mack, 30, colored, 207 R street northwest, was treated at Freedman's Hospital for face and head lacerations after he had been struck by a car in the 1000 block of Fourth street northwest. Police said the driver was John Warren, 33, 921 Fourth street northwest.

Two Hurt in Maryland.

Two persons were injured in nearby Maryland over the week-end by hit-run drivers.

Francis Smith, 7-year-old Duery, Md., colored boy, was treated at Casualty Hospital for cuts and possible internal injuries after he was struck by an automobile as he crossed a highway near his home.

Virgil Hoffman, 25, colored, was in Gallinger Hospital last night, suffering from shock and possible internal injuries. Police believe he was the victim of a hit-run driver, also. He was found in a ditch by the Marlboro pike near Meadows, Md., early yesterday morning by James Tolson, of Capitol Heights, Md., and brought to Gallinger Hospital.

More Disorders Noted On Russ-Manchu Border

Moscow, July 26 (AP).—Two Far Eastern frontier incidents, the first in several weeks, were reported tonight in Soviet dispatches from Khabarovsk, Siberia.

Japanese and Manchukuoan authorities were said to have detained three Russian and two Chinese section workers near Pogranichnaya, severely beating one Russian and one Chinese.

Near Tury Rog, on the Soviet-Manchukuoan border, Russian guards discovered a boundary marker had been stolen and taken into Manchukuoan territory, a Soviet dispatch said.

Retired Officer's Son Held in 200 Robberies

New York, July 26 (AP).—Arrest of a 21-year-old unemployed landscape gardener described as the confessed perpetrator of more than 200 robberies, burglaries and thefts in Nassau County, Long Island, was announced today by county police at Mineola. Fred L. Boelson, of New York, was taken into custody at Wantagh, Long Island, yesterday.

Neatly dressed, he is, police said, a graduate of the New York State Applied School of Agriculture at Farmingdale, Long Island, and the son of a retired New York police sergeant.

One of a Conductor's Busy Moments

Postlude

Conducting the first concert of her week's engagement with the Summer Concerts Orchestra, at the Watergate last night, Miss Antonia Brico had occasion to walk out on the stage several times to acknowledge applause.

Each bow was to the enthusiastic handclapping of several thousand fans, and with such a roar going on Miss Brico probably did not catch the comment of one man, who said:

"I guess those 80 men know who's boss."

And Miss Brico should know about this—not because there is any question in her own mind about who is boss—but rather because she'd probably like to know she has put herself over as the real leader of this orchestra of men. Her regular orchestra in New York is made up of women.

This earnest young woman conductor would probably like to know it, also, because of the trouble she took to demonstrate she can keep a jump or two ahead of a band of symphonists playing mansize music. It was a full program she presented on her opening night, and Miss Brico did it justice, despite two fractured ribs.

The Beethoven "Coriolanus" overture, and the Richard Strauss tone poem, "Death and Transfiguration," proved most popular. The last was highly dramatic as Miss Brico read it, and contributed decidedly more to the program than a first number is expected. The orchestra, following the conductor, hit the dynamics squarely, the staccato chords were cut clean and the whole piece was carried at an invigorating pace.

The "Death and Transfiguration" music, which was anticipated as fare a little too heavy for a July evening, turned out to be the most interesting piece on the program. It's an abstract composition in which all the instruments seem to be busy all the time—all of them doing, apparently, different things. Miss Brico showed she was able to pull all the tonal ends together, and the result furnished a real climax for the concert.

The symphony—Beethoven's great "Eroica"—came off too smoothly to be good Beethoven. Many things can be said in praise of this famous work, but the quality of being short and snappy is not one of them. In order to make the long stretches of thematic development alive and interesting, more orchestral color and contrast than Miss Brico could produce last night are essential.

Miss Marie Budde, soprano, was the soloist. After the intermission she gave the Balatella aria from "Pagliacci" and Micaela's aria from "Carmen." She sang these songs very successfully, and she was richly awarded in applause.

At the end there was the rousing entrance of the Gods into Valhalla from Wagner's "Das Rheingold." This Miss Brico conducted with her customary vigor.

Miss Brico did last night what she did when she conducted the National Symphony here last summer—she showed she could take the helm and hold down the position. For the rest of the week—she conducts again Wednesday and Friday nights—she might well take it a little easier. The audience is with her. She has nothing to worry about.

Woman Found Garroted In Oregon With Wire

Portland, Oreg., July 26 (AP).—The body of an unidentified woman, about 50, strangled with bailing wire knotted about her throat was found today in Washington Park. The single strand of wire had been wrapped once about her throat and knotted twice.

Capt. Joseph Keegan said physicians had not been able to determine whether she strangled herself or was slain. The ground did not indicate there had been a struggle at the spot.

Flier Plans Pay-Load Flight Across Atlantic

New York, July 26 (AP).—Clyde Pangborn established himself here today and began the final phase of preparations for what he hopes will be the first successful "pay-load" crossing of the North Atlantic by a heavier-than-air flying craft.

Arriving yesterday at the Keyport, N. J., airport, he left his novelly designed plane there for final repairs in preparation for the projected flight from New York to Paris which he said today he expected to start by the middle of next month.

Cicada (Locust to You) Sings Farewell to D. C. Until 1953

Scientists Reassure Property Owners; Pest's Blight on Trees Is Only Temporary as Frost Will Erase Effects of 1936 Visit.

The "17-year locust," which isn't a locust but a cicada, is now putting on his last appearance before going into seclusion until 1953.

His finale gives trees the appearance of suffering from a blight, but there is no blight.

Those who are wise to the ways of the cicada are not worried because the branch-tips of the trees are dead and brown. For it means only that the cicada of brood X, as scientists call this year's crop, has laid its eggs.

The tree is not diseased, nor is its life in any danger, says J. A. Hyslop, of the Bureau of Entymology and Plant Quarantine, Department of Agriculture, unless the trees happens to be very young. With the coming of cold weather the dead ends will drop off and the tree will be nicely pruned.

Uses "Saw" on Tail.

The reason the ends appear to be diseased is because the female has used a tiny "saw" on the end of her tail to make a slit in the branch about a half-inch long. Sometimes she will cut as many as 50 such slits in one branch. After making the hole, she lays her eggs in it and goes on about her only remaining task in life of dying. The end of the branch withers and dies.

There is something about oak trees which the female locust particularly likes, for the oaks of nearby Virginia and Maryland are heavily covered with branches whose leaves have turned brown. They don't confine themselves to oaks, however, for Hyslop says they attack 25 or 30 different species of trees, including several varieties of fruit trees.

Should you have any curiosity about cicada eggs, take one of the affected branches, split it open, and there you will probably see about 500 tiny yellow eggs. They are about the size of a bird shot. Keep watching long enough and you will see the eggs hatch.

Break Open.

First the eggs will break open, and the tiny larvae will crawl out and drop. If in the open, each larva will dig a hole in the ground where he falls, and crawl in.

Political factions may come and go, but "for 17 long years," the cicada stays buried until he emerges to sound again his song in the summer air. He is not at all partial to daylight, and citizens of 1953 will hear him all day and all night.

Effort to Pass Spurious Bill Is Reported

Bearer of Counterfeit Money Flees When It Is Questioned.

3 Men Robbed, Woman Loses Pocketbook in Petty Thieveries.

Detectives last night were searching for a well-dressed man who ran out of the store of Samuel Lenkin at 421 East Capitol street when he failed in an attempt to pass a counterfeit $10 bill.

Lenkin said the man asked to have the bill changed. When Lenkin said that it didn't look like a good bill, the stranger turned and ran, leaving the bill behind.

Among other crimes reported to police over the week-end were several robberies.

Three Attacked, Robbed.

Two colored men and one white man were assaulted and robbed, a woman's pocketbook was taken and a burglar invaded the home of a woman and stole her $15 gold wrist watch.

George Washington, colored, 70, of 1338 R street northwest, was robbed of $32 by colored men who, he said, struck him while he was walking between Tenth and R streets northwest.

Henry Roberts, colored, 38, of 5146 Nash street northwest, was stabbed in the neck and robbed of $9 by four colored men while he was at the intersection of Hayes street and Division avenue northeast. His condition, however, was not serious.

Robbed of $8.

Ephrean H. Norris, 1315 Corcoran street northwest, told police he was held up and robbed of $8 by two colored men near his home Saturday night.

Hortense Epstein, 909 Twentieth street northwest, told police a man entered her room at dawn yesterday and stole a $15 wrist watch. She said the man fled when she awakened.

Mary Kenny, 45, of 1321 Thirteenth street northwest, reported her purse contained $4 and valuable papers was snatched from her arm in the 1200 block of O street northwest. Miss Kenny said the assailant leaped from an automobile, grabbed her purse and escaped in the machine.

Power Co. Lineman Hunted by Police

Police were searching last night for Roland W. Walker, 6-foot-4-inch power company lineman, who has been missing from home for two days. Officials believe he was the victim of a holdup and attack.

His disappearance was reported to police by his wife. The 200-pound lineman was last seen in Capitol Heights, Md., in the rear seat of an automobile. He was dressed in dungarees, blue shirt, and he wore no tie.

Six Killed in Strike Clash.

Mexico City, July 26 (AP).—A dispatch published in the newspaper La Prensa today said six persons were killed and 11 wounded when opposing labor groups clashed at Atlixco, Puebla, yesterday. Followers of the confederation of workers of Mexico came into conflict with members of the regional confederation of Mexican workers over agrarian questions, the dispatch said.

Hybrid Bear Cubs Grow Fatter Daily With Constant Care

Ramona's three cubs, who bid fair to be Washington's most popular Zoo babies, are receiving almost as much attention and care as human offsprings do in the most modern of hospitals.

The cubs, whose father is a white Polar bear and whose mother, Ramona, is a brown Kodiak, are now 35-pounders in comparison with the 18 ounces they weighed at birth in February and are growing daily on a diet which includes cod-liver oil, milk, fruits, vegetables and meat juices.

Because Ramona's first litter of cubs from the same union failed to survive, no chances are being taken with the three hybrids. Headkeeper William H. Blackburn believes the present litter is past the danger stage and will grow to be adult "Polar-Kodiaks," the first of their kind.

District Hunts 2 Higher-Ups In Liquor Ring

Men Sought Likely to Be Called On as Witnesses Against 3 Held.

With three men described by police as "small-time" bootleggers out on bond, police yesterday continued search for two "big shots" in connection with the shooting last week of Joseph E. O'Brien.

Police said the "big shots," operators of the southern Maryland bootleg racket here, are wanted for questioning and probably will be used as witnesses against the three men charged with assault with intent to kill O'Brien. The men sought are thought to be out of town.

The three men out on bond, Samuel Montgomery, 39, of a downtown hotel; George F. Tear, 23, brother of Richard Tear, fiance of the the slain Corinna Loring, and Joseph S. Bond, 28, of the 1200 block Thirty-fourth street northwest, pleaded not guilty Saturday when arraigned before Judge Edward M. Curran in Police Court charged with shooting O'Brien. Bond was set at $10,000 each.

O'Brien was shot three times in the legs while he was standing in front of a lunchroom in the 200 block of Second street southeast. The shooting, police said, was retaliation by a Georgetown gang of liquor runners who resented O'Brien's efforts to "spread out."

Farm Co-operatives Double Business

By the Associated Press.

The Farm Credit Administration said yesterday that farmers' purchasing co-operatives had forged ahead to become the fastest growing type of the 20,000 agrarian business co-operatives in the United States.

W. I. Myers, governor of the administration, estimated that the nearly 2,000 purchasing co-operatives did a business of $187,000,000 in the 1934-1935 marketing season, a doubling of business volume in a decade. In addition, marketing co-operatives had engaged in a side-line purchasing activity which boosted the total to more than $250,000,000, Myers said.

Marketing co-operatives, Myers said, numbered 3,800 with a membership of 2,500,000. The 1934-1935 season witnessed an estimated total value of $1,343,000,000 co-operatively marketed, he said.

D. C. Fireman Is Charged With Arson

Police Hold Inquiry Into Blaze in His Home; Arraignment Set.

Flames Are Fought by Neighbors; Family Is Absent.

Walter A. Walker, 32-year-old District fireman, was charged with arson by police late last night after an investigation of a blaze that broke out in Walker's home at 4953 Hurst terrace northwest, Saturday night.

Police and Fire Marshal Calvin C. Lauber conducted the investigation after firemen reported the circumstances of the Saturday night fire. Walker will be arraigned in Police Court today. He was held last night at No. 7 Precinct Station.

Responding to a local alarm, apparatus from No. 29 Engine Co. went to that address Saturday night. Firemen said that when they entered the building all the furniture in one room was blazing furiously. The structure itself, they said, was not on fire.

Firemen extinguished the blazing furniture but could not determine the origin of the fire. About $300 damage was done to the furniture, they estimated. The house itself was practically undamaged.

Walker was arrested yesterday morning by Patrolman J. A. Wheeler, of the Seventh Precinct.

Three men, believed to be neighbors, were battling the blaze when firemen arrived. None of the Walker family was in the house. Walker was enjoying a day's leave from his duties at No. 20 Engine Company, police said.

Sergt. H. C. Wetherall, in charge of the apparatus that extinguished the fire, said that had firemen arrived at the scene five minutes later the blaze probably would have spread to the house itself and have been beyond control.

The alarm which summoned the fire fighters was sent in by telephone. Efforts to trace the call proved fruitless.

Capital Housewife Swallows Poison

Mrs. Myrtle Cogan was found yesterday by her husband, James Cogan, unconscious in their home in the 1600 block of Gales street northeast, suffering from the effects of poison.

Only Saturday Mrs. Cogan was found unconscious in the kitchen of the house while gas poured from all jets of the stove. She was revived by a physician from Casualty Hospital.

She was removed yesterday to Gallinger Hospital. Her condition was described as critical.

700 Dogs Wait Death In Chicago Rabies Scare

Chicago, July 26 (AP).—More than 700 dogs awaited execution by gas at the city dog pound today as police and health authorities took steps to halt a rabies scare.

Two hundred stray canines died in a mass execution yesterday and Pound Master Robert Forejt said an equal number would be put to death in the carbon monoxide death chamber tomorrow.

The purge of poochland was ordered after three persons died of rabies, and more than 250 others were bitten by dogs in 48 hours.

Polls Open Today for the Public to Elect Choice From Ticket of Ten.

The theater-going public of Washington will go to the "polls" today to vote for a new name for Loew's Fox Theater.

Ballots and ballot boxes have been placed in the lobbies of the Fox, Palace and Columbia theaters and the voting, which will start this morning, will continue through next Sunday afternoon, at which time the votes will be counted and a new name will be announced to supplant the "Fox," which has identified the popular F strect house since its opening in the fall of 1927.

After a strenuous week-end, during which Fox Theater attaches waded through more than 5,000 names, proposed during a week of "primaries," the following were "elected" as "candidates" for the new name:

Loew's President.
The Marcus Loew.
Loew's Nation.
Loew's Capitol.
Loew's Federal.
Loew's Capital.
Loew's Congressional.
Loew's Diplomat.
Loew's Embassy.
Loew's Union.

Ballot Boxes in Lobbies.

Those who attend any of the three Loew theaters this week will be given a ballot on which these ten names are listed. One of the ten will embellish a modern, new, Neon sign which will identify the present Fox on and after August 14, the date it is planned to have the new sign ready for installation.

All material for the new sign has been ordered and immediately upon selection of the new name, work will be rushed to complete it so that it can be unveiled the same night that the fourth annual production of "Going Native" is presented.

The following Washingtonians are each to be rewarded with a cash prize of $5 for having suggested the above ten names. While there were thousands of others who likewise suggested the same names, these persons are being rewarded for the neatness of their entries, the ingenious method in which they were presented and for the clarity of reasoning accompanying each suggestion.

Mrs. John A. Smith, 4000 Cathedral avenue, suggested the "President," and in addition to her excellent reasoning her slogan "It Tops Them All" earned her the prize; Pearl McPherson, 104 West Thornapple street, Chevy Chase, Md., "The Nation; Jean Allen, 5812 Thirty-second street northwest, "The Capitol," hers being deemed outstanding because of the reasoning and an unusually clever sketch of the proposed name; "The Capital" by William L. Banning, of the Portland Hotel at Thomas Circle; Miss Grace K. Healy, 206 F street northwest, "The Congressional;" T. L. Fossick, jr., 1745 Columbia road, "The Embassy;" Zella Boteler, 6805 Forty-sixth street, Chevy Chase, Md., "The Diplomat;" Philip Yecies, 2731 Woodley place northwest, "The Union;" Paul J. Schwarz, 112 Park avenue, Takoma Park, Md., "The Federal," and Dorothy Mason Walton, of 1601 Argonne place northwest, for "The Marcus Loew," suggesting that this would make a "most appropriate permanent memorial to Marcus Loew, the great, humorous, kindly little man who founded the Loew chain and brought so much to the amusement world."

Additional Prizes.

In addition to the $5 awards, each of the above winners still has a chance of winning the major award of $20 in cash and a free round trip over the Pennsylvania Airlines to the Great Lakes Exposition in Cleveland. This dual award will go to the person whose name emerges as the "people's choice."

The Loew management was so impressed with the excellence and sincerity of those interested in changing the name of Loew's Fox that it will issue guest tickets to each of the following for the inaugural night of the new name:

Jane, John and Pat Jacob, 3259 R street northwest; Ruth Hayward, care Register of the Treasury; Harry W. Zichterman, 1321 Rhode Island avenue northwest; Elinor Fox Gherkin, Chastleton Hotel; C. W. Campbell, 735 Twelfth street northwest; Ruth K. Wails, 1324 Monroe street northwest; Adeline Shenwell, 1743 Columbia road northwest; Phyllis Scott, 1730 M street northwest; John Arthur Shaw, 907 Fifteenth street northwest; Mrs. A. T. Miller, 1345 Nineteenth street northwest; Carlos Larazolo, 2106 F street northwest; Robert Brown, 148 Conden road, Indian Head, Md.; Samuel T. Hill, 736 Twenty-second street northwest; Margy Staton, 2019 Nineteenth street northwest; Frank B. Cook, 903 District National Bank Building; Morris Fradin, 1764 Columbia road northwest; Jo Sy. Clair, 1907 K street northwest.

Through Division Manager Carter Barron the Fox wishes to thank Washingtonians for their amazing response and interest. Results of the voting will be tabulated and announced each day during the "election."

About the Showshops

A HANDSOME brochure in red velour and ivory reaches the desk opportunely, to convey to the world United Artists' announcement of product for the season of 1936-37. The striking external beauty of the booklet is nothing to the multi-colored gorgeousness of its contents. U. A. has some notable producers, stars and titles to offer the trade and picture-going gentry and obviously is proud to perform the chore in the grand or opulent manner.

BELL.

The producers whose wares will be distributed to the far corners of the earth by United Artists include Samuel Goldwyn, Pickford-Lasky, a short-lived coalition whose joint activities have not quite run out; David O. Selznick and his Selznick International Productions, Alexander Korda and his London Films releases, Walter Wagner Productions and Reliance Pictures.

Of stars and productions, such things of note as the following may be expected: Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton, Mary Astor and Paul Lukas in "Dodsworth," the film version of the Sinclair Lewis novel adapted to the stage with such eminent success by Sidney Howard; Edward Arnold in "Come and Get It," by Edna Ferber, and "The Man With a Young Wife;" Eddie Cantor in "Sonny Boy," Miriam Hopkins in "Women Can Be Wrong," Merle Oberon in "In Love and War," Marlene Dietrich and Charles Boyer in "The Garden of Allah," by Robert Hichens; Ronald Colman, Roland Young and Elizabeth Bergner in vehicles commensurate with their superlative capabilities; "The Last of the Mohicans," with Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes, Heather Angel, Henry Wilcoxon, Phillip Reed, Bruce Cabot, Hugh Buckler and Robert Barrat all in the cast; "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" and Charles Laughton in "Rembrandt" and "I, Claudius," not to mention Charles Boyer in "History Is Made at Night;" Spencer Tracy, Sylvia Sydney and Henry Fonda in "Three-Time Loser;" Wanger's "Arabian Nights" and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and Dolores Del Rio in "Accused" and the junior Fairbanks alone in "High Treason."

I am beginning to understand now why Charlie Kranz, Washington branch manager for United Artists, has been walking around with his chest stuck 'way out to here these past few days!

* * * *

The announcement of the forthcoming release of "The Garden of Allah," co-starring Marlene Dietrich and Charles Boyer, particularly interests this column because it has been filmed entirely in Technicolor and David O. Selznick, the producer, and your reporter are so completely in consonance with regard to the future of natural color in photography and its value to the cinema. We had our most recent say on the subject in the theater section of yesterday's Post. As if in intentional corroboration of our view, a separate pamphlet on the topic of "Allah," just to hand from Mr. Selznick, has these things to say:

"The motion picture world is at the present time stirred by the same sort of revolutionary movement that changed and improved it so radically eight years ago. Like the introduction of sound, Technicolor is sweeping the industry, opening up vast new potentialities of technique and, backed by popular demand, supplanting outmoded methods which preceded it.

"Color brings a warmth and life to motion pictures that successfully eliminates the last valid criticism which has been directed against the cinema as an artistic form. The coldness that limited black-and-white pictures is gone."

That, precisely, is the way we feel about it.

Dots and Dashes.

A note from that sturdy old war horse of the selling front, Charlie McCarthy, gives warning that Twentieth Century-Fox in its production of "Girls' Dormitory" really has something . . . Herbert Marshall, Ruth Chatterton and Simone Simon have the leads in this "unusual and provocative film drama" . . . Release date is set for August 14 . . . Big day in Washington, that August 14 . . . It will unfurl both the new name of Loew's Fox Theater and the fourth annual production of Gene Ford's "Going Native" revue . . . About that new name for the Fox, see column 1 on this page—I hope . . . Gloria Blondell, sister of Joan, the film star, and member of one of the oldest of America's theatrical families, will be the guest star on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week at Robert Porterfield's Barter Theater at Abingdon, Va. . . . She will play Gladys George's role in "Personal Appearance" . . . Helen Dunlop, formerly resident in this city, also is prominently cast . . . It may be a little late to mention it, but when Lionel Barrymore assumed that old woman's disguise in "The Devil Doll" and threw his voice clear up into the top of its range, he was so much like Sister Ethel in both appearance and sound that it was at times almost as uncanny as the Lilliputian figures Director Tod Browning had climbing up over the soles of people's shoes to shoot them in the ankle with rattlesnake venom—or whatever it was . . . He is even said to have detected the resemblance himself, having remarked upon his first view of the picture, "That isn't Lionel, that's Ethel" . . . Director Sidney Gottlieb, of the Jewish Community Center Little Theater, has set August 4, 5 and 6 as tentative dates for the casting of a one-act play and a full-length play, the names of which will be announced later . . . Dorothy Scott, who plays the role of Ernest Truex's wife in "Spring Is Here," on the stage at Loew's Fox this week, was a member of the cast of Max Gordon's production of "Pride and Prejudice" when it opened here at the National . . . She played the part of the nurse, Mrs. Lake . . . All right, come down here and I'll show you the program.

* * * *

To stimulate the writing, production and publication of new American plays, the Charles H. Sergel Prize of $500 is offered for the manuscript which in the opinion of the judges represents the best full-length play submitted between October 1, 1936, and April 1, 1937. Manuscripts should be sent to the Charles H. Sergel Play Contest, University of Chicago, Chicago, Ill. Alfred Kreymborg was the 1935-36 winner with his play, "Commencement." So unstrap that old trunk and dig around!

Comebacks.

Marie Dressler was turned down by every major picture company, but the Terrific Letdown of their indifference only made her more persistent . . . Clark Gable was turned loose by Warners, branded a flop, but look at him today . . . So, too, was Ginger Rogers . . . They didn't pick up her contract option on the Warner lot . . . Look at her today . . . Norma Shearer Built Up to a Terrific Letdown when Universal fired her because she asked for a salary of $100 a week, but look at her now . . . Margaret Sullivan experienced a Terrific Letdown when Paramount rejected her screen and Columbia told her that she could not be photographed . . . Charles Boyer probably was tempted to chuck it when M.-G.M refused to sign him at any salary . . . All of these Built Up From Terrific Letdowns, because they had courage enough to get up from the canvas after being spilled by a right hand to the chin . . . Unlike Max Baer, they didn't take the count on one knee, for when Lady Luck selects a recipient for her favors, she doesn't pick a guy with calloses on his knees.

King of Sloths Opens His New Workless Eden

By the United Press.

Hollywood, July 26.—Stepin Fetchit, ebony apostle of inertia, premiered "Harlemwood," his workless black and tan Utopia, today before what he calls the "whipped cream" of Hollywood's darktown.

Nucleus of the Negro Valhalla, named after Harlem and Hollywood, and "combining the best features of the two," is a marine roof garden atop a four-story apartment building owned by the dusky actor.

Originally, Step conceived Harlemwood as a model country town full of green and white houses, red street lamps and gaudily uniformed policemen, but switched locations because building the town would require effort, and work is against his principles.

"This heah garden is only the beginning," explains Fetchit. "Pretty soon Harlemwood gonna' extend over this whole block."

An Aerial Ocean Front.

The garden is an imitation ocean beach, complete with a pavilion in the form of an imitation ship riding an imitation wave. Fetchit hauled the sand from Santa Monica himself, in the back seat of his swanky limousine. Other props are half a dozen beach chairs, four 'rickshaws, a joblot of reclining lounges and a battery of fans blowing refrigerated air.

The "highest classedest jigs in town" must come attired in bathing suits and white sailor caps in keeping with the scene if they want to frolic in Harlemwood, says Fetchit.

Step, however, has decided against ruling his colony as mayor, chairman of the planning commission and president of the chamber of commerce.

"Reckon I got to be a dictator," he said. "This is going to be a real jig heaven, where nobody works unless I tell him to—and you know I ain't going to do that.

"'Course I don't object to the women doing a little cooking and washing, or pulling the men folks around in the 'rickshaws, but I ain't goin' let 'em overdo it, and that's why I got to be dictator. It will take real power to keep everybody slowed down."

Tintypes.

Hollywood, July 26.

Jean Harlow, while on the set making the flicker, "Suzy," had a portable dressing room, and next to it was a victrola which played swing music while she relaxed.

Although the scenario was prepared by numerous writers long before the flicker went into production, a new script was handed to director George Fitzmaurice as he kept shooting.

Miss Harlow would read a scene, rehearse it a number of times and then Director Fitzmaurice would start making a "take." Every scene would average about five "takes." When he was really ready to get a "take" to print, Director Fitzmaurice would say to Miss Harlow: "Let's make this one for the statuette." They both smiled.

After the sneak preview, "Suzy" back into production for what they termed "added scenes."

The "added scenes" were those sequences which took place in the theater and the sequences in the dressing room with Inez Courtney. It was decided to give Jean Harlow a pal, and to let Miss Harlow expound her philosophy. This, it was believed, would give her a definite characterization in the flicker. It should give you a little idea on how the picture was made.

Jean Harlow's real name is Harlean Carpenter. Recently, it was announced that she would go to court and ask that her name be changed legally to Harlow. It is believed that she would also like to change her name to Powell.

* * * *

She is 5 feet 3½ inches tall, weighs 112 pounds and has a neat figure. She has admitted that she is not really a natural platinum blonde, but only after that shade was no longer the rage.

She doesn't consider herself all dressed up unless she has a beauty mark pasted on her face.

She seldom wears any jewelry, excepting a star ruby ring on the little finger of her right hand. She used to decorate herself with plenty of jewelry, but she has learned better. She wears a slave bracelet on her left ankle. She claims she gave it to herself.

She generally eats what she likes. She doesn't care for sweets so she doesn't have to watch her weight as much as the average actress. She favors vigorous massages and helps keep her figure by taking a spanking.

When she is working in a flicker, she seldom goes to night clubs or parties. When not in a picture she has her fun. At a party she will sit on the floor.

She is about the best woman dice shooter in the picture colony. In fact, it is her favorite gambling game. It's very interesting to watch her roll the dice. She is proud of the fact that she holds the unofficial record for the gambling casino at Caliente—34 straight passes.

* * * *

She is a good actress, excepting a tendency to overact at times. She is very anxious to improve. She takes vocal lessons, piano lessons and is studying French.

She prefers to roam about the house in pajamas. She often wears pajamas when she drives to the studio in her car. She may have a mink coat over the pajamas.

She hates to wear gloves, always throws kisses at a load of hay, hasn't a pet name although a few people call her Baby. She is very ticklish.

When she gets angry she throws things and yells. Her aim is pretty good and her voice is loud. She uses perfume liberally. She is practically a chain smoker.

New Deal Cost Exceeds War's, League Asserts

American Liberty Group Asserts Expenditures Are 27% Higher.

By the Associated Press.

The American Liberty League announced in a statement yesterday that expenditures in four years of New Deal Administration would "exceed by at least 27 per cent the direct cost of the United States in carrying on its operations in the World War."

Summarizing what it said was the "budget situation," the league included these points:

"Expenditures in the four years will be at least 33 per cent more than the total cost of the Government from 1789 to 1913. * * *

"For the entire four years expenditures will be at an average rate of about $2 for every $1 in receipts. * * *

"The public debt at the end of three full fiscal years of the New Deal was 32 per cent above the peak of the World War debt and 61 per cent greater than at the beginning of the Roosevelt Administration.

"The debt burden on each man, woman and child, only about $12 before the World War, has risen to $263 and may reach nearly $300 by the end of the four years of the New Deal. * * *

"Emergency as well as general expenditures have continued to increase, although Mr. Roosevelt says the emergency has passed, and although business improvement has been in progress and relief outlays should have declined."

Lee Visit Feature Of County Pageant

Front Royal, Va., July 26.—One of the 11 episodes for the historical pageant which will feature the Warren County centennial celebration August 7 to 9 will depict a visit of Robert E. Lee to Bel Air, now the home of S. Byrne Downing, treasurer of Warren County, in Front Royal.

In August, 1863, the three corps of the Army of Northern Virginia, returning from Pennsylvania after the Battle of Gettysburg, passed through Front Royal. As Lee was riding through Front Royal, William Buck, owner of Bel Air, invited him to rest. Lee accepted and, with two members of his staff, spent several hours at the Buck home.

In the pageant, Stephen M. Boyd, jr., will represent Gen. Lee, and Charles Ambler and Hubert H. Marlowe, member of the local town council, will impersonate the staff officers. Giles Downing, son of the present owner, will play the role of William Buck, master of Bel Air in 1863, and Mrs. Julian N. Major will take the part of Mrs. Buck. Miss Lucy Buck, daughter of the former owner, will be represented by Miss Annie Buck, descendant of the family.

Another episode will describe the visit of Bishop Francis Asbury to Front Royal in 1804. The Rev. R. B. Clagett, pastor of the Methodist Church here, and Hugh H. Bowman will take part.

Still another scene will depict the discovery of the Shenandoah Valley by John Lederer, physician and explorer, who with Col. Catlett and several Indian guides, penetrated the Blue Ridge Mountains through Manassas Gap, at Linden, in 1670, and was the first white man to behold the valley west of the Blue Ridge. Dr. F. E. White, S. D. Boyd, commissioner of revenue of Warren County, and Elliott D. Marshall, will play roles in the scene.

Aid Seekers Picket Lawmaker's Home

Harrisburg, Pa., July 26 (AP). — Delegations from the reinforced "jobless army" besieging the State capital for $100,000,000 unemployment relief, picketed the home of Senator George L. Reed on the fashionable river front today.

Nearly 100 men, women, and children paraded from the State House with banners that read "Sock the Rich and Feed the Poor" and "64 Cents Per Day Per Person."

Reed, one of the most outspoken Republicans in the Senate, has been a prominent figure in the nearly 12-week controversy in the Legislature over a tax program to provide $45,000,000 for the unemployed.

Another delegation went to Lancaster to picket the home of John Homsher, president pro tempore of the Senate, and headquarters of the "army" said a group would picket the residence of Senator John J. McClure in Delaware County.

More than 200 others, who have occupied the bronzed galleries of the Senate since last Monday night, prayed for relief today at a religious service conducted by the Rev. Dr. Paul Cotton, of Easton.

Speed Work to Save Crop.

Moscow, July 26 (AP).—Farmers of the rich Ukraine valley are toiling day and noght to harvest the matured grain crop, threatened by intense heat. The Soviet state today said 61,000,000 acres were harvested up to July 20, this was 27 per cent of the total acreage.

The thermometer today read from 92 degrees at Archangel, on the fringe of the Arctic to 93 and 96 degrees at Leningrad and Moscow. Residents of the latter two cities crowded beaches.

French Red Beaten.

Rouen, July 26 (AP).—A peasant crowd today beat Renaud-Jean, French Communist deputy, and injured several other Communists in a fight which broke up a meeting at Yvetot, near here. The peasants refused to permit three officers designated by the Leftist Popular Front to preside at the meeting in a theater and chose their own men, including the local chief of the Rightist "peasant defense committee."

Plane Hunt Ended.

South Haven, Mich., July 26 (AP).—Coast Guardsmen gave up their search for a plane reported to have fallen in Lake Michigan and returned to their base here without any trace of it early today after a 12-hour hunt.

South Haven is not on regular course of any air line and no reports were received of any plane being missing.

Jean Unfurls a New Coloration

Having achieved world-wide fame as the first of the cinema's platinum blondes, the delectable Miss Jean Harlow suddenly took it into her whimsical head to become what she was pleased to denominate a "brownette." Now she is even one shade darker than that, as observers of her vivacious pastiming in "Suzy" will testify. Here is Miss Harlow's latest portrait study, just out of the photo-mailer from Culver City, Calif., snapped for the exclusive purpose of showing how she looks in her latest vehicle. "Suzy," it will be recalled, is the current screen attraction at Loew's Fox Theater, where "Spring Is Here" is the stage offering, with Ernest Truex.

The Federal Diary

Dr. George S. Myers, the curator of the more than 1,000,000 fishes at the United States National Museum, is leaving the Government service next month to return to the teaching profession.

Dr. Meyers has been in Washington since January, 1933. In his new post he becomes associate professor of biology and curator of the zoological museum of Leland Stanford University in California. Before joining the staff of the National Museum, he did some teaching at the university and says he's "really sorry to be leaving Washington," but he feels the new job is a real opportunity in his field. He took both his undergraduate work and his doctor's degree at Stanford, so it will be like returning home for him to get back there.

The work he has been doing here, he explained, has been largely with classification and reclassification of fishes. He also explained that the plural of that word is fishes when applied to many species, but is fish when talking of the plural of only one species.

"The division of fishes in the National Museum acts as sort of a clearing house on fishes and looks after the Government collection," he said.

"The one here in Washington is one of the three finest collections in the world, the other two being in London and Paris."

Much research on classification is done here, but the problems of their care, breeding, diseases and such are under the direction of the Bureau of Fisheries, with which the museum works closely. Many of the great scientists head into the National Museum for information and many of the exhibits there have been donated by the men who visit the strange spots of the world looking for new specimens.

While the zoological museum at Stanford is small, Dr. Myers said, it is considered a very fine one. It was started by the late David Starr Jordan, who he said was the world's foremost ichthyologist and former president of the university.

The day Edward C. Anderson's great-grandchild arrived there was hardly any work done over in the mail room of Internal Revenue, for everyone from the surrounding offices came in to congratulate him. And congratulations have been pouring in ever since then, for the new arrival can boast of five living generations on each side of his family, and Anderson has been called upon innumerable times to tell the family history.

The baby is John Wesley Middlekaumm, jr., grandson of another Government employe, Harvey M. Middlekaumm, who is a mechanic at the Navy Yard and has two great-grandmothers living in and near Washington.

In the large old house at 800 Nicholson street live Anderson and his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Middlekaumm; his grandson and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. John Wesley Middlekaumm, and when the youngster arrives home from the hospital there will be four generations in the one household. Anderson's mother, Mrs. Barbara Anderson, lives in Frederick, Md.

Mrs. John Middlekaumm's great-grandmother is also living and if it is possible for the old people to come, the family is going to have a get-together to celebrate the arrival of its youngest member.

"I am delighted," said Anderson, "but I can't say I feel old enough to be a great-grandfather. Everyone all over the building has been in to congratulate me."

The history of annuities in the Internal Revenue Service was reviewed recently for the employes who have been asking for a statement of just what the situation is. To date 1,039 from that service have been retired on annuities, 306 because of disability. The retirement act applies only to employes in the classified civil service and as it relates to Internal Revenue, it provides for automatic retirement at the age of 70 after 15 years service or for optional retirement at the age of 68 after 30 years of service.

There is no age limit for disability retirement except that a minimum service of five years is required.

At the present time, the average annuity for the entire Government service is $990 a year while the maximum is about $1,200, but the future looks brighter for the deductions in individual accounts will make larger annuities possible in the future. The retirement fund on March 31 of this year was $294,360,857.99.

The Department of Agriculture reports a growing demand for quality grading of meats and fresh produce by Government inspectors.

The Government inspection of fresh fruits and vegetables was begun at receiving markets by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in 1917 and extended to shipping points in 1922 and the latest word about the work is that during the past year about one-third of the commercial supply came under the eyes of Government men, a total of more than 360,000 carloads of 80 different products. This service, which is optional, is self-supporting and is conducted co-operatively with State departments of agriculture, although it is entirely a Federal activity.

Although the Army, Navy and other Federal institutions purchase Government graded meats only, the demand from the public to have Uncle Sam's stamp of approval on what comes into home kitchens has grown so tremendously that at the end of the fiscal year in 1936 about 400,000,000 pounds of beef, lamb, pork, veal and sausage products were graded and stamped by the Government, as compared with 284,000,000 pounds in the previous fiscal year.

This has meant an increase in the number of men the bureau has employed in this work.

Workers in Wire Plant Stoned; Striker Jailed

Sterling, Ill., July 26 (AP).—Stones were hurled at workers today in a new outbreak of violence at the Northwestern Barb Wire Co. when the night shift left the plant at 7 a. m. (E. S. T.), and attempted to drive through lines of picketing strikers.

Deputy sheriffs on duty at the plant jailed Edward Harney, a striker, when a rock they said he had thrown at a worker's automobile, crashed through the windshield. No one was hurt.

Defensive Bidding.

When your opponents have opened the bidding there are two cases in which you may wish to enter the bidding also.

1. For defensive purposes. You may wish to call your partner's attention to a suit in which to make an opening lead. Also, even if your hand is weak you may be able to make a sacrifice bid. This will pay if you are set less than the value of the game which your opponents can bid and make.

2. Of course, you must enter the bidding when you have such a strong hand that you may be able to bid and make a game yourself.

But in order to avoid being disastrously set you must not overcall an opponent's bid unless you are safe under the rule of two and three.

The Culbertson Rule of Two and Three.

In defensive bidding count your winners and be sure that you can win, in your own hand, within two tricks of your contract if you are vulnerable, and within three tricks of your contract if you are not vulnerable. Then you can never take a set of more than 500 points.

Hold-Up Play.

The hold-up play, intended to exhaust the communicating cards between the two defenders is known to almost all players of average and higher rank, but strangely enough it is used almost exclusively at no-trump contracts. Opponents for its employment occur at least as frequently at suit contracts, but the play is either overlooked entirely, or shunned for some inadequate reason, usually the unwarranted fear of a ruff. In today's hand the success of the contract depends entirely on a hold-up play.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

North decided that, since his partner could not make an asking bid over the double raise, he himself would not be justified in passing the game level, by "asking" with his very bad (4-3-3-3) distribution. This decision was eminently sound.

West selected the club ten as his opening lead and the declarer took stock. His obvious danger lay in losing two tricks in hearts and two in clubs. A successful finesse against one of the heart honors would limit the heart loss to one trick, but if west had both honors, this maneuver would not work. However, even if this bad distribution of hearts existed, it would still be possible to make the game if South's long heart could be established before the opponents should grab their two club tricks.

On this perfect reasoning the opening lead was ducked. East overtook and returned the heart eight; declarer played low and West won with the queen. Another club followed, and now declarer put up the ace, drew three rounds of trumps, and led the heart jack, letting it ride. West won, but was now out of clubs and could not prevent the declarer from discarding dummy's club on his good forth heart, afterward ruffing the losing club in dummy.

Rushe Opposes W. S. Freeman In Fire Election

Vote to Feature Convention of County Association at Hyattsville.

A lively contest for the office of president of the Volunteer Firemen's Association of Prince Georges County was in prospect today following the announcement that William S. Freeman, deputy chief of the Mount Rainier Fire Department and a candidate for that office, will be opposed by Noble Rushe, former chief of the Hyattsville department.

The election will feature the annual convention of the association to be held in Hyattsville on Friday and Saturday, August 7 and 8, at the Olive Street School.

Freeman has been an atcive member of the Mount Rainier unit for the last 16 years, 8 of which he served as captain. In 1934 he was elected deputy chief to succeed A. J. Bates, who resigned following his election to the Mount Rainier Town Council.

Since 1922, when the county association was formed, Mount Rainier has furnished two of its presidents, Francis H. Crown in 1926 and Chief Karl A. Young in 1930.

Former State President.

Rushe is a former president of the Maryland State Firemen's Association, having served as its head in 1933-34. In 1929 he was a candidate for president of the county group, but was defeated by Chief James E. Sampson of Brentwood.

He has had an active career in the affairs of both the county and State groups, having served as a member on several of their important committees.

Delegates to the convention from Mount Rainier were announced last night and include Deputy Chief W. S. Freeman, Capt. Bernard Beall, Lieut. Simon Lebowitz, Sergt. James Mezzinotte and H. Wilson. Alternates are Harry Robinson, Charles Xander, W. W. James, jr., V. Brown and Phil Ryan. All are pledged to Freeman.

Plans for the convention released yesterday call for the opening session to be held Friday night, August 7, in the Olive Street School auditorium. Mayor H. T. Willis of Hyattsville will deliver an address of welcome. Other speakers include John J. Fainter, first president of the county association, and W. R. Beattie, president of the group. The invocation will be delivered by the Rev. Lawton Riley, rector of Pinkney Memorial Episcopal Church.

The annual parade will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday. Contests are scheduled to start immediately following the parade at about 3 p. m. Memorial services for deceased firemen will be held at 7 p. m., and the convention will reconvene for its final session at 8 p. m. A dance will follow in the State armory.

Plans for donkey baseball games between the Mount Rainier Volunteer Fire Department and the Mount Rainier Police Department are nearing completion. The contest will be staged on the Mount Rainier High School diamond, at 8 p. m. Thursday, August 6.

Chief Eugene B. Plumer of the Police Department will pitch for his team, with former Chief George Buckholtz catching. It is expected that Capt. Bernard Beall, of the Fire Department, will pitch for his team. His battery mate has not yet been selected. Proceeds will go to the Fire Department.

The annual carnival sponsored by the St. James Catholic Church at Mount Rainier will open on Monday, August 3, and continue until Saturday, it has been announced. Plans are being made under direction of the Rev. R. Cotter Fitzgerald and William K. Werstick.

Assisting on the committee are F. Larkin, W. D. Lanham, Phil Vanneman, Francis Bailey, sr., F. Ryan, Peter J. Hagan, William H. Robicheau, T. Morhiser, Bernard Gerhardt and E. Wallach.

The event will be held on the church property at Thirty seventh street and Rhode Island avenue and will include many games of skill as well as amusements for children. Proceeds will go to the church building fund.

The choir of St. James' Catholic Church, Mount Rainier, will hold a card party in the church auditorium, Thirty seventh street and Rhode Island avenue at 8:30 tomorrow, for the benefit of the organ fund. Many attractive prizes will be offered.

Russell Road Construction Resumes Today

Project in Alexandria Is Halted for Sewer Installation.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Street construction work on Russell road, between Mount Vernon avenue and Glebe road, will be resumed by the contractors today, according to City Engineer H. G. McCartney. The work was halted due to the installation of a storm water sewer in that area. Contractors for the street work are McGuire & Rolfe.

A 14-foot culvert also is being built for the city by the Northern Virginia Construction Co. at the Linden street crossing over Hooff's Run. Similar culverts are to be constructed to connect up dead-end streets across the run.

The work of extending Cliff street, between Seventh street and the old tracks of the electric railway, is nearing completion. The extension of Clifford avenue, from the Washington & Old Dominion Railway tracks to Mount Vernon avenue, a distance of approximately 500 feet, is under way.

The Alexandria Chapter of DeMolay is planning a conference and rally November 5 and 6 in the George Washington Masonic Memorial Temple, with members of DeMolay chapters from Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, North Carolina and the District of Columbia as guests. The program will include, in addition to the business sessions, a dance, luncheons and sight-seeing trips.

Invitations will be extended to President Roosevelt, Col. Louis A. Watres, grand master of the DeMolays, and Secretary of War Dern, who also is a DeMolay.

Martin E. Greene, business manager of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, reports a considerable increase in business in the last few months. The coming to Alexandria of new residents, it was stated, has been a great help in almost every line of activity.

Greene said he had an interview with the manager of a new industry, who declared his business during May and June totaled $160,000. The plant has been in operation only about three months.

A great demand for the booklet on historic Alexandria, issued recently by the Chamber of Commerce, is reported, its distribution having reached all parts of the country, with the result that the tourist trade in Alexandria has shown a decided increase.

The barnyard golf tournament will be held by the Alexandria Playgrounds Association July 28 on the Oronoco street playground. Contestants 12 years of age and under will pitch horseshoes at 30 feet, while those from 13 to 18 years will pitch at 40 feet. Mrs. Virginia Ryder, director of playground activities, assisted by Allen Brown, will have charge of the scoring.

Playgrounds represented will be Washington, Lee, George Mason, Potomac View and Oronoco.

Arlington Area Gets Six More State Troopers

Force Now Is Increased to Ten; Nine Are Free for Highway Duty.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Six additional State police have been assigned to this area of northern Virginia under command of Sergt. E. J. McDermott, who is stationed at Alexandria. The men are from the group of 52 new officers who were recently sworn in.

By the additional officers the personnel of State police in this area, comprising Arlington and Fairfax counties and the City of Alexandria, is increased to ten men.

All are free for highway duty, since Officer A. J. Lucas has been assigned full time to the duty of issuing driving permits.

On Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m., Lucas will be at the Arlington County Courthouse. On Wednesdays, at the same hours, he will be at the City Hall at Alexandria, and on Fridays, during the same hours, at the Fairfax Courthouse.

Under the new orders for patrol duty, Officer R. H. Lester is assigned to Fairfax County, Officer C. B. Pressley to Arlington County and Officer E. C. Trice to Alexandria City.

In an effort to speed appointment of Arlington County's first fire chief and the distribution of the $9,600 fund allocated to county fire departments in this year's budget, representatives of the departments are planning to confer with County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan this week.

The $9,600 fund was included in this year's budget for distribution among the eight companies after an effort had been made to have the county board provide sufficient funds for a full-paid county fire department. Thus far no distribution of the funds have been made.

The judges were Mrs. Hugh Marshall, Mrs. Haywood Brown and Mrs. J. A. Burgess.

Montgomery County to Select Directors of Soil Conservation

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
9213 Clark Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Directors and community committeemen who will administer the soil conservation program in Montgomery County will be selected at a series of meetings in various sections of the county this week.

O. W. Anderson, county farm agent, has called a meeting for each district in the county for which one director and two committeemen will be chosen. All farmers who have signed work sheets in accordance with the Federal soil conservation regulations will be entitled to vote for the administrators in their district.

Meetings will be held at Poolesville High School tonight, tomorrow night at Barnesville Community Hall, Wednesday at the Darnestown school, Thursday in the farm bureau offices in the Rockville courthouse for Rockville and Gaithersburg districts, Friday at the Clarksburg school, and Monday, August 3, at the Colesville school for Colesville and Wheaton districts. All meetings are at 8 p. m.

Steps to secure removal of the trolley tracks of the abandoned Kensington trolley line within the town limits of Kensington will be discussed at a meeting of the mayor and town council tonight in the Kensington armory.

Mayor Edward R. Saunders has announced that a strong effort will be made to have the owner of the line, R. H. Phillips, voluntarily remove the tracks and also rolling stock that is now standing idle. If this fails legal steps may be taken.

The line has not been used since the abandonment of the Capital Transit Co. trolley line on Connecticut avenue rendered the Kensington line virtually useless by stopping service to Chevy Chase Lake where the local line served as a feeder. However, the tracks still are standing and Phillips has secured an injunction restraining the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission from extending Beach drive over the tracks in Rock Creek Park.

Tonight's meeting also will receive a report from Councilman Raymond Burgdorf on plans for constructing curbs and gutters that have been requested by two local property owners. Abutting property owners are assessed for two-thirds of the cost.

Mayor Saunders also is inviting the county board of education to send a representative to the meeting to explain what progress is being made toward construction of the new junior high school in Kensington, for which a bond issue of $160,000 has been authorized by the State Legislature. An attempt also will be made to have the State roads commission expedite the elimination of the local grade crossing, Saunders announced.

Five special taxing areas in the western suburban district of the county are carrying a $20,000 road improvement program. The work is being carried on in the towns of Somerset and Friendship Heights and in sections 2, 3 and 4 of Chevy Chase.

Contract for the work in Somerset was let recently by the town council and work will start in the near future. Approximately $6,000 will be spent on resurfacing Dorset avenue from Wisconsin avenue to the entrance to Kenwood, and repairing other streets in the town.

In Friendship Heights work will consist mainly of repairing damage done to the town streets by the severe cold last winter. The same situation exists in sections 2 and 5, Chevy Chase, and the cost in each locality is relatively small.

In section 4 construction of more than 5,000 feet of sidewalks on both sides of Meadow lane from Leland street to Valley place is nearing completion. The work is financed by an $8,500 bond issue authorized by town taxpayers several months ago.

Approximately $5,000 is to be spent to repave and place top dressing on streets in section 3.

St. Martin's Parochial School in Gaithersburg will be the scene of a joint lawn fete of St. Martin's Church and St. Rose's Church, Cloppers, tomorrow, Wednesday nad Thursday.

A public hearing will be held in the Silver Spring County Building on August 10 at 7 p. m. on the petition of Matthew Trimble for a rezoning of the Darby farm on Georgia avenue north of Wheaton from residetnial "A" to commercial "D."

The rezoning is sought by Mr. Trimble to permit location of a summer theater on the tract, which will be operated by Stephen E Cochran, of the National Theater in Washington. Cochran plans to open the theater next summer if the rezoning is approved, Trimble said.

Naugle Family to Hold Its Reunion Wednesday

Somerset, Pa., July 26.—The thirteenth annual reunion of the Naugle family will be held at St. Thomas Grove, near St. Thomas' Lutheran Church, in Paint township. The principal speaker will be the Rev. Russell T. Shilling, pastor of the Davidsville Lutheran Church. Oscar Naugle, Ann Arbor, Mich., also will speak.

The annual election of officers will take place in the afternoon. Present officers are H. D. Naugle, president; Albert Naugle, vice president; S. P. Naugle, secretary; J. Ernest Naugle, treasurer, and the Rev. V. D. Naugle, historian.

Retail Unit Meets, Outlines Program

A broad program of co-operative effort was outlined yesterday by members of the American Retail Federation, meeting at the Hamilton Hotel, as they pledged their support of a movement to develop strong retail groups in all States.

The retail men decided that certain problems of mutual interest, especially in legislation and research, could best be solved through an alliance of effort. Their program is designed to build distribution into an economic unit capable of benefiting both the trade and the consumer.

Col. Clarence O. Sherrill, president of the federation, explained that the organization proposes to represent all classes and types of retailers in national legislative matters and to serve as a clearing house for research data. The group will also attempt to promote agreements among merchants on uniform store hours.

Rep. Drewry Nominated For Re-election in Va.

Petersburg, Va., July 26 (AP).—The Fourth District Democratic committee has announced that Representative P. H. Drewry has been declared the party nominee for re-election.

The statement, signed by S. B. Barham, jr., chairman of the committee, and Jennie H. Turner, secretary, said no other person had filed notice of candidacy.

On The Air Today

The postman just passed by; dropped off two letters, innocent appearing enough—but which offer, by way of coincidence, an intriguing illustration of the American versus British policy and practice of radio broadcasting.

One is a condensed review of an article appearing in the current Time issue which states that after ten years of experiment with a government-regulated monopoly controlling all radio broadcasting in the British Isles, the British government has granted a ten-year renewal of the Royal Charter of British Broadcasting Corporation, despite complaints of the listening public that programs are dull and monotonous."

The other announces that the radio division of the Republican National Committee has purchased daily 15-minute periods of the National Broadcasting Co., to be turned over, without reservation, to William Hard, widely known political commentator, to use as he sees fit.

Mr. Hard's sponsor, a political party entering a Presidential campaign, announces that "it is hoped that a real contribution to public thought may be given and that the usual one-sided political discussion will be avoided."

The Time article, by contrast, states that Britain's radio monopoly has become "so obnoxious to many of the British Broadcasting Corporation's 3,000 employes" that the government stepped in and recommended that the staff should be free from any control by the corporation over their private lives. This was the outgrowth of the corporation's policy of discharging employes who obtained divorces!

Now there is no direct comparison between Mr. Hard's becoming a commercially sponsored radio artist, and the B. B. C. firing employes as a result of censorship of their personal affairs.

But indirectly the contrary theories and practices of American and British broadcasting become astonishingly clear.

Whatever complaints we may have with our broadcast fare, we can all admit that for variety, novelty and the capacity to entertain, it is beyond any comparison with what we hear by short wave from the other side. By frequently listening to the Deventry short-wave station, we Americans can hear some perfectly delightful program features. But for a steady diet—I shudder.

It is interesting to recall that Pat O'Malley, of Jack Hylton's Revue, said back stage at the Earle a few weeks ago that neither the listener nor the artist was very well pleased with the British type of radio control, but added that the London listener got a little better quality and variety of program than those short-waved from Daventry for foreign consumption. In other words, we do not get a fair sample of British radio broadcasting on this side.

Although B. B. C. carries no commercial programs paid for by an advertiser with something to sell, it may accept "sponsored" programs credited to private companies and has done so on occasions, according to the Time article. A recent example was the Hyde Park Community Sing, a stunt by a newspaper. B. B. C. and the newspaper merely exchanged radio publicity for program expense.

B. B. C. originally was set up by radio manufacturers to provide something for listeners to listen to. It is now a public institution somewhere between a government department and a commercial undertaking, according to Time. But under the ultimate control of the government and operating under a government charter.

In the interests of acoustics, the B. B. C. building, known as Broadcasting House, is said to be "sealed like a tomb and ventilated like a submarine." According to our standards of broadcasting, that language might explain somewhat the dullness of British program features.

Whatever deficiencies you have noted in the American scheme of things, you do get action. Never a dull moment, so to speak. Boake Carter and the Governor of New Jersey (so it appears) will meet in court—and Bill Hard is to have an uncensored daily political quarter hour.

The theater-going public of Washington will go to the "polls" today to vote for a new name for Loew's Fox Theater.

Ballots and ballot boxes have been placed in the lobbies of the Fox, Palace and Columbia theaters and the voting, which will start this morning, will continue through next Sunday afternoon, at which time the votes will be counted and a new name will be announced to supplant the "Fox," which has identified the popular F street house since its opening in the fall of 1927.

After a strenuous week-end, during which Fox Theater attaches waded through more than 5,000 names, proposed during a week of "primaries," the following were "elected" as "candidates" for the new name:

Loew's President.
The Marcus Loew.
Loew's Nation.
Loew's Capitol.
Loew's Federal.
Loew's Capital.
Loew's Congressional.
Loew's Diplomat.
Loew's Embassy.
Loew's Union.

Ballot Boxes in Lobbies.

Those who attend any of the three Loew theaters this week will be given a ballot on which these ten names are listed. One of the ten will embellish a modern, new, Neon sign which will identify the present Fox on and after August 14, the date it is planned to have the new sign ready for installation.

All material for the new sign has been ordered and immediately upon selection of the new name, work will be rushed to complete it so that it can be unveiled the same night that the fourth annual production of "Going Native" is presented.

The following Washingtonians are each to be rewarded with a cash prize of $5 for having suggested the above ten names. While there were thousands of others who likewise suggested the same names, these persons are being rewarded for the neatness of their entries, the ingenious method in which they were presented and for the clarity of reasoning accompanying each suggestion.

Mrs. John A. Smith, 4000 Cathedral avenue, suggested the "President," and in addition to her excellent reasoning her slogan "It Tops Them All" earned her the prize; Pearl McPherson, 104 West Thornapple street, Chevy Chase, Md., "The Nation; Jean Allen, 5812 Thirty-second street northwest, "The Capitol," hers being deemed outstanding because of the reasoning and an unusually clever sketch of the proposed name; "The Capital" by William L. Banning, of the Portland Hotel at Thomas Circle; Miss Grace K. Healy, 206 F street northwest, "The Congressional;" T. L. Fossick, jr., 1745 Columbia road, "The Embassy;" Zella Boteler, 6805 Forty-sixth street, Chevy Chase, Md., "The Diplomat;" Philip Yecies, 2731 Woodley place northwest, "The Union;" Paul J. Schwarz, 112 Park avenue, Takoma Park, Md., "The Federal," and Dorothy Mason Walton, of 1601 Argonne place northwest, for "The Marcus Loew," suggesting that this would make a "most appropriate permanent memorial to Marcus Loew, the great, humorous, kindly little man who founded the Loew chain and brought so much to the amusement world."

Additional Prizes.

In addition to the $5 awards, each of the above winners still has a chance of winning the major award of $20 in cash and a free round trip over the Pennsylvania Airlines to the Great Lakes Exposition in Cleveland. This dual award will go to the person whose name emerges as the "people's choice."

The Loew management was so impressed with the excellence and sincerity of those interested in changing the name of Loew's Fox that it will issue guest tickets to each of the following for the inaugural night of the new name:

Jane, John and Pat Jacob, 3259 R street northwest; Ruth Hayward, care Register of the Treasury; Harry W. Zichterman, 1321 Rhode Island avenue northwest; Elinor Fox Gherkin, Chastleton Hotel; C. W. Campbell, 735 Twelfth street northwest; Ruth K. Walls, 1324 Monroe street northwest; Adeline Shenwell, 1743 Columbia road northwest; Phyllis Scott, 1730 M street northwest; John Arthur Shaw, 907 Fifteenth street northwest; Mrs. A. T. Miller, 1345 Nineteenth street northwest; Carlos Larazolo, 2106 F street northwest; Robert Brown, 148 Conden road, Indian Head, Md.; Samuel T. Hill, 736 Twenty-second street northwest; Margy Staton, 2019 Nineteenth street northwest; Frank B. Cook, 903 District National Bank Building; Morris Fradin, 1764 Columbia road northwest; Jo Sy. Clair, 1907 K street northwest.

Through Division Manager Carter Barron the Fox wishes to thank Washingtonians for their amazing response and interest. Results of the voting will be tabulated and announced each day during the "election."

About the Showshops

A HANDSOME brochure in red velour and ivory reaches the desk opportunely, to convey to the world United Artists' announcement of product for the season of 1936-37. The striking external beauty of the booklet is nothing to the multi-colored gorgeousness of its contents. U. A. has some notable producers, stars and titles to offer the trade and picture-going gentry and obviously is proud to perform the chore in the grand or opulent manner.

BELL.

The producers whose wares will be distributed to the far corners of the earth by United Artists include Samuel Goldwyn, Pickford-Lasky, a short-lived coalition whose joint activities have not quite run out; David O. Selznick and his Selznick International Productions, Alexander Korda and his London Films releases, Walter Wagner Productions and Reliance Pictures.

Of stars and productions, such things of note as the following may be expected: Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton, Mary Astor and Paul Lukas in "Dodsworth," the film version of the Sinclair Lewis novel adapted to the stage with such eminent success by Sidney Howard; Edward Arnold in "Come and Get It," by Edna Ferber, and "The Man With a Young Wife;" Eddie Cantor in "Sonny Boy," Miriam Hopkins in "Women Can Be Wrong," Merle Oberon in "In Love and War," Marlene Dietrich and Charles Boyer in "The Garden of Allah," by Robert Hichens; Ronald Colman, Roland Young and Elizabeth Bergner in vehicles commensurate with their superlative capabilities; "The Last of the Mohicans," with Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes, Heather Angel, Henry Wilcoxon, Phillip Reed, Bruce Cabot, Hugh Buckler and Robert Barrat all in the cast; "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" and Charles Laughton in "Rembrandt" and "I, Claudius," not to mention Charles Boyer in "History Is Made at Night;" Spencer Tracy, Sylvia Sydney and Henry Fonda in "Three-Time Loser;" Wanger's "Arabian Nights" and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and Dolores Del Rio in "Accused" and the junior Fairbanks alone in "High Treason."

I am beginning to understand now why Charlie Kranz, Washington branch manager for United Artists, has been walking around with his chest stuck 'way out to here these past few days!

* * * *

The announcement of the forthcoming release of "The Garden of Allah," co-starring Marlene Dietrich and Charles Boyer, particularly interests this column because it has been filmed entirely in Technicolor and David O. Selznick, the producer, and your reporter are so completely in consonance with regard to the future of natural color in photography and its value to the cinema. We had our most recent say on the subject in the theater section of yesterday's Post. As if in intentional corroboration of our view, a separate pamphlet on the topic of "Allah," just to hand from Mr. Selznick, has these things to say:

"The motion picture world is at the present time stirred by the same sort of revolutionary movement that changed and improved it so radically eight years ago. Like the introduction of sound, Technicolor is sweeping the industry, opening up vast new potentialities of technique and, backed by popular demand, supplanting outmoded methods which preceded it.

"Color brings a warmth and life to motion pictures that successfully eliminates the last valid criticism which has been directed against the cinema as an artistic form. The coldness that limited black-and-white pictures is gone."

That, precisely, is the way we feel about it.

Dots and Dashes.

A note from that sturdy old war horse of the selling front, Charlie McCarthy, gives warning that Twentieth Century-Fox in its production of "Girls' Dormitory" really has something . . . Herbert Marshall, Ruth Chatterton and Simone Simon have the leads in this "unusual and provocative film drama" . . . Release date is set for August 14 . . . Big day in Washington, that August 14 . . . It will unfurl both the new name of Loew's Fox Theater and the fourth annual production of Gene Ford's "Going Native" revue . . . About that new name for the Fox, see column 1 on this page—I hope . . . Gloria Blondell, sister of Joan, the film star, and member of one of the oldest of America's theatrical families, will be the guest star on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week at Robert Porterfield's Barter Theater at Abingdon, Va. . . . She will play Gladys George's role in "Personal Appearance" . . . Helen Dunlop, formerly resident in this city, also is prominently cast . . . It may be a little late to mention it, but when Lionel Barrymore assumed that old woman's disguise in "The Devil Doll" and threw his voice clear up into the top of its range, he was so much like Sister Ethel in both appearance and sound that it was at times almost as uncanny as the Lilliputian figures Director Tod Browning had climbing up over the soles of people's shoes to shoot them in the ankle with rattlesnake venom—or whatever it was . . . He is even said to have detected the resemblance himself, having remarked upon his first view of the picture, "That isn't Lionel, that's Ethel" . . . Director Sidney Gottlieb, of the Jewish Community Center Little Theater, has set August 4, 5 and 6 as tentative dates for the casting of a one-act play and a full-length play, the names of which will be announced later . . . Dorothy Scott, who plays the role of Ernest Truex's wife in "Spring Is Here," on the stage at Loew's Fox this week, was a member of the cast of Max Gordon's production of "Pride and Prejudice" when it opened here at the National . . . She played the part of the nurse, Mrs. Lake . . . All right, come down here and I'll show you the program.

* * * *

To stimulate the writing, production and publication of new American plays, the Charles H. Sergel Prize of $500 is offered for the manuscript which in the opinion of the judges represents the best full-length play submitted between October 1, 1936, and April 1, 1937. Manuscripts should be sent to the Charles H. Sergel Play Contest, University of Chicago, Chicago, Ill. Alfred Kreymborg was the 1935-36 winner with his play, "Commencement." So unstrap that old trunk and dig around!

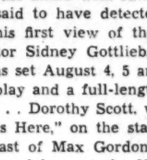
Comebacks.

Marie Dressler was turned down by every major picture company, but the Terrific Letdown of their indifference only made her more persistent . . . Clark Gable was turned loose by Warners, branded a flop, but look at him today . . . So, too, was Ginger Rogers . . . They didn't pick up her contract option on the Warner lot . . . Look at her today . . . Norma Shearer Built Up to a Terrific Letdown when Universal fired her because she asked for a salary of $100 a week, but look at her now . . . Margaret Sullivan experienced a Terrific Letdown when Paramount rejected her screen and Columbia told her that she could not be photographed . . . Charles Boyer probably was tempted to chuck it when M.-G.M refused to sign him at any salary . . . All of these Built Up From Terrific Letdowns, because they had courage enough to get up from the canvas after being spilled by a right hand to the chin . . . Unlike Max Baer, they didn't take the count on one knee, for when Lady Luck selects a recipient for her favors, she doesn't pick a guy with calloses on his knees.



CLARK GABLE.

Joseph K. Emmett, Irish singer, was canceled after his first show at Loew's State Theater . . . I'll be back," he promised . . . Years later, Emmett made good his promise . . . He came back, not as an actor, but as manager of the Capitol Theater, prize house of the Loew circuit.

* * * *

* * * *

The boy in the Baltimore institution who was always getting into trouble . . . Jack Dunn, wise and human, took a liking to the kid, signed guardianship papers, took him out of the industrial school . . . Babe Ruth vindicated Dunn's belief in him.

John the Barber, famous New York character, disgusted because a young heavyweight he owned was beaten by John Lester Johnson . . . "You're not cut out for fighting, young fellow," said John . . . "Go on back home."

It was a terrific letdown for the young heavyweight, but he is fairly well known today as Jack Dempsey.

Phil Regan ransacks the Manhattan phone book and comes up with an entire dance index: Sidney Trucker, Bertha Swinger, Mrs. B. Charleston, Raymond Swing, George Waltz, Abe Waltzer, R. Shuffler and John Rumbaugh . . . There is an I. J. Fox and a Max Trott . . . Not to mention a Belle Hopp .

By the United Press.

Hollywood, July 26.—Stepin Fetchit, ebony apostle of inertia, premiered "Harlemwood," his workless black and tan Utopia, today before what he calls the "whipped cream" of Hollywood's darktown.

Nucleus of the Negro Valhalla, named after Harlem and Hollywood, and "combining the best features of the two," is a marine roof garden atop a four-story apartment building owned by the dusky actor.

Originally, Step conceived Harlemwood as a model country town full of green and white houses, red street lamps and gaudily uniformed policemen, but switched locations because building the town would require effort, and work is against his principles.

"This heah garden is only the beginning," explains Fetchit. "Pretty soon Harlemwood gonna' extend over this whole block."

An Aerial Ocean Front.

The garden is an imitation ocean beach, complete with a pavilion in the form of an imitation ship riding an imitation wave. Fetchit hauled the sand from Santa Monica himself, in the back seat of his swanky limousine. Other props are half a dozen beach chairs, four 'rickshaws, a joblot of reclining lounges and a battery of fans blowing refrigerated air.

The "highest classedest jigs in town" must come attired in bathing suits and white sailor caps in keeping with the scene if they want to frolic in Harlemwood, says Fetchit.

Step, however, has decided against ruling his colony as mayor, chairman of the planning commission and president of the chamber of commerce.

"Reckon I got to be a dictator," he said. "This is going to be a real jig heaven, where nobody works unless I tell him to—and you know I ain't going to do that.

"'Course I don't object to the women doing a little cooking and washing, or pulling the men folks around in the 'rickshaws, but I ain't goin' let 'em overdo it, and that's why I got to be dictator. It will take real power to keep everybody slowed down."

Tintypes.

Hollywood, July 26.

Jean Harlow, while on the set making the flicker, "Suzy," had a portable dressing room, and next to it was a victrola which played swing music while she relaxed.

Although the scenario was prepared by numerous writers long before the flicker went into production, a new script was handed to director George Fitzmaurice as he kept shooting.

Miss Harlow would read a scene, rehearse it a number of times and then Director Fitzmaurice would start making a "take." Every scene would average about five "takes." When he was really ready to get a "take" to print, Director Fitzmaurice would say to Miss Harlow: "Let's make this one for the statuette." They both smiled.

After the sneak preview, "Suzy" back into production for what they termed "added scenes."

The "added scenes" were those sequences which took place in the theater and the sequences in the dressing room with Inez Courtney. It was decided to give Jean Harlow a pal, and to let Miss Harlow expound her philosophy. This, it was believed, would give her a definite characterization in the flicker. It should give you a little idea on how the picture was made.

Jean Harlow's real name is Harlean Carpenter. Recently, it was announced that she would go to court and ask that her name be changed legally to Harlow. It is believed that she would also like to change her name to Powell.

* * * *

She is 5 feet 3½ inches tall, weighs 112 pounds and has a neat figure. She has admitted that she is not really a natural platinum blonde, but only after that shade was no longer the rage.

She doesn't consider herself all dressed up unless she has a beauty mark pasted on her face.

She seldom wears any jewelry, excepting a star ruby ring on the little finger of her right hand. She used to decorate herself with plenty of jewelry, but she has learned better. She wears a slave bracelet on her left ankle. She claims she gave it to herself.

She generally eats what she likes. She doesn't care for sweets so she doesn't have to watch her weight as much as the average actress. She favors vigorous massages and helps keep her figure by taking a spanking.

When she is working in a flicker, she seldom goes to night clubs or parties. When not in a picture she has her fun. At a party she will sit on the floor.

She is about the best woman dice shooter in the picture colony. In fact, it is her favorite gambling game. It's very interesting to watch her roll the dice. She is proud of the fact that she holds the unofficial record for the gambling casino at Caliente—34 straight passes.

Although she is an established start, she is still trying to improve. She takes vocal lessons, piano lessons and is studying French.

She prefers to roam about the house in pajamas. She often wears pajamas when she drives to the studio in her car. She may have a mink coat over the pajamas.

She hates to wear gloves, always throws kisses at a load of hay, hasn't a pet name although a few people call her Baby. She is very ticklish.

When she gets angry she throws things and yells. Her aim is pretty good and her voice is loud. She uses perfume liberally. She is practically a chain smoker.

New Deal Cost Exceeds War's, League Asserts

American Liberty Group Asserts Expenditures Are 27% Higher.

By the Associated Press.

The American Liberty League announced in a statement yesterday that expenditures in four years of New Deal Administration would "exceed by at least 27 per cent the direct cost of the United States in carrying on its operations in the World War."

Summarizing what it said was the "budget situation," the league included these points:

"Expenditures in the four years will be at least 33 per cent more than the total cost of the Government from 1789 to 1913. * * *

"For the entire four years expenditures will be at an average rate of about $2 for every $1 in receipts. * * *

"The public debt at the end of three full fiscal years of the New Deal was 32 per cent above the peak of the World War debt and 61 per cent greater than at the beginning of the Roosevelt Administration.

"The debt burden on each man, woman and child, only about $12 before the World War, has risen to $263 and may reach nearly $300 by the end of the four years of the New Deal. * * *

"Emergency as well as general expenditures have continued to increase, although Mr. Roosevelt says the emergency has passed, and although business improvement has been in progress and relief outlays should have declined."

Lee Visit Feature Of County Pageant

Front Royal, Va., July 26.—One of the 11 episodes for the historical pageant which will feature the Warren County centennial celebration August 7 to 9 will depict a visit of Robert E. Lee to Bel Air, now the home of S. Byrne Downing, treasurer of Warren County, in Front Royal.

In August, 1863, the three corps of the Army of Northern Virginia, returning from Pennsylvania after the Battle of Gettysburg, passed through Front Royal. As Lee was riding through Front Royal, William Buck, owner of Bel Air, invited him to rest. Lee accepted and, with two members of his staff, spent several hours at the Buck home.

In the pageant, Stephen M. Boyd, jr., will represent Gen. Lee, and Charles Ambler and Hubert H. Marlowe, member of the local town council, will impersonate the staff officers. Giles Downing, son of the present owner, will play the role of William Buck, master of Bel Air in 1863, and Mrs. Julian N. Major will take the part of Mrs. Buck. Miss Lucy Buck, daughter of the former owner, will be represented by Miss Annie Buck, descendant of the family.

Another episode will describe the visit of Bishop Francis Asbury to Front Royal in 1804. The Rev. R. B. Clagett, pastor of the Methodist Church here, and Hugh H. Bowman will take part.

Still another scene will depict the discovery of the Shenandoah Valley by John Lederer, physician and explorer, who with Col. Catlett and several Indian guides, penetrated the Blue Ridge Mountains through Manassas Gap, at Linden, in 1670, and was the first white man to behold the valley west of the Blue Ridge. Dr. F. E. White, S. D. Boyd, commissioner of revenue of Warren County, and Elliott D. Marshall, will play roles in the scene.

Aid Seekers Picket Lawmaker's Home

Harrisburg, Pa., July 26 (AP). — Delegations from the reinforced "jobless army" besieging the State capital for $100,000,000 unemployment relief, picketed the home of Senator George L. Reed on the fashionable river front today.

Nearly 100 men, women, and children paraded from the State House with banners that read "Sock the Rich and Feed the Poor" and "64 Cents Per Day Per Person."

Reed, one of the most outspoken Republicans in the Senate, has been a prominent figure in the nearly 12-week controversy in the Legislature over a tax program to provide $45,000,000 for the unemployed.

Another delegation went to Lancaster to picket the home of John Homsher, president pro tempore of the Senate, and headquarters of the "army" said a group would picket the residence of Senator John J. McClure in Delaware County.

More than 200 others, who have occupied the bronzed galleries of the Senate since last Monday night, prayed for relief today at a religious service conducted by the Rev. Dr. Paul Cotton, of Easton.

Speed Work to Save Crop.

Moscow, July 26 (AP).—Farmers of the rich Ukraine valley are toiling day and noght to harvest the matured grain crop, threatened by intense heat. The Soviet state today said 61,000-000 acres were harvested up to July 20, this was 27 per cent of the total acreage.

The thermometer today read from 92 degrees at Archangel, on the fringe of the Arctic to 93 and 96 degrees at Leningrad and Moscow. Residents of the latter two cities crowded beaches.

French Red Beaten.

Rouen, July 26 (AP).—A peasant crowd today beat Renaud-Jean, French Communist deputy, and injured several other Communists in a fight which broke up a meeting at Yvetot, near here. The peasants refused to permit three officers designated by the Leftist Popular Front to preside at the meeting in a theater and chose their own men, including the local chief of the Rightist "peasant defense committee."

Plane Hunt Ended.

South Haven, Mich., July 26 (AP).—Coast Guardsmen gave up their search for a plane reported to have fallen in Lake Michigan and returned to their base here without any trace of it early today after a 12-hour hunt.

South Haven is not on regular course of any air line and no reports were received of any plane being missing.

Jean Unfurls a New Coloration

Having achieved world-wide fame as the first of the cinema's platinum blondes, the delectable Miss Jean Harlow suddenly took it into her whimsical head to become what she was pleased to denominate a "brownette." Now she is even one shade darker than that, as observers of her vivacious pastiming in "Suzy" will testify. Here is Miss Harlow's latest portrait study, just out of the photomailer from Culver City, Calif., snapped for the exclusive purpose of showing how she looks in her latest vehicle. "Suzy," it will be recalled, is the current screen attraction at Loew's Fox Theater, where "Spring Is Here" is the stage offering, with Ernest Truex.

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

By Betty Read.

Dr. George S. Myers, the curator of the more than 1,000,000 fishes at the United States National Museum, is leaving the Government service next month to return to the teaching profession.

Dr. Meyers has been in Washington since January, 1933. In his new post he becomes associate professor of biology and curator of the zoological museum of Leland Stanford University in California. Before joining the staff of the National Museum, he did some teaching at the university and says he's "really sorry to be leaving Washington," but he feels the new job is a real opportunity in his field. He took both his undergraduate work and his doctor's degree at Stanford, so it will be like returning home for him to get back there.

The work he has been doing here, he explained, has been largely with classification and reclassification of fishes. He also explained that the plural of that word is fishes when applied to many species, but is fish when talking of the plural of only one species.

"The division of fishes in the National Museum acts as sort of a clearing house on fishes and looks after the Government collection," he said.

"The one here in Washington is one of the three finest collections in the world, the other two being in London and Paris."

Much research on classification is done here, but the problems of their care, breeding, diseases and such are under the direction of the Bureau of Fisheries, with which the museum works closely. Many of the great scientists head into the National Museum for information and many of the exhibits there have been donated by the men who visit the strange spots of the world looking for new specimens.

While the zoological museum at Stanford is small, Dr. Myers said, it is considered a very fine one. It was started by the late David Starr Jordan, who he said was the world's foremost ichthyologist and former president of the university.

The day Edward C. Anderson's great-grandchild arrived there was hardly any work done over in the mail room of Internal Revenue, for everyone from the surrounding offices came in to congratulate him. And congratulations have been pouring in ever since then, for the new arrival can boast of five living generations on each side of his family, and Anderson has been called upon innumerable times to tell the family history.

The baby is John Wesley Middlekaumm, jr., grandson of another Government employe, Harvey M. Middlekaumm, who is a mechanic at the Navy Yard and has two great-grandmothers living in and near Washington.

In the large old house at 800 Nicholson street live Anderson and his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Middlekaumm; his grandson and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. John Wesley Middlekaumm, and when the youngster arrives home from the hospital there will be four generations in the one household. Anderson's mother, Mrs. Barbara Anderson, lives in Frederick, Md.

Mrs. John Middlekaumm's great-grandmother is also living and if it is possible for the old people to come, the family is going to have a get-together to celebrate the arrival of its youngest member.

"I am delighted," said Anderson, "but I can't say I feel old enough to be a great-grandfather. Everyone all over the building has been in to congratulate me."

The history of annuities in the Internal Revenue Service was reviewed recently for the employes who have been asking for a statement of just what the situation is. To date 1,039 from that service have been retired on annuities, 306 because of disability. The retirement act applies only to employes in the classified civil service and as it relates to Internal Revenue, it provides for automatic retirement at the age of 70 after 15 years service or for optional retirement at the age of 68 after 30 years of service.

There is no age limit for disability retirement except that a minimum service of five years is required.

At the present time, the average annuity for the entire Government service is $990 a year while the maximum is about $1,200, but the future looks brighter for the deductions in individual accounts will make larger annuities possible in the future. The retirement fund on March 31 of this year was $294,360,857.99.

The Department of Agriculture reports a growing demand for quality grading of meats and fresh produce by Government inspectors.

The Government inspection of fresh fruits and vegetables was begun at receiving markets by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in 1917 and extended to shipping points in 1922 and the latest word about the work is that during the past year about one-third of the commercial supply came under the eyes of Government men, a total of more than 360,000 carloads of 80 different products. This service, which is optional, is self-supporting and is conducted co-operatively with State departments of agriculture, although it is entirely a Federal activity.

Although the Army, Navy and other Federal institutions purchase Government graded meats only, the demand from the public to have Uncle Sam's stamp of approval on what comes into home kitchens has grown so tremendously that at the end of the fiscal year in 1936 about 400,000,000 pounds of beef, lamb, pork, veal and sausage products were graded and stamped by the Government, as compared with 284,000,000 pounds in the previous fiscal year.

This has meant an increase in the number of men the bureau has employed in this work.

Workers in Wire Plant Stoned; Striker Jailed

Sterling, Ill., July 26 (AP).—Stones were hurled at workers today in a new outbreak of violence at the Northwestern Barb Wire Co. when the night shift left the plant at 7 a. m. (E. S. T.), and attempted to drive through lines of picketing strikers.

Deputy sheriffs on duty at the plant jailed Edward Harney, a striker, when a rock they said he had thrown at a worker's automobile, crashed through the windshield. No one was hurt.

Defensive Bidding.

When your opponents have opened the bidding there are two cases in which you may wish to enter the bidding also.

1. For defensive purposes. You may wish to call your partner's attention to a suit in which to make an opening lead. Also, even if your hand is weak you may be able to make a sacrifice bid. This will pay if you are set less than the value of the game which your opponents can bid and make.

2. Of course, you must enter the bidding when you have such a strong hand that you may be able to bid and make a game yourself.

But in order to avoid being disastrously set you must not overcall an opponent's bid unless you are safe under the rule of two and three.

The Culbertson Rule of Two and Three.

In defensive bidding count your winners and be sure that you can win, in your own hand, within two tricks of your contract if you are vulnerable, and within three tricks of your contract if you are not vulnerable. Then you can never take a set of more than 500 points.

Hold-Up Play.

The hold-up play, intended to exhaust the communicating cards between the two defenders is known to almost all players of average and higher rank, but strangely enough it is used almost exclusively at no-trump contracts. Opponents for its employment occur at least as frequently at suit contracts, but the play is either overlooked entirely, or shunned for some inadequate reason, usually the unwarranted fear of a ruff. In today's hand the success of the contract depends entirely on a hold-up play.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

North decided that, since his partner could not make an asking bid over the double raise, he himself would not be justified in passing the game level, by "asking" with his very bad (4-3-3-3) distribution. This decision was eminently sound.

West selected the club ten as his opening lead and the declarer took stock. His obvious danger lay in losing two tricks in hearts and two in clubs. A successful finesse against one of the heart honors would limit the heart loss to one trick, but if west had both honors, this maneuver would not work. However, even if this bad distribution of hearts existed, it would still be possible to make the game if South's long heart could be established before the opponents should grab their two club tricks.

On this perfect reasoning the opening lead was ducked. East overtook and returned the heart eight; declarer played low and West won with the queen. Another club followed, and now declarer put up the ace, drew three rounds of trumps, and led the heart jack, letting it ride. West won, but was now out of clubs and could not prevent the declarer from discarding dummy's club on his good forth heart, afterward ruffing the losing club in dummy.

Rushe Opposes W. S. Freeman In Fire Election

Vote to Feature Convention of County Association at Hyattsville.

A lively contest for the office of president of the Volunteer Firemen's Association of Prince Georges County was in prospect today following the announcement that William S. Freeman, deputy chief of the Mount Rainier Fire Department and a candidate for that office, will be opposed by Noble Rushe, former chief of the Hyattsville department.

The election will feature the annual convention of the association to be held in Hyattsville on Friday and Saturday, August 7 and 8, at the Olive Street School.

Freeman has been an atcive member of the Mount Rainier unit for the last 16 years, 8 of which he served as captain. In 1934 he was elected deputy chief to succeed A. J. Bates, who resigned following his election to the Mount Rainier Town Council.

Since 1922, when the county association was formed, Mount Rainier has furnished two of its presidents, Francis H. Crown in 1926 and Chief Karl A. Young in 1930.

Former State President.

Rushe is a former president of the Maryland State Firemen's Association, having served as its head in 1933-34. In 1929 he was a candidate for president of the county group, but was defeated by Chief James E. Sampson of Brentwood.

He has had an active career in the affairs of both the county and State groups, having served as a member on several of their important committees.

Delegates to the convention from Mount Rainier were announced last night and include Deputy Chief W. S. Freeman, Capt. Bernard Beall, Lieut. Simon Lebowitz, Sergt. James Mezzinotte and H. Wilson. Alternates are Harry Robinson, Charles Xander, W. W. James, jr., V. Brown and Phil Ryan. All are pledged to Freeman.

Plans for the convention released yesterday call for the opening session to be held Friday night, August 7, in the Olive Street School auditorium. Mayor H. T. Willis of Hyattsville will deliver an address of welcome. Other speakers include John J. Fainter, first president of the county association, and W. R. Beattie, president of the group. The invocation will be delivered by the Rev. Lawton Riley, rector of Pinkney Memorial Episcopal Church.

The annual parade will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday. Contests are scheduled to start immediately following the parade at about 3 p. m. Memorial services for deceased firemen will be held at 7 p. m., and the convention will reconvene for its final session at 8 p. m. A dance will follow in the State armory.

Plans for donkey baseball games between the Mount Rainier Volunteer Fire Department and the Mount Rainier Police Department are nearing completion. The contest will be staged on the Mount Rainier High School diamond, at 8 p. m. Thursday, August 6.

Chief Eugene B. Plumer of the Police Department will pitch for his team, with former Chief George Buckholtz catching. It is expected that Capt. Bernard Beall, of the Fire Department, will pitch for his team. His battery mate has not yet been selected. Proceeds will go to the Fire Department.

The annual carnival sponsored by the St. James Catholic Church at Mount Rainier will open on Monday, August 3, and continue until Saturday, it has been announced. Plans are being made under direction of the Rev. R. Cotter Fitzgerald and William K. Wersick.

Assisting on the committee are F. Larkin, W. D. Lanham, Phil Vanneman, Francis Bailey, sr., F. Ryan, Peter J. Hagan, William H. Robicheau, T. Morhiser, Bernard Gerhardt and E. Wallach.

The event will be held on the church property at Thirty seventh street and Rhode Island avenue and will include many games of skill as well as amusements for children. Proceeds will go to the church building fund.

The choir of St. James' Catholic Church, Mount Rainier, will hold a card party in the church auditorium, Thirty seventh street and Rhode Island avenue at 8:30 tomorrow, for the benefit of the organ fund. Many attractive prizes will be offered.

Russell Road Construction Resumes Today

Project in Alexandria Is Halted for Sewer Installation.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Street construction work on Russell road, between Mount Vernon avenue and Glebe road, will be resumed by the contractors today, according to City Engineer H. G. McCartney. The work was halted due to the installation of a storm water sewer in that area. Contractors for the street work are McGuire & Rolfe.

A 14-foot culvert also is being built for the city by the Northern Virginia Construction Co. at the Linden street crossing over Hooff's Run. Similar culverts are to be constructed to connect up dead-end streets across the run.

The work of extending Cliff street street, between Seventh street and the old tracks of the electric railway, is nearing completion. The extension of Clifford avenue, from the Washington & Old Dominion Railway tracks to Mount Vernon avenue, a distance of approximately 500 feet, is under way.

The Alexandria Chapter of DeMolay is planning a conference and rally November 5 and 6 in the George Washington Masonic Memorial Temple, with members of DeMolay chapters from Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, North Carolina and the District of Columbia as guests. The program will include, in addition to the business sessions, a dance, luncheons and sight-seeing trips.

Invitations will be extended to President Roosevelt, Col. Louis A. Watres, grand master of the DeMolays, and Secretary of War Dern, who also is a DeMolay.

Martin E. Greene, business manager of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, reports a considerable increase in business in the last few months. The coming to Alexandria of new residents, it was stated, has been a great help in almost every line of activity.

Greene said he had an interview with the manager of a new industry, who declared his business during May and June totaled $160,000. The plant has been in operation only about three months.

A great demand for the booklet on historic Alexandria, issued recently by the Chamber of Commerce, is reported, its distribution having reached all parts of the country, with the result that the tourist trade in Alexandria has shown a decided increase.

The barnyard golf tournament will be held by the Alexandria Playgrounds Association July 28 on the Oronoco street playground. Contestants 12 years of age and under will pitch horseshoes at 30 feet, while those from 13 to 18 years will pitch at 40 feet. Mrs. Virginia Ryder, director of playground activities, assisted by Allen Brown, will have charge of the scoring.

Playgrounds represented will be Washington, Lee, George Mason, Potomac View and Oronoco.

Arlington Area Gets Six More State Troopers

Force Now Is Increased to Ten; Nine Are Free for Highway Duty.

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Six additional State police have been assigned to this area of northern Virginia under command of Sergt. E. J. McDermott, who is stationed at Alexandria. The men are from the group of 52 new officers who were recently sworn in.

By the additional officers the personnel of State police in this area, comprising Arlington and Fairfax counties and the City of Alexandria, is increased to ten men.

All are free for highway duty, since Officer A. J. Lucas has been assigned full time to the duty of issuing driving permits.

On Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m., Lucas will be at the Arlington County Courthouse. On Wednesdays, at the same hours, he will be at the City Hall at Alexandria, and on Fridays, during the same hours, at the Fairfax Courthouse.

Under the new orders for patrol duty, Officer R. H. Lester is assigned to Fairfax County, Officer C. B. Pressley to Arlington County and Officer E. C. Trice to Alexandria City.

In an effort to speed appointment of Arlington County's first fire chief and the distribution of the $9,600 fund allocated to county fire departments in this year's budget, representatives of the departments are planning to confer with County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan this week.

The $9,600 fund was included in this year's budget for distribution among the eight companies after an effort had been made to have the county board provide sufficient funds for a full-paid county fire department. Thus far no distribution of the funds have been made.

Montgomery County to Select Directors of Soil Conservation

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
9213 Clark Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Directors and community committeemen who will administer the soil conservation program in Montgomery County will be selected at a series of meetings in various sections of the county this week.

O. W. Anderson, county farm agent, has called a meeting for each district in the county for which one director and two committeemen will be chosen. All farmers who have signed work sheets in accordance with the Federal soil conservation regulations will be entitled to vote for the administrators in their district.

Meetings will be held at Poolesville High School tonight, tomorrow night at Barnesville Community Hall, Wednesday at the Darnestown school, Thursday in the farm bureau offices in the Rockville courthouse for Rockville and Gaithersburg districts, Friday at the Clarksburg school, and Monday, August 3, at the Colesville school for Colesville and Wheaton districts. All meetings are at 8 p. m.

Steps to secure removal of the trolley tracks of the abandoned Kensington trolley line within the town limits of Kensington will be discussed at a meeting of the mayor and town council tonight in the Kensington armory.

Mayor Edward R. Saunders has announced that a strong effort will be made to have the owner of the line, R. H. Phillips, voluntarily remove the tracks and also rolling stock that is now standing idle. If this fails legal steps may be taken.

The line has not been used since the abandonment of the Capital Transit Co. trolley line on Connecticut avenue rendered the Kensington line virtually useless by stopping service to Chevy Chase Lake where the local line served as a feeder. However, the tracks still are standing and Phillips has secured an injunction restraining the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission from extending Beach drive over the tracks in Rock Creek Park.

Tonight's meeting also will receive a report from Councilman Raymond Burgdorf on plans for constructing curbs and gutters that have been requested by two local property owners. Abutting property owners are assessed for two-thirds of the cost.

Mayor Saunders also is inviting the county board of education to send a representative to the meeting to explain what progress is being made toward construction of the new junior high school in Kensington, for which a bond issue of $160,000 has been authorized by the State Legislature. An attempt also will be made to have the State roads commission evpedite the elimination of the local grade crossing, Saunders announced.

Five special taxing areas in the western suburban district of the county are carrying a $20,000 road improvement program. The work is being carried on in the towns of Somerset and Friendship Heights and in sections 2, 3 and 4 of Chevy Chase.

Contract for the work in Somerset was let recently by the town council and work will start in the near future. Approximately $6,000 will be spent on resurfacing Dorset avenue from Wisconsin avenue to the entrance to Kenwood, and repairing other streets in the town.

In Friendship Heights work will consist mainly of repairing damage done to the town streets by the severe cold last winter. The same situation exists in sections 2 and 5, Chevy Chase, and the cost in each locality is relatively small.

In section 4 construction of more than 5,000 feet of sidewalks on both sides of Meadow lane from Leland street to Valley place is nearing completion. The work is financed by an $8,500 bond issue authorized by town taxpayers several months ago.

Approximately $5,000 is to be spent to repave and place top dressing on streets in section 3.

St. Martin's Parochial School in Gaithersburg will be the scene of a joint lawn fete of St. Martin's Church and St. Rose's Church, Cloppers, tomorrow, Wednesday nad Thursday.

A public hearing will be held in the Silver Spring County Building on August 10 at 7 p. m. on the petition of Matthew Trimble for a rezoning of the Darby farm on Georgia avenue north of Wheaton from residetnial "A" to commercial "D."

The rezoning is sought by Mr. Trimble to permit location of a summer theater on the tract, which will be operated by Stephen E Cochran, of the National Theater in Washington. Cochran plans to open the theater next summer if the rezoning is approved, Trimble said.

Naugle Family to Hold Its Reunion Wednesday

Somerset, Pa., July 26.—The thirteenth annual reunion of the Naugle family will be held at St. Thomas Grove, near St. Thomas' Lutheran Church, in Paint township. The principal speaker will be the Rev. Russell T. Shilling, pastor of the Davidsville Lutheran Church. Oscar Naugle, Ann Arbor, Mich., also will speak.

The annual election of officers will take place in the afternoon. Present officers are H. D. Naugle, president; Albert Naugle, vice president; S. P. Naugle, secretary; J. Ernest Naugle, treasurer, and the Rev. V. D. Naugle, historian.

Retail Unit Meets, Outlines Program

A broad program of co-operative effort was outlined yesterday by members of the American Retail Federation, meeting at the Hamilton Hotel, as they pledged their support of a movement to develop strong retail groups in all States.

The retail men decided that certain problems of mutual interest, especially in legislation and reserach, could best be solved through an alliance of effort. Their program is designed to build distribution into an economic unit capable of benefiting both the trade and the consumer.

Col. Clarence O. Sherrill, president of the federation, explained that the organization proposes to represent all classes and types of retailers in national legislative matters and to serve as a clearing house for research data. The group will also attempt to promote agreements among merchants on uniform store hours.

Rep. Drewry Nominated For Re-election in Va.

Petersburg, Va., July 26 (AP).—The Fourth District Democratic committee has announced that Representative P. H. Drewry has been declared the party nominee for re-election.

The statement, signed by S. B. Barham, jr., chairman of the committee, and Jennie H. Turner, secretary, said no other person had filed notice of candidacy.

On The Air Today

The postman just passed by; dropped off two letters, innocent appearing enough—but which offer, by way of coincidence, an intriguing illustration of the American versus British policy and practice of radio broadcasting.

One is a condensed review of an article appearing in the current Time issue which states that after ten years of experiment with a government-regulated monopoly controlling all radio broadcasting in the British Isles, the British government has granted a ten-year renewal of the Royal Charter of British Broadcasting Corporation, despite complaints of the listening public that programs are dull and monotonous."

The other announces that the radio division of the Republican National Committee has purchased daily 15-minute periods of the National Broadcasting Co., to be turned over, without reservation, to William Hard, widely known political commentator, to use as he sees fit.

Mr. Hard's sponsor, a political party entering a Presidential campaign, announces that "it is hoped that a real contribution to public thought may be given and that the usual one-sided political discussion will be avoided."

The Time article, by contrast, states that Britain's radio monopoly has become "so obnoxious to many of the British Broadcasting Corporation's 3,000 employes" that the government stepped in and recommended that the staff should be free from any control by the corporation over their private lives. This was the outgrowth of the corporation's policy of discharging employes who obtained divorces!

Now there is no direct comparison between Mr. Hard's becoming a commercially sponsored radio artist, and the B. B. C. firing employes as a result of censorship of their personal affairs.

But indirectly the contrary theories and practices of American and British broadcasting become astonishingly clear.

Whatever complaints we may have with our broadcast fare, we can all admit that for variety, novelty and the capacity to entertain, it is beyond any comparison with what we hear by short wave from the other side. By frequently listening to the Deventry short-wave station, we Americans can hear some perfectly delightful program features. But for a steady diet—I shudder.

It is interesting to recall that Pat O'Malley, of Jack Hylton's Revue, said back stage at the Earle a few weeks ago that neither the listener nor the artist was very well pleased with the British type of radio control, but added that the London listener got a little better quality and variety of program than those short-waved from Daventry for foreign consumption. In other words, we do not get a fair sample of British radio broadcasting on this side.

Although B. B. C. carries no commercial programs paid for by an advertiser with something to sell, it may accept "sponsored" programs credited to private companies and has done so on occasions, according to the Time article. A recent example was the Hyde Park Community Sing, a stunt by a newspaper, B. B. C. and the newspaper merely exchanged radio publicity for program expense.

B. B. C. originally was set up by radio manufacturers to provide something for listeners to listen to. It is now a public institution somewhere between a government department and a commercial undertaking, according to Time. But under the ultimate control of the government and operating under a government charter.

In the interests of acoustics, the B. B. C. building, known as Broadcasting House, is said to be "sealed like a tomb and ventilated like a submarine." According to our standards of broadcasting, that language might explain somewhat the dullness of British program features.

Whatever deficiencies you have noted in the American scheme of things, you do get action. Never a dull moment, so to speak. Boake Carter and the Governor of New Jersey (so it appears) will meet in court—and Bill Hard is to have an uncensored daily political quarter hour.

Washingtonians Take to the Open Spaces on a Sunny Sunday

MY BOAT. John Robert McIntyre, 19 - month - old skipper, wants to know what to do next with his new boat. He hates to let it go too far away in the Reflection Pool.

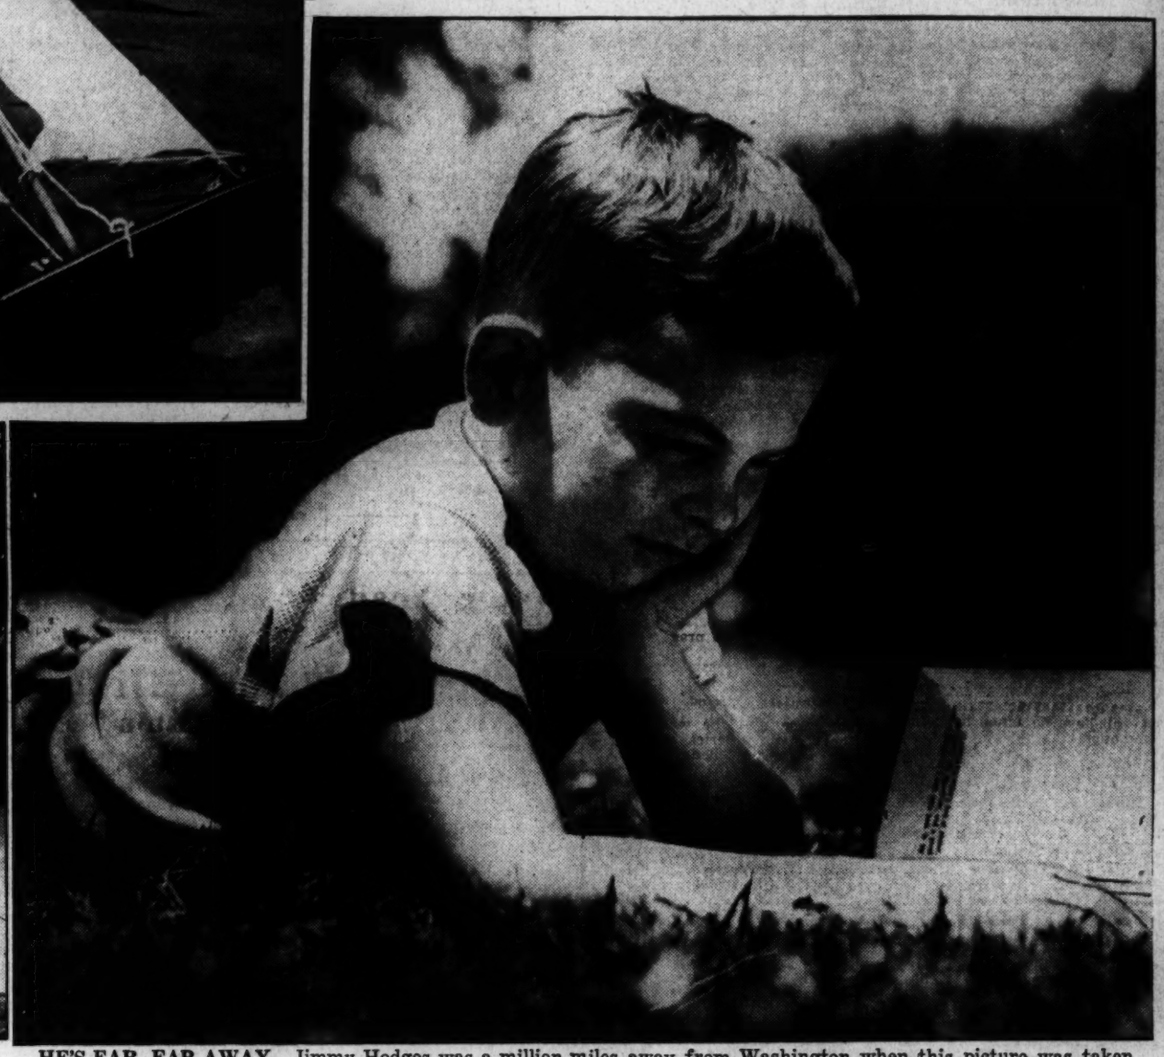
SWING LOW. The girl in shorts coming at you from a swing at Hains Point is Mrs. Millie Mervine. She seems to be getting as much fun out of it as an 8-year-old.

THE WAGES OF FOOD IS DEATH.—These patient gentlemen could think of nothing better to do of a Sunday than tempt the little fish in the Tidal Basin with local worms and other choice morsels.



HE'S FAR, FAR AWAY. Jimmy Hodges was a million miles away from Washington when this picture was taken. He was helping Gulliver beat back an invasion on the island of the tiny Lilliputians. The book is Jonathan Swift's "Gulliver's Travels," long a favorite of young and old.

BOY AND GIRL—EARLY STYLE.—It's either the sun or perhaps the fact that Walter Fugitt, 18 months, and Jane Garner, 19 months, have not had much experience being photographed, for they seem a bit bewildered.

HIGH SPEED THRILLS.—Stanley Sheive tempts fate and skill as he rides an aquaplane off Hains Point. Bob Evans is at the wheel of the motorboat and his companion is Bill Woodridge. Aquaplaning, which often turns into aquaducking, is becoming an increasingly popular sport in the Capital.

BOY AND GIRL—LATER STYLE.—Horseback riding is almost as popular in Potomac Park as in nearby Virginia. Even the intense heat doesn't seem to discourage enthusiasts, perhaps because the horse does most of the work. The two above are Theodore Thalberg and Adlene Posner.

Griffmen Win And Lose in St. Louis

Nats Take First, 9-2, Lose 2d, 9-3, as Newsom Fails.

Unblemished Record in St. Louis Broken in Nightcap.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

St. Louis, Mo., July 26.—The St. Louis Browns and the law of averages caught up with the Nats late this afternoon and the upshot of it all was Washington's first defeat of the season in St. Louis.

Their day's efforts, however, were not a total loss for the Nats. Before suffering the humility of a 9-to-3 beating by the lowly Browns, the Nats made away with the first game of the double-header by the equally impressive score of 9 to 2.

Thus they had beaten the Browns nine straight times in St. Louis this season when they met up with Al Thomas in the second engagement of the day's program. Thomas was unrecognizable as the pitcher who had been discharged by Washington as incompetent early last season.

Thomas Baffles Nats.

He entered the game at the end of the first inning when Russ Van Atta contracted a sore arm, and thereafter the Nats were at his complete mercy. He didn't give Washington a hit until the eighth inning, although Kuhel had singled against Van Atta in the first, and the three runs the Nats eventually did score were as useless as a legal injunction against the drought.

After Joe Cascarella had turned in an impressive pitching performance for the Nats in the opening contest, Buck Newsom contributed an equally unimpressive performance in the finale.

Miss Chance to Climb.

Attempting to work with only two days rest, he lasted only three innings, pitched six hits and four runs at the Browns, and was relieved by Pete Appleton, who yielded up to the Browns their last ten hits and five additional runs.

By their futility against Thomas the Nats muffed an opportunity to climb into the first division and lapsed again into sixth place in the league standings.

For the first two innings, the Browns picked up runs at the rate of one per inning against Newsom, and then made it 4-0 with a pair in the third. Appleton got by the fourth and then pitched a double to West, a single to Bottomley and a triple to Carey that made it 7-0 in the fifth, and Bell's triple boosted it to 8-0 in the sixth.

Millies Breaks Spell.

The figures were 9-0 when the Nats finally crashed through against Thomas in the eighth. The only men who had reached base against him were Kuhel and Chapman, who drew useless walks in the fourth inning. The Nats, in fact, didn't even hit a single ball on the nose against Thomas until two were out in the eighth. Walter Millies finally

Athletes Become Military, Avert Saluting Crisis

By the Associated Press.

Olympic Village, Berlin, July 26. There will be no more "Heil Hitler" or stiff-backed Nazi salutes around the American camp in the Olympic Village—at the express request of the Americans.

On the first day at the camp, the air was filled with both. Every time an athlete looked up, he received the salute and the "Heil."

The embarrassed Americans did not know how to reply, so for the most part they ignored the salutation. That peeved the Germans.

Realizing that a delicate situation was fast developing, American officials went into a huddle today, and came out of it with the request to Germans that they employ a rough imitation of the military salute, instead of the outflung arms. They agreed.

Now, both sides are saluting until their arms and wrists ache, but the international incident has been happily averted.

Bolton's Finger Feared to Be Broken

X-Rays to Be Taken; Nats to Meet Indians in a Four-Game Series.

By a Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, July 26.—The Nats hopes of a successful tour of the West received a set-back today when Catcher Cliff Bolton suffered a possible broken finger on his throwing hand.

A foul ball that bounced off the bat of Sammy West who was attempting to duck a pitch in the third inning of the second game today collided with Bolton's finger, dislocating it. Bolton was removed from the game and may submit to an X-ray picture tomorrow unless the injured digit improves.

Walter Millies is the only other catcher carried by the Nats who may recall Bill Starr from Albany.

Victorious in three of four games here, the Nats tonight moved onto Cleveland for a four-game series with the second-place Indians.

Earl Whitehill will go to the mound against the Indians in the series opener tomorrow. The Nats will be seeking to avenge themselves for three straight losses suffered on their last invasion of Cleveland.

Latona Downs Willis in Net Tourney

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cape May, N. J., July 26.—Putting on the pressure in the last two sets, after trailing in the initial three, Tony Latona, District of Columbia netman, romped off with the singles diadem in the sixth annual Cape May County tennis tournament by defeating Ricky Willis, a fellow Washingtonian, 9—7, 3—6, 2—6, 6—2, 6—0.

With the start of the fourth set, Willis seemed on his way to certain victory, his driving line shots upsetting Latona's attack in such fashion that the latter was kept mostly on the defensive. At this point, however, Willis seemed to tighten up and Latona went on to win the set, 6—2. Tony then put on the heat to grab the final set, 6—0.

Willis was not seeded in the singles and his appearance in the final round came as a surprise. He gained the opportunity by defeating Hunter Lott, seeded No. 1, by 8—10, 6—3, 6—4. Latona advanced into the final round by disposing of William T. Tilden 3d, nephew of "Big Bill" Tilden, 6—4, 6—4.

Latona and Willis were unsuccessful, as teammates, in the final round of the doubles play in the morning when they were vanquished 6—1, 6—3, 6—2 by Norman Bramall and H. Hunter Lott, jr., both of Cynwyd. The winners were seeded No. 1 and the Washingtonians rated as second choice.

Heavyweight Title Battle Is Settled

Fight Due to Be Staged About Sept. 30 in the Garden Bowl.

By the United Press.

New York, July 26.—Contracts for a heavyweight title bout between Champion James J. Braddock and Max Schmeling at the Madison Square Garden Bowl on or about September 30 will be signed tomorrow or Tuesday, it was learned tonight.

The Twentieth Century Club and Madison Square Garden have come to a definite agreement for joint promotion of the fight, after more than five weeks of negotiations, bickering, flare-ups, name-callings, declarations of war, etc.

Joint Sponsorship.

Mike Jacobs, Twentieth Century promoter, is slated for a final conference tomorrow with Station Griffis, chairman of the Garden's board of directors, and James Norris, Chicago grain merchant, who is an important member of the Garden's executive committee.

It is possible the contracts will be signed at this conference—or they may decide upon a ceremonial signing for Tuesday. As far as staging the fight is concerned, they came to an agreement in conferences on Friday and Saturday.

The rival boxing corporations will join hands only for this title fight, and there will be no four-year partnership which the Garden demanded, originally and Jacobs has been assured that his ball parks, the Polo Grounds and Yankee Stadium, will receive their cuts off the bout.

Jacobs' three-year contract with the ball parks was one of the stumbling blocks of the previous negotiations. He is under contract to stage three fights each year in one or both of the parks. Thus far he has staged only the Joe Louis-Schmeling bout, and has arranged to put on the Joe Louis-Jack Sharkey fight at the Stadium on August 18. Hence Promoter Jacobs insisted that the ball parks cut in on this fight, or that it be staged at one of them.

But the Garden—which hasn't staged a fight this season at its bowl on Long Island—insisted the Bowl get its rental out of the bout. So the bowl and the parks are provided for in the [illegible] Schmeling — recent conqueror of Louis—also is protected fully.

It was learned tonight that Jacobs and his organization will handle the publicity for the fight—although Jacobs will have no actual hand in the promotion.

The Army Is Lined Up to Swoop Down on That Ball When It Lands

4 U. S. Athletes Cause Worry To Coaches

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Berlin, July 26.—With the celebrated "Jarrett case" fading rapidly into the background—and officials trusting it would stay there—after furnishing one of the biggest collective headaches in American Olympic history—Uncle Sam's athletic forces focussed full attention today upon training and team selection problems.

The Sabbath was anything but a day of rest for the majority of the scattered American teams.

The oarsmen held a double workout at Gruenau in sessions of two hours each. The trackmen, paced by Indiana Don Lash, who was on the track for a practice at 7 a. m., before breakfast, engaged in a brisk workout at the Olympics village.

Wrestlers Selected.

At the same time the wrestling team held another series of tryouts, which resulted definitely in the election of Francis E. Millard, Massachusetts featherweight, and heavyweight Roy Dunn from Oklahoma as favorites to represent the United States in their respective divisions in the Olympic championships.

A warm sun and the best weather since the team's arrival helped the Americans at the village fight off another mild epidemic of head colds and sore throats. According to Head Coach Lawson Robertson, none of the athletes were seriously affected, but several of the mentors manifested concern over the condition of several of their charges.

Pollard, Others Need Work.

The muscle strain suffered by the North Dakota hurdling ace, Fritz Pollard, compelled him to continue only light exercising, while Gene Venzke, Pennsylvania's middle-distance picture runner, remained considerably underweight and looked badly out of condition. Even Glenn Cunningham, the Kansas 1,500-meter star, who has been working hardest of all the runners, caused his coach to worry over the risk that the mile record holder will reach his peak too soon.

Because he was at the top of his shot-putting form two years ago, when he was playing basketball, Big Jack Torrance followed the suggestion that he work out at the nearest available court. The Louisiana giant, now scaling at 305 pounds, also partook of the Finnish baths in the Olympic village, along with Gordon Dunn and Ken Carpenter, of California, and Walter Wood, of New Jersey, others on the weight squad.

Lash to Taper Off.

Bob Smallwood, California quarter-miler, who has been the only hospital patient since the team left New York, looked in excellent condition as he breezed through a half-mile workout in 2 minutes, 13 seconds.

Lash, under the direction of his Indiana University coach, E. C. Hayes, will conclude his schedule of double work-outs tomorrow, and then taper off to save strength for his first test—the 10,000-meter run, which is on the opening track program of the games next Sunday.

Hard Work Scheduled.

"With few exceptions," he said, "the entire track team will settle down then to hard work and rigid routine.

"We've been handicapped by rainy weather as well as the reaction from the long and tedious boat ride so far. But generally speaking, the boys are in fair shape and better spirits.

"However, we've numerous problems to solve if we expect to produce our best performances.

"There is no doubt we'll be up against particularly keen competition all along the line. The Japanese jumpers and vaulters, and their distance ace, Kohei Murakoso, particularly, have impressed us. And no one can overlook the chances of the defending champion, Luigi Beccali, of Italy, in the 1,500 meters. He worked out with Lash this morning for the full running."

Cavalry Four Takes Polo Crown, 12 to 6

Now scheduled to compete in the National Polo Tournament at Cleveland, as result of their triumph, the Third Cavalry Yellows gobbled up the three-goal Fort Hoyle Handicap in the first chukker, to leather their green-shirted opponents, 12-6, in the Southeastern polo finals yesterday at the West Potomac field.

The combined offensive of Capt. Don Galloway and Harry Stadler, piling up nine tallies was by itself enough to defeat the artillerymen, who were able to reach the Cavalry posts only three times.

Two falls by Hoyle riders, neither serious, brought gasps from the spectators. A broken stirrup strap sent Lieut. Bruce Scott tumbling to the ground, to which he was followed a few minutes afterward by Lieut. Col. Swing, whose mount turned a somersault on the rather slippery turf.

The height of the Yellow scoring splurge was reached in the fourth chukker when Capt. Galloway made two rapid fire goals in the first minute of play, to which Capt. Stadler added a tally made from almost midfield, and a penalty conversion. A final goal by Capt. H. W. Johnson brought the total to five.

Following the game, individual silver cups were presented to the winners by Gen. Peyton C. March, retired. Almost 5,000 people saw the game.

English Davis Cuppers Need One Match

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, England, July 26.—Facing almost certain defeat in the the quest of the Davis Cup, Australia rallied its forces today in an effort to prolong the challenge round series with England.

The cup-holding British team needs only to win the doubles when play is resumed tomorrow to retain the trophy for another year following a pair of decisive singles victories yesterday.

Although it is not required that the doubles teams be named until an hour before the match tomorrow, it is expected that gray-haired Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist will continue to make it a two-man battle against the smooth-working English pair of Charles Tuckey and Pat Hughes.

No Signs of Injury.

Quist showed no signs of the ankle injury he suffered a week ago as he gave Fred Perry, England's No. 1 player, a stiff battle before going down 6—1, 4—6, 7—5, 6—2, after Henry W. (Bunny) Austin had opened the series with a 4—6, 6—3, 6—1, 6—1 victory over Crawford.

The weather and the noisy crowd of 16,000 proved an annoyance to all hands, however. Quist put part of the blame for his "crackup" after he led 5—1 in the third set, to Perry's frequent appeals to the crowd for silence.

Crawford, after ripping off the first set on a powerful service, appeared to lose his fire and couldn't match Austin's accurate driving and volleying. Gusty winds hampered them both and rain stopped play several times.

The final singles matches are scheduled for Tuesday with Austin facing Quist and Perry playing Crawford.

Red Sox Sweep Tiger Series By 10 to 3

Foxx Hits 28th and 29th Homers to Lead Sox's Bombardment.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 26.—The Boston Red Sox made a clean sweep of their three-game series with Detroit by humbling the Tigers, 10 to 3, today, with the aid of Jimmy Foxx's twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth home runs of the season.

Foxx's first homer came during a five-run attack in the eighth inning, with one on. His second circuit blow opened the ninth inning. Almada also hit for four bases in the third inning to give the Red Sox their first run.

Mrs. Jarrett to Cover Olympics

By the United Press.

Berlin, July 26.—Eleanor Holm Jarett, 1932 Olympic backstrike champion, who was dismissed from the American team for attending too many cocktail parties, today announced she will "cover" the Olympics for an American news agency.

Flooded with motion picture and vaudeville offers, the statuesque brunette who represented Uncle Sam in the 1928 and 1932 games decided to accept the journalistic post because she wants to see the Olympics.

"I've always had a yen to be a reporter," she said in her room at the Hotel Esplanade, "and now I'm going to be one."

By the Associated Press.

Smilingly, Mrs. Jarrett disclosed her former teammates among the American women swimmers had sent her a box of handkerchiefs, with the note, "Keep your chin up."

She also received a cablegram from Samuel Maccabee, chairman of the "Move the Olympics" committee in New York, saying, "America's self-respect demands the athletes' return home to participate in the labor games in August."

Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic committee, revisited the Olympic village and received numerous assurances the American committee's stand in holding fast to Mrs. Jarrett's disbarment had a strong majority backing.

He declined, however, to comment for publication.

Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft, vice president of the committee, was delegated to tell Mrs. Jarrett that official responsibility for her maintenance ended at noon today.

He assured her also that her passage to the United States would be provided by the committee at any time she chooses to go home, before, during or after the games. She cannot, however, return with the main body of athletes which is scheduled to embark August 19, on the President Roosevelt.

Brundage, it was disclosed, also received a number of cablegrams which approved the committee's action.

One of these, from Gregory Vigeant, jr., of Kansas City, said Mrs. Jarrett's "example to young Americans is deeply deplorable."

Missiles Rain As White Sox Lose Two

Summers Target of Fans' Rage for Changing Close Decision.

Yanks Overpower Sox, 12-3, 11-8 in Riotous Doubleheader.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 26.—In a riotous double-header that saw Umpire Bill Summers felled and injured by one of more than a hundred missiles hurled upon the field by enraged fans, the New York Yankees overpowered the Chicago White Sox twice today, 12 to 3 and 11 to 8, to increase their league lead to 9½ games over the Cleveland Indians.

The Yankees won the second game by scoring three runs in the eleventh on an error by Second Baseman Jack Hayes and hits by George Selkirk and Roy Johnson off Relief Pitcher Red Evans, after Zeke Bonura's home run had tied the score at 8-all for the Sox in the ninth.

Four Homers Help.

Lou Gehrig's twenty-ninth and thirtieth home runs and circuit blows by Joe DiMaggio and Tony Lazzeri also featured the baseball end of the proceedings, which were witnessed by a sell-out crowd of 50,000.

Summers was injured just as Bonura was rounding second base with his score-tying homer in the second-game ninth. A pop bottle hurled by an unidentified fan in the upper grandstand back of third base, where Summers was stationed, hit him in the groin and he collapsed. After receiving first aid on the field, he was able to walk to the clubhouse, but did not return to the diamond.

Landis Offers $5,000 Reward.

Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, who was in a rail-side box, authorized an announcement over the public address system an inning later that his office was offering $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the assailant.

A decision by Summers in the eighth led to the bombardment, which continued intermittently through a full inning and consisted

Nate Ritzenberg Acquires Public Parks Net Championship

Deck Beaten For Public Crown

Sara Moore Retains Her Women's Singles Title in Parks Tourney.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Wearing a woolen sweater and heavy full-length sweat pants while sweltering spectators looked on in perplexity, Nathan R. Ritzenberg yesterday became Washington's Public Parks tennis champion by trouncing the veteran Pat Deck in straight sets, 8—6, 6—3, 6—3 on the Rock Creek courts.

Two other championships were decided besides that won by the temperamental 19-year-old schoolboy. Sun-tanned Sara Moore retained her women's singles championship with a 6—1, 6—1 victory over Mrs. Dorette Miller and then Mrs. Miller and Miss Moore paired in the doubles final to retain their title in that event with a 6—3, 9—7 conquest of pretty Peggy Keyser Smith and Frances Walker Bassett.

Serious faced, but enjoying himself immensely, young Ritzenberg proceeded to win a smashing triumph in every sense of the word. The sharp-featured school boy was hitting his overhead with power and accuracy and it was his constant stream of smashes which spelled Deck's defeat.

Holds Four Crowns.

In adding to his collection the Parks title, won by Barney Welsh for the past three years, Nate now holds four championships. He qualified for the National Interscholastic recently by winning both the singles and doubles and also the prep school championship of the area.

Deck got off to a 3—1 lead in the first set, breaking Nate's service twice. Nate, however, drew up to 5—5 but never was ahead until he took a 7—6 lead. At 5—4, Deck leading, Nate served a love game, Pat did likewise and then Nate served another love game. Ritzenberg finally broke Pat's service to lead 7—6 on three beautiful smashes.

Deuced Four Times.

The next game went to deuce four times and Nate had set point four times, once at 40—30 and three times on advantage point. On the fourth set point, however, Nate again unleashed an untouchable smash to win the set.

Ritzenberg was an odd sight in his sweater, close-fitting pants and handkerchief on his head while Deck's shirt was wringing wet. It was noticeable that Nate had Deck consistently on the defense and it was only a case of getting the service break in the next set. Deck's service, never very strong, finally broke in the seventh game for 4—3, Ritzenberg leading. Nate, taking the net behind his powerful delivery held his own and broke Pat again in the ninth game for the set.

Makes Last Stand.

Nate's passing shots had Deck on the run in the second set, but Pat, a last stand in the final chapter, breaking Nate's service twice to come up to 4—3 after Nate had taken a 3—1 lead. Ritzenberg broke Pat to lead 5—3 as Deck lobbed out several times trying to keep his hard-hitting adversary away from the net.

Nate had one match point at 40—15, but smashed out only to outfox his opponent on the next point after a long rally which ended with the champion shooting over a low cross-court forehand shot which the No. 1 seeded player was unable to touch.

Mrs. Miller fought Miss Moore morg stubbornly than the score indicates. Six of the 14 games went to deuce. Mrs. Miller scored 40 points to 65 for the champion.

The smooth-stroking Smith-Bassett combination came close to sending the doubles final into extra sets. They took a 5—3 lead and had set point only to lose it on a net-cord shot. The champions finally broke Mrs. Smith's delivery for 8—7 and then Miss Moore won her service after the challengers had come from 225-cubic inch hydroplane hull.

Browns Capture 2d To Split With Nats

broke the Thomas spell by beating out a bunt in the eighth and, with two out, Lewis made the second hit against—another bunt to Clift. Kuhel authored the first real hit, a double to right that scored Millies and Stone then walloped a long triple to right that drove home two more runs, but with the Browns boasting a six-run margin the Nats were only wasting their efforts.

That first game was a romp for the Nats. Deep in their futility, the Browns were trailing, 8-0, before they pushed one of their two runs across the plate in the fifth inning. Coasting along in the comforts of his huge lead, Cascarella simply beat the Browns in stride. Bucky Harris' shuffled line-up, arranged to deal with the left-handed pitching of Hogsett, saw seven right-handed hitters facing Hogsett in succession.

The Nats didn't tarry with Hogsett. Lewis launched the game with a single to center, advanced to third on Kuhel's single and scored when Hill hit into a double play. Red Kress' line drive homer into the leftfield seats made it 2-0 in the second and its was 4-0 at the end of the fourth which saw Chapman double to right and Reynolds and Bluege follow with singles.

They really blew the lid off the ball game in the fifth with Ossie Bluege providing the dynamite. Kuhel singled to right, Hill walked and Ben Chapman's wind-blown double scored Kuhel. The bases were filled when Reynolds was purposely passed and then Bluege deposited a long triple to right center that sent three more runs clattering across the plate and boost the score to 8-0.

After that the boys were only meeting the league requirements when they played the game to the finish.

Front Royal Stars Beat Kendrick A.C.

Score Is 2 to 1; All Runs Shoved Across in 3d.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., July 26.—Kendrick A. C., of Alexandria, a combination of former Eagles and St. Mary's Celtics, lost a game to the All-Stars here today, 2 to 1. All runs were scored in the third inning.

Orlando, Alexandria pitcher, got a double and was scored by Zimmerman's single. After Orlando hit Casorotti cold with a pitched ball, Hines, running for Casorotti, scored on a double by Davis, pitching for the All-Stars, singles by Nesbitt and Downing scored Davis.

Orlando struck out four batters and gave four walks. Davis struck out three and walked two.

Indianhead Wins.

6 Cub Homers Win 2d, 18-5; Drop 1st

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 26.—The Chicago Cubs, blanked in the opener, 4 to 0, got their revenge on the Phillies today in the second game of a double-header by blasting out six home runs and an 18-to-5 victory before 20,000 fans.

Bucky Walter, Phillies' twirler in the first game, was largely responsible for holding the league leaders to an even break. He allowed Chicago only two hits, one of which was a scratch infield single by Demaree in the fourth. Timely hitting by the Phils accounted for the tallies in the face of commendable pitching by French for the Cubs.

Rippy Starts Home After Tourney

District Golfer Lost Ten Pounds During 6-Day Public Links Play.

By Dave Herman,
A Staff Correspondent.

Farmingdale, Long Island, July 26.—Having accepted his defeat philosophically, admitting that his own errors and not any sensational shooting by his conquerer, Pat Abbott, of Altadena, Calif., beat him, dapper Claude Rippy left for his home in Washington today after six days of gruelling warfare in the National Public Links Championship over the million-dollar Bethpage State Park Course.

The District Ripper, who ripped par to shreds in the qualifying round with a word record score of 30, bowed to the cool-headed Pacific Coast actor, by 4 and 3, in Saturday's finals.

Until Rippy met the 24-year-old Californian, he was only 11 over par for 130 holes or 7 rounds of golf—or less than two strokes over par for each round. But Saturday he lost that magic touch. When Abbot had him four down and nine to go Rippy's face was lined with worry for the first time during the week. Yet despite this handicap at such an important stage of the match, Rippy held on gallantly, holding Abbott even for the remaining six holes, staving off what might have been a complete rout.

Rippy today said he lost close to ten pounds during the week.

In retrospect, Rippy played the kind of golf that should have won any championship. That, after tieing Jim Molinari, the San Francisco radio cop, for the medal with 146, he should go on to the finals, is a tribute to the 23-year-old clerk's golfing prowess.

Few golf stars win medals and then the championship. Bobby Jones had a time doing it, great golfer that he was.

The hole that seemed to take the starch out of the Ripper was the seventh, a 185-yarder. Each time Rippy played the hole, he was trapped from the tee. Each time he lost with a four to a three.

Umpire Is Injured As Yanks Take 2

that Malone had held the ball long enough to make the putout.

The barrage from the stands began. Time was called as Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Sox appealed to the fans to desist. Play was resumed, but intermittent throwing of missiles continued until the pop bottle struck Summers.

The Yanks pounded Sugar Cain and Italo Chelini for 13 hits, including homers by Gehrig, Lazzeri and DiMaggio, which accounted for seven runs in taking the first game. Johnny Broaca held the Sox to eight hits. It was the first series Chicago had lost this month.

Barbara Cook Wins National Junior Dive Crown in Meet Here

Baltimoreans Beat District All-Stars

Little Barbara Cook, slender 15-year-old schoolgirl from Jeffersonville, Ind., won the women's National Junior highboard diving championship yesterday at the Maryland Club Gardens pool in the fetaure event of a meet in which an All-Star team of Washington men and women swimmers lost to an All-Star Baltimore team, 46 to 45.

Washington lost its chance to gain permanent possession of the Mayor Howard Jackson Trophy in the last event of the day, the women's 100-yard free style race, when little Ann Bono, sprint queen of the District, became tangled in the ropes 10 yards from the finish and lost to pretty Helen Alain, of Baltimore, by a hand.

Ann Aronson, of the Ambassador, gave Washington a third place, but Miss Alain's victory was enough to give Baltimore its 1-point margin. Washington had two legs on the trophy and needed but one more to win it. It was the fourth successive year that the intercity meet has been held for the trophy. Each city now has two legs on it.

Kinsella Falls to Show.

The Washington defeat, local officials felt, should be charged to Kenneth Kinsella, Washington Y. M. C. A. middle distance ace. The youngster failed to show up for the meet and the local team had to be content with second place in the 220-yard freestyle, Kinsella's specialty.

No less than seven District records for a 20-yard pool were set during the day as the swimmers turned in their supreme efforts to win for their home towns.

Miss Cook's victory was as spectacular as Baltimore's team triumph. The lead had see-sawed between the Indiana girl and pretty Constance Renninger, of the Penn A. C., Philadelphia, until the final dive. With one more dive to go, Miss Renninger had a lead of 97.57 points to 97.19.

Miss Renninger Nosed Out.

Betty Rhoads, of the Newark A. C., and champion of New Jersey, was third with 101.57 points. Miss Renninger is Middle Atlantic champion. Miss Cook placed third in the championships held last year at Glen Echo, when Marian Mansfield, of Chicago, won.

The exceptional times turned in by the men were made by Frank Cummings, of Baltimore, in the 220-yard freestyle, who flashed the distance in 2:25; Hucht, of Baltimore, who swam the 100-yard breaststroke in 1:10 4-5; Dan Wiener, of the Baltimore "Y," who swam the 100-yard backstroke in 1:08, and Cummings in the 100-yard freestyle, which he swam in 55 4-5 seconds, to beat Bob Jordan, District champion.

Women's National Junior A. A. U. Highboard Diving Championships.

Won by Barbara Cook (Colonial Club, Jeffersonville, Ind.); 111.12 points; second, Constance Renninger (Penn A. C., Philadelphia); third, Betty Rhoads (Newark A. C., Newark, N. J.), 101.77 points.

Costello Beats Nash Post, Ties For Lead

With two runs in the seventh, the Costello Post downed the previously undefeated Nash Post, 2-0, on the East Ellipse diamond yesterday. Eddie Samperton, Costello pitcher, scored his seventeenth victory, allowing the losers only five hits.

The winning runs came when First Baseman Oram banged out a single to short. He stole second, went to third as Burke sacrificed, and scored when Connolly, of Nash Post, made a wild throw after retrieving Samperton's infield hit. Samperton moved to second and went home when Jake Mostow beat out a single to rightfield.

With two wins and one loss apiece the two teams are tied for first place in the Legion League. The winner of the league trophy will represent the legion in the Eastern Legion championships at Wilmington, Del.

The Nationwide Grocers and Takoma Boys Club went into a tie for first place in the second half drive of the National City Midget League yesterday. The Nationwiders turned back the strong Versis Products nine, 6 to 2, and Takoma stopped the Wizard Locksmiths, 14 to 2. Regent Pastry and Tru-Blue Beer played ten innings to a 4-4 tie.

O'Brien, of Versis, hooked up in a mound duel with B. Lewis, of Nationwide, each allowing six hits, but Lewis fanned ten men to keep the Versis team throttled. Four runs in the second inning were enough of a lead for Lewis to work on.

Webb, pitching for Takoma Boys Club, allowed the Wizards six hits while his team was getting 15 hits, including a homer by Donelly and four by Cruitt in four times at bat. Webb fanned nine men.

Regent Pastry tied Tru-Blue in the ninth inning when Billy Crocker singled with a man on third. Crocker saved the game for Pastry in the tenth by making a diving stop of a line drive by Keiser. McKenna pitched for Tru-Blue, while Regent used three pitchers, Crocker, Carpenter and Alexander, the latter holding Tru-Blue scoreless in the ninth and tenth.

One More Week - - -

By Ben Dulaney.

Once upon a long time ago, when baseball was the major collegiate sport and not the combination of ping pong and substitute for compulsory gym work that it is today, there was registered in a large university whose diamond teams beat the New York Yankees every spring a most phenomenal hurler of horsehide.

There was only one trouble about this fellow: He wouldn't play on the team.

"Why should I go out there and sign the training pledge and be a slave for three months when I can beat any team in the State with a suit of armor on and a catcher's mitt on both hands?" asked this pitching fellow, and kept on guzzling his daily gallon of suds. For that was the era when a dollar bought a barrel.

But this college had a wise coach. He waded through empty bottles to the room of the reluctant one and spoke thusly: "Listen, Jim," said he, "you come out and pitch the rest of the season and you won't be bound by any rules at all. I'm just going to put you under solemn oath to keep strict training in public. The other boys will get sore if they see you whooping it up."

So Jim kept his word and his boys not only won the conference championship but whipped the Yanks, 9 to 1. Nobody but the coach knew that Jim was wandering covertly among the primroses. In truth, Jim really went to bed every night at 9 and bit the end off not a single black segar. Sin wasn't much fun in private.

Which allegory leads us to the case of the United States Olympic Committee vs. Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett and Champagne. The reason, of course, that the great swimmer was tossed off the squad in disgrace was not because she broke training rules but because all the other athletes knew she did. In other words, Mrs. Jarrett trod with a great impunity upon the pedal extremeties of the dignitaries who had evolved said rules.

One could scarcely expect much tact from an organization which has done practically everything wrong for a whole year. But had a gentleman with a nice smile and an ingratiating voice approached Eleanor with approximately the same proposition as that handed Jim the Speedball Imbiber, the whole nasty business would doubtless have been averted and Berlin spectators could have seen in the flesh the person whose picture has appeared more times in American sports pages than any other—including Joe Louis and Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain (Camera Shy) Landis.

Out in Illinois some people are trying to abolish the daily double. They aren't church workers nor out-of-work prohibitionists nor politicians looking for an issue. No, they're the owners of Illinois race tracks—which is sort of peculiar as it was the parimutuel moguls who started the double business in the first place.

Thought they in the beginning: "The standers-in-liners like the idea of winning a lot of money for a little money. Favorites win most of the time so we'll give 'em this new plaything that offers a fat payoff on a combination of two horses even if all the odds-on choices win. It'll stimulate attendance and betting." So the daily double spread to every track in the country and brought more and more customers to the grand stand. You can't play a double with a bookmaker.

"The double isn't really sport," exclaims one track magnate, holding his hands up before him like a girl trying to catch a baseball. "It's merely chance, a sort of lottery which should be banned from reputable places like horse parks."

Yes, indeedy, it should be banned because small fry plunk two dollars on a combination and then neglect to bet on the first, second and third races. The promoters have a wee Frankenstein nipping at their pocketbooks and they're getting religion.

Refreshing as the boss' smile are the remarks of the eminent historian and dramatic critic who last week assumed the sports editorship of a great newspaper. He claims the reporting of sports is the highest type of newspaper writing—and gives some good reasons.

Recorders of politics, economics, drama and literature too often look down long noses at mere athletic scribblers. Neither they nor the average sports scribe realize that the latter has the largest, most variegated and discriminating of publics. He must write down to his readers and write up to them in the same story. He must make his copy clear, concise, entertaining and dramatic to a degree. He must write for experts and neophytes, morons and Ph. D's, all equally interested in the spetcacle.

Greenbelt Beats Eastport, 10 to 5

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., July 26.—The Greenbelt nine, of Washington, leaders of the Federal "A" League, took a fall from Eastport on the local grounds today, 10 to 5.

With Eastport having scored the only run in the first four innings, Greenbelt scored 6 in their half of the fifth on Watt's double, triples by Myers, Smith and Bradley, Hicks' double and Andrew's error, sending Catlin to the bench.

Lexington Four Beats Virginia Team, 13-1

By the Associated Press.

Upperville, Va., July 26.—Mounted on one of the best strings of ponies ever seen on Phipp's Field, a hard-riding foursome representing the Iriquois Polo Club, of Lexington, Ky., handed a listless Fauquier-Loudoun team a 13-1 defeat this afternoon after suffering a 7-5 setback at the hands of the local team yesterday.

Led by J. King, the visitors showed a complete reversal of form to score in every chukker but the fifth, in which the host club counted its lone tally. King was high man with five scores, followed by J. Claiborne with four.

Rajahs Win, 10 to 7; PullCondors Down

With a 10-7 victory, the second-place Rajahs knocked the Condors out of undisputed possession of first place in the Atlantic and Pacific Leage yesterday at the Ellipse diamond. At the same time the Iona nine tightened its grip on third place by downing the Encores, 4-1, on West Potomac.

Hunt, of the Condors, wasted a perfect day on a lost cause, getting three out of three, but only scoring on one. Fillans and Howell starred for the winners, scoring two runs apiece. Howell smacked a triple in the fourth to climax the Rajah scoring flurry.

Fred Jacoby Noses Out Scull for Top Honors In Herald Harbor Outboard Motor Regatta

By the Associated Press.

Herald Harbor, Md., July 26.—Fred Jacoby, jr., of North Bergen, N. J., national professional outboard champion, fought off a challenge from C. Mulford Scull, Ventnor, N. J., today to win top honors in the closing events of the two-day race card of the Trit-City-Regatta.

Jacoby, who recently returned from France, where he won second honors in an international race, scored a total of 2,825 points in the four classes for professional outboards. Scull was second with 2,100 points. Other finals point winners were Bill Quicksill, Pottstown, Pa.; B. G. Shannon, jr., Audubon, N. Y.; Samuel Crooks, Rumson, N. J.; Fred G. Chase, Northampton, Mass., and James Mullen, Richmond, Va.

The North Bergen scene painter displayed his class before occupants of 114 craft anchored in the Severn River about the 5-mile course, and hundreds of spectators grouped ashore. He took first place in the C2, B2 and F-open outboard classes, and finished second in the A3 class. Scull took the A2 class was second in the C2 class and tied points with Jacoby in the F class. Jacoby getting first on best time for two beats. Scull made the fastest time of the regatta, 43.883 miles per hour in winning the final heat of the F open class.

The duel between Jacoby and Scull developed in the first heat of A2 class, won by Scull, with Chase second and Jacoby third. Scull took the final heat, covering the 5-mile course in 7 minutes 33 3-5 seconds, with Jacoby second. Chase who was running in third place in the second heat was swamped midway of the fourth lap. He and his boat were picked up by a boat from the Coast Guard cutter Apache.

Jacoby came back to win both heats and the class in the C2 race, with Scull finishing in second place in the heats and the class. At this stage Scull was leading Jacoby in the total point score, 1,400 to 1,325.

The break came in the first heat of the B2 class, when Scull's Mickey Mouse, broke down at the starting gun. He floated on the course as Jacoby took the heat and then won the finals.

Dr. Cecil H. Bagley, of Baltimore, Md., in the Wilmer III, defending champion, dropped out of the 5-mile 225-cubic inch hydroplane race for the central Atlantic State regional championship, after leading for three laps. His boat sprung a board in the bottom. Dixon Gibbs, of Baltimore, in the Queen Anne, dropped out after the first lap, leaving the race to Robert N. Stevens, of Baltimore, in the Nelson, a runabout. He covered the course in 7 minutes, 53 seconds, at the rate of 38.247 miles per hour.

John A. Remon, referee, ruled that because of the one finisher, the race was ruled "no contest" in so far as the regional championship was concerned. He awarded the trophy for the race to Stevens. The decision is subject to ruling by the national racing committee of the American Power Boat Association.

George B. Ward, jr., of Wilmington, Del., piloting the Hi-Ho 2, won the class 3 inboard, and the class H, runabout races. His best time was in the class E race when he covered the 5-mile course at the rate of 41.021 miles per hour. His boat carried a class E engine in a 225 cubic inch hydroplane hull

J. A. Hollinger, Federal Agent, Dies on Cutter

Secret Service Man Was on Ship Following President's Yacht.

James A. Hollinger, 50, veteran Secret Service man attached to the White House, died of heart disease yesterday aboard the Coast Guard cutter Ponchartrain in Maine waters, it was learned here last night.

He was aboard the ship with other Secret Service men traveling half a day ahead of the President.

Hollinger was born in Carlisle, Pa., and came to Washington about 30 years ago. At one time he was a foreman at the Navy Yard here.

The body was carried yesterday to Eastport, Me., and will be shipped to Washington. Mrs. Robert Gorman, his daughter, said last night she did not know when it would arrive here and that funeral arrangements could not be made until she received definite word.

Hollinger lived at 76 I street northwest. In addition to Mrs. Gorman he is survived by another daughter, Helen Virginia Hollinger.

The President wired the following message to Mr. Hollinger's family:

Actor Is Jailed In Tent Slaying

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., July 26.—Paul player with a tent show at Callao, Replogle, 40, formerly of Indiana, Northumberland County, was lodged in the Northumberland County Jail at Heathsville Saturday night by Sheriff J. E. Anderson, charged with the murder of James Adams, 20, colored, of Heathsville.

Replogle was completing his act in the main show when screams came from one of the sleeping tents. He rushed to the tent and is alleged to have found Adams annoying his wife. The colored man is said to have fled when he appeared, but was followed by Replogle, who fired three bullets into his body. Replogle surrendered to the Northumberland County sheriff and led him to the spot where Adams was lying dead on the side of the highway several feet from the tent. Judge E. Hugh Smith intimated he would call a special session of the Northumberland grand jury for Monday to investigate the matter. Replogle is said to have confessed to the killing.

Although held principally for nurses and midwives, the institute has extended a general invitation to all persons interested in domestic health.

Service Stations Ask Conference on Prices

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., July 26.—At a meting held here on Thursday night by the newly organized service station operators, who have protested the difference in price between Maryland and District of Columbia charges for their product by seven major gasoline companies, it was decided to ask that a representative of each of these companies be sent here on July 27 to discuss the matter with the organized dealers.

In event this request is ignored, all of the 300 station operators, affecting a large part of southern Maryland have agreed to close their stations on August 3.

It has been claimed that a difference of 4 to 5 cents per gallon more is charged to southern Maryland dealers than is charged to stations in the District of Columbia.

Art Classes Will Open At Community Center

Under the sponsorship of the Community Center Department, a new series of art classes, both for children and adults, will open at 7 p. m. tomorrow at McKinley-Langley Community Center, First and T streets northeast. The classes will be taught by Arthur Lembke and will continue through August.

At the same center, a midsummer dance and drama program will be presented at 8:15 Thursday night. The Eckington Community Players, supported by the Southeast Community Players, will give a Spanish play, "The Women Have Their Way," and the children's summer dance group will put on two dances.

Jordan Retained In Carroll Case

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Va., July 26.—Louis F. Jordan, Waynesboro attorney, has been engaged to assist Commonwealth's Attorney John D. White in prosecution of Raymond Carroll, charged by his brother with the fatal Pauline Parry assault here August 19, 1936. Mr. Jordan, who has been prominently identified with a large part of the outstanding criminal cases in this vicinity for a number of years, was engaged by James Parry, brother of the young industrial worker who was brutally struck over the head, left in a Fifth street churchyard in a critical condition, and who died in a hospital nearly three months later.

Another development in the case took place this week-end with the placing of Charles Carroll, who swore out the warrant for his brother's arrest, on $400 cash bond, "for his appearance as a material witness at the hearing or trial of his brother," according to Commonwealth's Attorney White.

The bond was required following a conference between Mr. White and Waynesboro Chief of Police R. L. Switzer.

Carroll has disposed of his property here, and told reporters today he is planning to leave Waynesboro "as soon as the case is settled." Miss Parry was a niece of Mrs. Carroll.

Financial and Business News and Comment

Higher Profits Are Reflected In Stock Rise

Corporate Reports Bring Hopes for Larger Dividends.

By Carlton A. Shively.

A Special Correspondent.

New York, July 26.—Slow but persistent improvement in stocks, an uncertain tone in farm prices, advance in general commodities and a return of weakness in Government bonds marked the summer solstice in the securities markets. No striking development took place to change the course of markets, which rather continued to be carried along by a large number of diverse favorable bits of news.

The industrial corporation reports for second quarter and six months earnings neared high tide in the week, and the disclosures were ahead of expectations of even the optimistic. The Post's compilation of more than a hundred firstclass corporations reveals net income of around 60 per cent higher than for the first half year and the second quarter of 1935. Such earnings, without any legal pressure for higher dividends, would mean a well sustained stock market and they easily explain the current strength.

Still another factor is the realization, buttressed by almost daily proof in the form of higher dividend payments, that companies in the main must distribute to stockholders a larger portion of their earnings than most of them have done in the past, to escape the penalty taxes on undistributed profits. With earnings improving and with dividends increasing, the markets are working into a strong position.

Good Autumn in Sight.

Not only is it being shown that earnings for the first half year improved, but volume of business done now is at a point for many companies that means any further gains in gross revenues will go more generously into net income. Some slack in third quarter of a seasonal nature must be expected in a number of industries, but so far the seasonal recession has been tardy. Particularly in steel the predicted slump has not taken place and this week the industry lifted its rate to around 70 per cent of capacity. Railroad freight car loadings are holding around 20 to 25 per cent above a year ago. Retail trade is little short of a boom in some lines and the reports of a new high tide of buyers in the wholesale centers promises good business this autumn.

It is difficult to say what the effect of the bonus is proving to be, but it looks as though trade would have been good without it. Meanwhile rains have lessened the drought danger, and while certain crops will be short, the harvest will be large enough, with the higher prices, to prevent any widespread hard times on the farms.

It would be fortunate for the country if it could enjoy as good an improvement in its foreign trade as it is having in domestic business. June exports, reported this week by the Department of Commerce, fell sharply, and with a slight rise in imports, the country had its fourth month of the year of an adverse trade balance. Cotton exports, for one large item, fell last month, while heavy imports of foodstuffs, thanks largely to the New Deal crop restriction policies, continued. For all that, with communism in Spain and general unrest in Europe, the dollar continues to attract capital from abroad.

Better Deal Wanted.

Much interest was shown in the financial district in the speech of acceptance of Gov. Landon of Kansas. The speech, while lacking perhaps the honeyed delivery of the New Deal leader, measured up in the main to the hopes of those who think a still newer deal would be a good thing for the country. Wall Street found in Gov. Landon a plain, commonsense man, one likely to attract those who are thoroughly fed up on the theatricalism and the overstuffed intellects of the present regime in the White House.

Business, finance and markets, beyond question, look upon the Presidential campaign as something more than the usual contest between humdrum political principles, of which the solution one way or the other will make no great difference. The colossal public debt, the drive against private business, the management ideas for economy and money and hundreds of other irritants inherent in the New Deal have developed a real fear complex among business men. Definite limits will be set to our business recovery unless that be removed.

Sugar Consumption Increases Abroad

New York, July 26.—Consumption of sugar in the 14 principal European countries during the first nine months of the current crop year, September, 1935, through May, 1936, totaled 5,647,547 long tons, raw sugar value, as compared with 5,530,536 tons consumed during the similar period last season, an increase of 117,011 tons, or approximately 2.1 per cent, according to European advices received by Lamborn & Co.

Harvester Gives Extra Week's Pay

Chicago, July 26 (AP).—The International Harvester Co. announces that extra compensation will be paid all employes in the United States and Canada who have worked for the company one year or more by October 31.

All employes who on that date have worked one year but less than two years will receive an extra week's pay. Employes having worked for two years or more will receive two week's pay.

Elections Cannot Halt Rise Of Business Tide, Babson Says

Fundamental Law of Supply and Demand, He Holds, Is Still Supreme in Establishing Long-Term Trends.

By Roger W. Babson.

Babson Park, Mass., July 26.—Commodity prices are more sensitive to the trend of business than any other factor. The possibility that prices may fall, causing inventory losses, postpones business plans; a favorable outlook for prices, on the other hand, hastens businessmen in placing orders. This simple statement applies all the way from big department stores and huge construction projects right down the line to backyard manufacturing and modest-home building. That is why everybody is vitally interested in commodity price trends.

As the situation now lines up it looks to me as though there are four definite price possibilities—two if Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected and two if Gov. Landon comes out on top. So far in discussing this matter, most every commentator has insisted that there are only two alternatives. If the writer is a Republican, he figures that Mr. Landon's election means prices will go up while Mr. Roosevelt's victory would put prices down. If he is a Democrat, the story is vice versa. As the campaign progresses, however, I have a strong feeling that four alternatives will shape up rather than simply two. Let me outline these briefly.

Inflation.

If Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected, there will be two factors to consider. The first will be the spending influence. This will keep inflation talk in the headlines and will make people higher-price-conscious. On the other hand, a great many people who do not believe that we can have inflation in this country do fear Government spending. They are afraid that the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt will mean an undermining of public confidence, poorer business, and consequently lower prices. Hence, there are two alternatives if the President is re-elected: first, higher prices from inflation scares; and second, lower prices from lack of confidence.

However, if Gov. Landon is swept into the White House there will be two other possibilities. Roughly 80 to 85 per cent of the business community are estimated to be hostile to the New Deal. A G.O.P. victory should mean a great renewal of confidence among these people and a stampede to buy and to build. At the same time we face the possibility of deflation in the event of Landon's winning. The focal point in the campaign is going to be Government spending. The natural corallary of a Republican victory would be public economy. Hence, Gov. Landon's election means either higher prices as a result of Republican confidence, or lower prices from the possibility of Republican deflation.

Election Possibilities.

Most people have it doped out that the result of the campaign will bring sharp price changes. They are going ahead with their plans or they are marking time according to their individual belief as to who will go into the White House and what the effect of the winning candidate's election will have on prices. Personally, I feel that it is anybody's guess what will happen to prices immediately after election. The two possibilities may even offset each other, regardless of who wins. In such a case there would be no shift. In any event, the long term trend of prices after the election will be influenced more by fundamental factors than by either candidate's victory.

Heading the list of these fundamental factors is the law of supply and demand. After centuries of trying to find a substitute, this old natural law still reigns supreme. We can have no more vivid illustration of the futility of trying to get around it than the story of our cereal markets since 1934. Two years ago our carry-over of wheat was practically equal to one whole year's supply. Since then three short crops have virtually wiped out this surplus. Prices have trebled and are still headed higher. The same situation is true in the case of many other farm products such as corn, oats, and cotton and allied commodities which move in sympathy with them. Radically reduced supplies of agricultural products killed the AAA farm program.

Copper's Recovery.

At the same time, stronger demand has done away with the necessity for certain industrial commodity agreements. During the depression, world copper producers tried desperately to control the output and price of their commodity. However, as the bottom fell out of business during 1931 and 1932, prices melted below the cost of production. With the sharp recovery since 1933—69 per cent according to the Babsonchart—increased demand has taken care of bothersome copper surpluses and trebled quotations. The 1936 political campaign can not outmode such an age-old economic force as the law of supply and demand any more than the AAA or copper proration could.

While the election will probably unsettle conditions from time to time, I am sure it can not now stop the inrushing tide of business. Readers know that I am bullish on the long-term outlook for business whoever is elected in November. In every recovery period, commodity prices have advanced sympathetically although they have moved faster in some cycles than in others. So many bad world situations have been cleaned up since 1933, that there are many more reasons to believe in price rises than in price declines. My guess is, therefore, that those who are today buying goods, building homes and expanding plants are making a wise move from a long-term standpoint.

We are all interested in commodity prices because we all have a big stake in them—both as a buyer and a seller. The worker may pay more for his meat, but he ultimately will receive more for his goods—that is, his labor. The farmer may get more for his corn but eventually he will have to pay more for his overalls. On the other hand, sharp price swings often bring maladjustments. We cannot have real prosperity unless we have a proper relationship between farm and industrial prices. We now seem to be approaching a fair balance between the two. However, drought at home and short crops abroad are boosting prices of food and other products. Too sharp a bulge in the cost of living now could darken an otherwise bright outlook.

N. Y. Bank Stocks At High for Year

New York, July 26.—New York City bank stocks advanced to a new high for the year during the closing day of the past week, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, the aggregate market value of 16 leading issues totaling $2,013,224,000. There was a slight recession from the high point at the close, however, the 16 issues ending the week with an aggregate market value of $2,006,644,000, compared with $1,901,255,000 at the close of the previous week, a net gain for the week of $105,389,000, or 5.54 per cent. The previous high, of $1,994,824,000, was registered on January 14.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market showed further improvement during the past week. The aggregate value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on July 24 totaled $658,844,000, compared with $644,342,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase of $14,502,000, or 2.52 per cent.

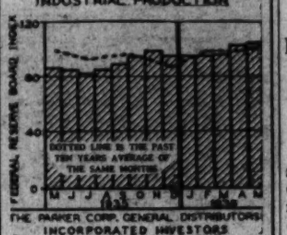
Nation Is Consuming Entire Production



Boston, Mass., July 26.—Industrial production is now close to 20 per cent greater than a year ago. In spite of increased production, stocks of manufactured goods on hand are just about equal to a year ago, while stocks of raw materials are 12 per cent less. This means that the entire production is being consumed.

Mercury Spurts To 92 in District

In a quick, late afternoon spurt, the Weather Bureau's official thermometer recorded a high of 92 yesterday, which, with a 46 per cent humidity, brought an uncomfortable Washington Sabbath. The top reading was 7 degrees over Saturday's high of 85.

Cloudy skies during the early afternoon hours were responsible for the soaring temperature so late in the day, the Weather Bureau said. Occasional thunderstorms were predicted for today.

The temperature for today is expected to remain about the same. The low for yesterday was 68 at 6 a. m.

Proposals

PROCUREMENT DIVISION, PUBLIC Buildings Branch, Washington, D. C., July 15, 1936.—Sealed proposals in duplicate will be publicly opened in this office at 10 a. m., AUGUST 6, 1936, for furnishing and installing the air conditioning system and miscellaneous changes, motion picture film vaults of the U. S. Archives Building, in Washington, D. C. Attention is directed to the special conditions of bidding set forth in the specification. Upon application, two sets of drawings and specifications will be supplied free to each general contractor interested in submitting a proposal. The above drawings and specifications must be returned to this office. Contractors requiring additional sets may obtain them by purchase from this office at a cost of $5 per set, which will not be returned. Checks offered as payment for drawings and specifications must be made payable to the order of the Treasurer, U. S. Drawings and specifications will not be furnished to contractors who have consistently failed to submit proposals. One set upon request, and when considered in the interests of the Government, will be furnished builders' exchanges, chambers of commerce or other organizations who will guarantee to make them available for any subcontractor or material firm interested, and to quantity surveyors, but this privilege will be withdrawn if the sets are not returned after they have accomplished their purpose. W. E. REYNOLDS—Assistant Director of Procurement, Public Buildings Branch. 23,28,27

1. Find the apartment that meets your requirement—in the section in which you want to live.

2. Note the key letters and the number at the end of the ad. For example: D-5.

3. Then find the letter of the alphabet (in this case, D) at the top of the map. This means the apartment is located somewhere between the D at the top and the D at the bottom of the map.

4. Then look for the numeral (in this case, 5) at either side of the map. Where the D and 5 meet is the vicinity in which the apartment is located.

Swedish Co-ops' Benefits Told Roosevelt Aids

$100,000,000 Annual Retail Business Set-up Outlined to Experts.

By the Associated Press.

Stockholm, July 26.—President Roosevelt's commission to study European co-operatives today virtually completed its study of Sweden's vast system of retail stores, factories and modern housing projects.

During its two-week stay, the commission studied in detail the Swedish movement, with its $100,000,000 annual retail business, lower prices and dividend payments to members.

Guided by sponsors of the Swedish system, the visitors were shown stores with modern showcases, gleaming floors and spacious windows.

Here, they were informed, the Swedish co-operative member may purchase food and merchandise at low prices and share in accruing profits—to which he is entitled in return for the small sum he invested with others to make possible the store. Nonmembers may shop at the store, but do not share profits.

A third of the 6,200,000 population—568,000 families—are listed as members of the 4,144 stores. More than 2,000,000 Swedish citizens buy their goods from the co-ops, the organizers estimated.

Industrial workers comprise the greatest number—27.7 per cent of the total membership. But, it was claimed, farmers and even a small share of the professional classes are taking advantage of the stores.

Trusts Being Probed.

Monopolies and trusts, the co-operative leaders told their visitors, are fast being routed. To prove it, they pointed out the ultramodern light bulb factory, equipped even to dining room and kitchen for employes.

Manufacturing bulbs at low cost, the co-op joined with Norway, Denmark and Finland groups to market the product. The result, they claimed, was the break-up of an international corner on light bulbs.

Manufacturing activities now yield a $45,000,000 income to the Swedish societies.

Carrying further the idea of mutual investment for a common aim, the co-operative movement embraces modern apartment projects with supervised day nurseries for the children, the newest laundry and kitchen aids, and beautifully landscaped gardens.

Furniture shops, the American visitors were told, provide furnishings for the apartments from the "tenants' furniture shop."

Private Interests Seek Aid.

Significant in development of the societies, started in the early years of the century as an improved model of the British co-operative system, the Swedish leaders contended that powerful industrialists and private merchanidising interests are now turning to their support.

Opposition still exists, they said, but comes chiefly from small private traders. At any rate, they insisted, the co-operative movement, firmly established, was a big factor in softening the depression and hastening Sweden's claimed prosperity for the present.

Completing their study here, the American commission was expected to leave this week for inspection of co-operatives in Finland, Czechoslovakia and France.

They made a preliminary survey in England earlier in the month, planning to return later for a more thorough examination.

Miners Claim Success.

Pinckneyville, Ill., July 26 (AP).—Seventy-five Pinckneyville coal miners, who leased a mine and are working it themselves as a means of staying off the relief rolls, tonight claimed at least a fair measure of success in their co-operative venture.

They are digging coal only two days a week because of the slack summer season, but they said they expected to speed operations as business picked up in the fall.

They have at least saved their jobs, they asserted, by leasing the mine—Briar Hill No. 5—when it was offered for sale recently after having been in receivership. With borrowed money and some contributions, they purchased mules, batteries and other equipment and started hoisting coal.

Polish-Reich Pact Reached on Danzig

Warsaw, Poland, July 26 (AP).—Poland and Germany have come to an understanding regarding Danzig, it was learned here tonight.

The texts of the notes exchanged, it was said, will not be made public until they are communicated to the League of Nations Council.

Germany is understood to have agreed to supply explanations which would tend to smooth over recent incidents in the free city.

Dr. Arthur Karl Greiser, president of the Nazi-controlled Danzig senate, recently told the League of Nations that Danzig wanted an end of League control. Later he put into effect decrees to restrict home opposition to the Danzig Nazi regime.

Both Germany and Poland are interested in Danzig, an important port north of Poland on the Baltic Sea. It was part of Germany until it was made a free city under League supervision after the World War.

24 Nazi Storm Troopers Reported Dead in Crash

Freudenstadt, Germany, July 26 (AP).—Twenty-four Nazi storm troopers were reported killed and more than a score badly injured when a motor lorry with a trailer attached plunged down an embankment near this Black Forest town today.

The lorry skidded over the edge of the road when it swerved to avoid a speeding motorcycle. The lorry and the trailer, in which a total of 65 men were riding, telescoped each other.

Postmaster Order Praised by League

By the Associated Press.

The League of Women Voters which this year makes the merit system its chief issue, yesterday commended President Roosevelt's executive order on first, second, and third class postmasters.

The League, which urged civil service for all postmasters before the platform committees of both party conventions, in a statement expressed itself as "greatly encouraged" by the executive order that civil service rules apply to first, second and third class postmasterships as fast as vacancie occur. The rules already apply to fourth-class.

"The President in this order, has gone as far as his power permits in removing postmasters from the patronage list," said the League statement. "His action, together with the declared policy of Gov. Landon to take the Postoffice Department out of politic, indicates that proponents of the merit system may expect the next Congress to pass appropraite legislation."

Dr. Townsend's Plan Is Called 'A Cruel Hoax'

Rep. Lucas Questions His Honesty in Organizing Old Age Clubs.

By the Associated Press.

Peoria, Ill., July 26.—Representative Scott W. Lucas (Democrat), Illinois, a member of the Congressional committee which investigated the Townsend old age pension plan, said today he questioned the honesty of Dr. Francis E. Townsend's purpose in organizing his pension clubs.

Describing the plan as "the most cruel hoax * * * ever perpetrated upon the American people," the legislator asserted:

"There was a time when I believed that Dr. Townsend was intellectually honest in promoting what we conceived to be the economic salvation of the American people under the Townsend plan. The evidence produced by the (Congressional) investigating committee has completely changed my viewpoint."

Called a "Curse."

Representative Lucas made the statement in an address before the Association for Pension for the Aged, Inc., which was not a Townsend group.

He summoned members of the association, churches, civic, social and fraternal groups to "drive the Townsend curse from America."

"The time has arrived in America when the other side of the Townsend plan must be told," the Congresman continued. "It is now time for public-spirited citizens to help relieve the aged and indigent of the Nation from the most cruel hoax which has ever been perpetrated upon the American people."

Cites Increase.

Representative Lucas said there would be an "obvious" increase in prices if the Townsend plan of $200-a-month pensions were adopted because "90 per cent of the population would be supplying approximately one-half of the national income to 10 per cent of the people."

He added:

"According to expert testimony, a 10-cent loaf of bread would cost nearer 50 cents. A pair of shoes now selling for $5 would sell for $15 under the Townsend plan."

In reference to the condition of the pension organization's finances, he said:

"A company of natoinally known accountants reported the Townsend books up to July 1, 1935, were in such a condition that no reputable concern could audit them."

Jury Will Study Strike Slaying; Troops Called

Textile Union Organizer Surrenders After Two Days in Alabama.

By the Associated Press.

Talladega, Ala., July 26.—State militia, called to quell rioting in the Samoset textile mills area, will patrol the city tomorrow when a special grand jury investigates the killing of a deputy sheriff and wounding of 18 other persons.

Chief Deputy John J. Bryant was slain during a sudden burst of shooting Wednesday night in a bloody climax to a labor dispute. Guardsmen have watched the mill area since the incident.

Homer Welch, organizer for the United Textile Workers, surrendered voluntarily in Birmingham Saturday and was placed in jail there. Nine other persons are held here on warrants charging murder. Welch disappeared after the shooting and was sought for two days on a murder warrant before he surrendered.

State and local authorities disagreed on who fired the first shot, when Bryant, accompanied by fellow officers and other persons, drove up to the union picket lines late Wednesday.

Picketing was stopped by guardsmen, for the time being.

Trouble at Samoset mills began two months ago when the plants closed down simultaneously with organization of a local unit of the United Textile Workers of America. The management gave lack of orders as the reason for ceasing operations. Workers' sources described the move as a lockout. Picketing was started about the plants.

Adjt. Gen. John C. Coleman said in Montgomery today, "National Guards will remain for two or three days yet, certainly until after the grand jury completes its investigation."

Arrest of Convict Asked 23 Years After Escape

Granite, Okla., July 26 (AP).—Deputy Warden L. V. Warlick, of the State reformatory, said today he had sent a telegram asking Cleveland, Ohio, police to arrest Carl Chilton, 41, who escaped from the institution 23 years ago and was found living in Cleveland as a respected citizen.

He said he had had no reply from Ohio officers, who declined earlier to hold Chilton on the old case and asked that the charges be dropped.

Now the father of two children, who do not know of the charges, Chilton was serving two years for bank burglary when as a youth of 18 he escaped in 1913.

SEC Will Open Inquiry Today In Trust Firms

First to Be Considered Will Be Equity Corporation of New York.

By the Associated Press.

The Securities and Exchange Commission will launch public hearings today in a broad investigation of investment trusts and investment companies.

Acting under Congressional direction, the commission already has conducted field studies and received returns to questionnaires in its inquiry into investment policies, relationships and activities of the trusts and companies.

The commission said in a statement that among other matters information would be sought at the hearings on "the control and influence exercised by investment trusts over companies in which the trusts are interested" and the influence exerted upon policies of trusts by interests affiliated with management of the trusts.

Contents of trusts' portfolios, the volume of securities transactions and financial statements also will be examined.

The hearings will get under way with a study of some of the predecessor companies of the Equity Corporation of New York.

Recently, the commission has held private conferences with representatives of various trusts and companies to discuss their replies to questionnaires, which were sent out last January.

The hearings, expected to continue for several weeks, will be in charge of Commissioner Robert E. Healy. William Swatt, a Tennessee attorney who served for a time with the NRA, will assist in taking testimony.

125 Residences Erected in Hills Village in Year

Post Permanesque Model House Now Is Being Shown There.

Visitors to The Washington Post model home in Permanesque Homes Village, Inc., at Beverly Hills, Alexandria, Va., are surprised at the rapid growth of this beautiful development where more than 125 houses have been built within a year.

This attractive community and the model home featuring it may be reached by driving over Arlington Memorial Bridge to Arlington Memorial, then taking the road to the left and continuing on past the Little Tea House on South Arlington Ridge road, or Mount Vernon avenue, along the ridge to Russell road, then turning right to Beverly Hills.

The latest Post model home is of brick construction and contains three bedrooms and two baths. It is located in a woodland setting and only 12 minutes drive from the center of Washington.

The display house is of the most modern design and construction and has an artistically planned studio living room with beamed ceiling, and fireplace with natural stone hearth. There are also a bright dining room and modern kitchen. The dwelling is erected on a wide lot.

14 Killed by Bolt.

Istanbul, July 26 (AP).—Lightning killed 14 persons and injured 20 today during a violent 12-hour hail storm in the Istanbul and Ankara areas. Flood waters inundated many sections. House collapsed, burying their occupants. Crop damage was severe.
